It is not wise to sit on the safety valve. Wednesday New York's "patriots" had their parade, and the "Reds," or radicals, had theirs, with no interference by the police.

Brisbane

There had been no violence when this was written.

Let men talk and print, and they will be contented. Forbid them to talk and they'll do something worse.

Very pathetic in New York's radical parade were the young children, some only five or six years old, parading in dusty streets, under a hot sun.

EXPECT NEWS OF ELECTION COMING WEEK

Wise Ones Expect Date Soon After Liberal Caucus

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, May 3—With a caucus of the Liberal members scheduled for the first of the week, conjecture here runs high on the possibility of a definite pronouncement being made regarding an election this summer. On all sides is heard the opinion that the budget delivered Thursday by Hon. C. A. Dunning, minister of finance was an "election budget". While it is conceded that the government, in drafting the budget had in mind the possibility of an election campaign it is by no means certain that the government's mind has been made up on the question of appealing to the country this year.

That this veil of uncertainty may be lifted at next week's party caucus is deemed a possibility by political observers. Certain it is that the attitude of many private followers of the government has changed since the budget was delivered. Several of the Saskatchewan members, particularly, did not relish an appeal this year. Many of them, however, since the budget have been noticed to look upon an election this year with more relish and enthusiasm. It may be this change of front on the part of the private members will be the deciding factor in the decision.

Conservative members, also seem to favor an election this year, particularly after Hon. R. B. Bennett, their leader, practically challenged the administration to appeal to the country on its fiscal policy before the Empire economic conference to be held in London late in September. This was delivered immediately after the close of the budget Thursday.

The debate on the budget will begin on either Monday or Tuesday. In some quarters it is believed the debate will be short and that dissolution will be brought about in perhaps a month.

200 Fishermen Drowned As Typhoon Hits Fleet

Damage Totals Go High

Japanese Fleet of 2,000 Boats Were After Herring

Associated Press Cable

TOKYO, May 3—Death toll in the typhoon which swept the southern portion of Saghwalien Island and the northern coast of Hokkaido reached nearly 200 today in reports to Rengo.

Messages said that the bodies of 94 victims had been recovered and that 100 others were missing.

2,000 Boats Out

The storm descended from Odomari Bay, at the southern end of Saghwalien, just after 10,000 fishermen had been attracted out to sea by the appearance of great schools of herring. About 2,000 fishing boats were out when the typhoon struck.

Property damage has been estimated at $2,500,000.

'We Are Seven' Evidently Was Their War Cry

By GEORGE HAMBLETON

LONDON, May 3.—Seven little boys were charged in Liverpool children's court today with stealing from seven motor-trucks seven bottles of iodine, seven bottles of hair-restorer, seven bottles of eye-wash, seven pairs of scissors, seven tins of vaseline, seven rolls of adhesive tape and seven times seven bandages. Six were discharged by the court; one was put on probation, but still they were seven.

The seven boys stole seven first aid kits from seven motor trucks.

RETURNED MEN OF AUSTRALIA MUCH ANGERED

Resent Attitude of Labor Government on Employment

Canadian Press Cable

MELBOURNE, Australia, May 2—Nothing in recent years has so agitated political circles and public opinion in the commonwealth generally as the decision of the Labor government of Premier James Scullin to abolish the preference formerly accorded to returned soldiers and sailors in securing work on government contracts unless the veterans are members of trade unions.

The situation Friday gave rise to the introducing of an unprecedented motion on the part of the opposition in the federal house of representatives. The motion asked adjournment of both houses of parliament in protest against the government's attitude. The Labor members succeeded in talking the motion out but it is admitted that the danger to the government is not yet passed.

Biggest Shingle Maker Dies In B.C.

Canadian Press

VANCOUVER, B.C., May 3—W. Foster Huntting, prominent in the lumber and shingle industry of British Columbia, died suddenly at his home here Friday morning from a heart attack. Mr. Huntting was the senior member of the firm of Huntting-Merritt Lumber Co., Ltd., which built one of the largest shingle mills in the British Empire at Marpole, a Vancouver suburb.

Arrest of "Holy Man" Awaited by all India

Bombay Expected To Be Downfall Of Salt Crusade

Mahatma Gandhi Makes Known Conditions Of Resistance Campaign

Associated Press Cable

BOMBAY, India, May 3—While Mahatma Gandhi was making known the conditions under which he will agree to lead his civil resistance campaign into the city of Bombay, all India awaited tensely the arrest of "the holy man" which usually well informed persons continued to insist must occur before another 24 hours have elapsed.

Seizure of the Mahatma upon government orders had been predicted for Friday. When it failed to materialize there were many who believed it must occur as soon as entry into Bombay is made.

Conditions which the venerable leader announced that he would exact from his followers as the price for continuing into the city were printed Friday by the "Bombay Congress Bulletin" an unregistered sheet published daily by the Bombay provincial congress committee. The conditions comprise: observance of complete discipline; a permanent pledge to wear handspun khaddar; the actual spinning with "takli," a miniature spinning wheel for one hour daily.

Wants 100,000 Men

"If Bombay produces 100,000 such men," the manifesto of Mahatma Gandhi concludes, "I should lead them without the slightest hesitation."

Commenting upon this pronouncement, the Congress Bulletin, under the heading, "the call of Mother India" says: "The number of Satyagarahis registered up to today at the Bombay provincial congress committee quarters is 2,443. The Mahatma wants 100,000."

Electrical Storm Cripples Ontario

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Ont., May 3.—Ontario communication systems suffered heavily again Friday as a result of continued electrical storms. Thursday night practically every part of the province benefited from warm rains that accompanied heavy thunderstorms, but telegraph, telephone, and hydro systems were disrupted.

Friday telegraph and telephone communication systems were again hit.

Italy's Navy Plans Causing Uneasiness

Associated Press

PARIS, May 3—Analysis of the Italian naval construction program for 1930 has resulted in some uneasiness in French official circles.

Italian plans call for exactly the same tonnage as the French, 43,000 for this year. The chief item is 22 submarines.

One interpretation of the new Italian program is that Mussolini aims to establish the principle of parity with France by actual facts before opening negotiations.

31 Tons of Water Used To Ripen Bushel Wheat

Some Interesting Facts Just Announced By Ottawa Department of Agriculture As To Moisture

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

OTTAWA, May 31.—How many people realize that in the production of one bushel of wheat Nature uses over thirty-one tons of water?

This is but one of the very interesting facts disclosed in studies of soil moisture and crop production by experts of the Dominion department of agriculture.

Wheat grown on summer fallow requires 447 lbs. of water for every pound of crop, (plant and grain) wheat planted after wheat takes 675 units of water for every unit of crop. Oats planted after wheat takes 670 units of water for every unit of crop, corn planted after wheat takes 553 units, sunflowers following wheat takes 685 units, brome hay the first year crop takes 1,163 units, and sweet clover following wheat takes 956 units.

To make these figures particularly interesting one has but to take a pencil and a piece of paper and apply the units on any basis desired; with brome hay, for instance, it takes 1,163 tons of water to produce one ton of hay.

It is not the amount of rainfall which determines soil moisture and crop yields in any part of Canada, but the amount of moisture which seeps into and is retained by the soil.

Careful observation of tests at the Dominion Experimental Stations and farms shows that summer fallow is one of the best means of conserving and developing soil moisture. These tests also show that weeds are the greatest menace to crops through the extent to which they use up the moisture reserved in soils. The elimination of weeds is sufficient in itself in most dry areas to ensure a good crop, while their presence in any crop in any part of Canada is a handicap to profitable farming.

Heiress Elopes Despite Mother's Protests

"He's bought a new roadster.... it was spring.... and there you are." That's how a friend explained the reported elopement of Preston Sturges, young playwright, with Eleanor Post Hutton, above, right, at New York. The pretty debutante was said to have been married despite the objections of her mother, Mrs. Edward F. Hutton, prominent society woman, shown with her here. Sturges is the author of the current Broadway play success, "Strictly Dishonorable." The bride, 20, was one of eight American women who was presented to King George and Queen Mary of England in 1928.

TODAY'S ODDEST NEWS

TATTOOING OF A SHREW LANDS GERMAN IN COURT

MOELLN, Germany, May 3.—A. Sybold married a woman much younger and stronger than he. She developed a shrewish temper and a habit of beating him unmercifully when he talked back.

One night, with his eyes still discolored and swollen from the last beating, he stealthily bound his sleeping spouse to her bed, gagged her and then tattooed upon her body weird designs calculated to warn possible future victims.

When he was haled into court later his story won sympathetic words from the judge. The latter pointed out, however, the danger of encouraging widespread tattooing of shrews and gave Sybold his choice of a $250 fine or three months in jail.

1,132 BEATINGS MOVE WIFE TO GET DIVORCE

CHICAGO, May 3.—Mrs. Delia V. Toomey, 35, today obtained a divorce from Lawrence Toomey, ward superintendent of streets and alleys. She told Judge Joseph Sabath of the superior court that he had beaten her 1,132 times since their marriage, July 23, 1908. Mrs. Toomey was fourteen when she was married.

She marked down every beating, she said. The decree was granted and Toomey ordered to pay $20 a week.

DOUMERGUE'S PALACE WIRED FOR A TALKIE

PARIS, May 3.—President Gaston Doumergue of France has yet to see and hear a talkie, but the Elysee Palace is being wired for the showing of a French one.

There is nothing to prevent the President from going to the movies, but because attendance might entail a certain ceremony he rarely goes. Besides, he might find it embarrassing to explain why the Chief of State went to see an American film. The President sends for the movies when he hears of something particularly good.

Confession Will Release Two Men

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3—Release from Portsmouth penitentiary of Henry Lacasse and Eugene Fontaine is again apparently just around the corner. Eugene Barnabe and Duncan Laroque, two other young men of Ottawa, recently confessed to police that they committed the hold-up for which the other men were sentenced.

Lacasse and Fontaine will probably be released when Barnabe and Larocque are sentenced, May 9.

RUSE OF GIRL TO HER LOVER PROVES FATAL

Broken-hearted Swain Wounds Her—Kills Self

Associated Press

CHICAGO, May 3—Tragedy of love ended last night for Arthur Brown and Sally Cuta in the rose garden of Humboldt Park.

Brown is dead by his own hand. Sally is near death from a bullet fired by Brown before he turned the pistol on himself.

They had met in the rose garden to say goodbye. Sally is only 17—too young, her mother said, to think of marriage. Brown, five years older refused to accept the situation. The girl, bowing to her mother's wishes, sought to make the break final by telling Brown that the reason for breaking the engagement was another man.

Other people, passing the rose garden, heard Brown say:

"If I can't have you, no one can."

Then the sound of shots.

Villagers Fight Raging Flames In Thick Smoke

Provincial Police, Rushed From Barrhead Speeding to Aid of Freedom, 20 Miles West of Westlock

After destroying the Southworth farm and granary, together with the grain, and also some other buildings on Friday, a bush fire which had been raging for some days in the vicinity was affected by a sudden change of wind and began to seriously threaten the village of Freedom, some 20 miles west of Westlock.

The alarm was sent out and the villagers and residents dashed to the protection of their community centre, which consists of a store, post office and school-house, with some other buildings.

HEAVY SMOKE HAMPERS WORKERS.

Everything available for the task was hurriedly pressed into service, and the fight was on.

Tractors and equipment banged into top gear, and started to plow wide fire guards, while the fire-fighting gang devoted its efforts to beating back the flames, the work being impeded by a heavy pall of smoke which hung over everything.

A hurry-up call was sent to the provincial police for help, and this was answered by the detachment from Barrhead speeding to the rescue.

Under their experienced guidance the valiant efforts of the residents proved successful, and the fire was finally kept within bounds and the little community saved with no more loss than stated above.

WOODS MAKES WARM FRIENDS FOR CANADA

Calgary Editor Given High Support in Washington

By KEN CLARK
Canadian Press Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D.C., May 3—Closer co-operation between the Canadian Chamber of Commerce and the Chamber of Commerce of the United States was among the subjects discussed by the respective presidents of each organization at a conference Friday afternoon.

Representing Canada were J. H. Woods, of Calgary, president, and W. L. Clarke, of Montreal, secretary of the Canadian chamber.

The address made by Mr. Woods before the chamber Thursday, received considerable attention in the press Friday and was the subject of favorable comment by members of the chamber.

The opinion was unofficially expressed that with tariff legislation in its final stages in congress the references made by Mr. Woods on this could not be expected to have immediate effect despite the fact that members of the chamber, judging from the applause, realized the justice of the sentiments he expressed. It was felt that a profound impression which would be of considerable value in the future had been created by Mr. Woods' address.

Mr. Woods left for New York Friday night.

Pas Baby Born With Full Set Of Upper Teeth

Canadian Press

THE PAS, Man., May 3—They are tough babies that are born in the friendly north. A few days ago the stork left an Indian infant in a private nursing home in The Pas with a full set of upper teeth, including the double molars. The youngster, just a few days old now, is busy cutting a lower set, and not complaining about it, according to the nurses.

His mother, just 17 years old, is the wife of one of the husky braves on the Cree reserve, near the Pas. Just before the arrival of the baby, a relative of his was born on the reserve with six fingers on each hand.

Charles H. Leahman Is Dead, Winnipeg

Canadian Press

WINNIPEG, Man., May 3.—Charles H. Leahman, former president of the Winnipeg Grain Exchange, died suddenly last night as he was motoring. A companion with whom he was driving placed the body in a reclining position when Leahman slumped over the wheel. But life was pronounced extinct when a nearby medical office was reached.

MAY ABOLISH DEPARTMENT OF INTERIOR

Premier Mackenzie King Forecasts Reorganization Of Ministries

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—Reorganization of ministries in the Dominion government was forecasted in the House of Commons Friday by Premier W. L. Mackenzie King. The department of interior, the Prime minister announced, would be abolished after the return of natural resources to the four western provinces.

All Dominion government western services are to be placed with immigration under one ministerial head. This is the intention of the government, it was learned Friday night, following the official announcement in the house of commons earlier in the day of the proposed reorganization of ministries. Hon. Charles Stewart, minister of interior and acting minister of immigration, will head the new department. National parks, geodetic surveys and Indian affairs will come under the new minister.

Hon. Vincent Massey Will Be Transferred

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—It is the intention of the government to appoint Hon. Vincent Massey as Canadian high commissioner at London. An announcement to this effect was made Friday night by Premier Mackenzie King. Mr. Massey will remain at Washington, where he is now Canadian minister plenipotentiary, until the summer vacation, probably July. He will go to London about September.

Negligence to Prepare For Fire Crisis Responsible For Ohio Horro

PROBE REPORT MADE PUBLIC AT COLUMBUS

Temporary Wiring in Cell Block Was Dangerous

Associated Press

COLUMBUS, Ohio, May 3.—Governor Myers Cooper's special commission which investigated the tragic Ohio penitentiary fire reported to the executive late Friday that it had reached four findings in its investigation.

They were:

First—That the temporary wiring in the ill-fated cell blocks was "improper and dangerous."

Second—That a dangerous and hazardous temporary condition existed in that cell block, construction work near where the firse started was not properly protected and thus the lives of 800 convicts were not safeguarded.

Third—That there was negligence in failure to have an organized plan of meeting the emergency of fire and in releasing the convicts from their cells.

Fourth—Failure to designate someone after the emergency arose to take command of the situation directly contributed to the loss of life.

Wetaskiwin Moose Lodge Elects New Slate Of Officers

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WETASKIWIN, May 3.—At a meeting of Wetaskiwin Lodge No. 1559, Loyal Order of Moose, held on Thursday evening last, the following officers were installed for 1930: The retiring Dictator, M. R. Hardy, who has held that position for the past year, became Junior Past Dictator, while J. Olstad is the new Dictator. The other officers are: Vice-Dictator, C. S. Conrad; prelate, E. H. L. Thomas; secretary, R. E. Schmitz; treasurer, W. Chapman; sergeant-at-arms, W. O. Mountain; inner guard, Geo. Van Deusen; outer guard, B. Bidinger. Past Dictator V. Scott was the installing officer, and was assisted by the women's degree team at the installation.

The membership of the Golf club for the year is being largely signed and the prospects are that within a week there will be a larger number on the list than in any previous year. The ladies held a meeting last week and appointed the following committees: Match committee, Mrs. George Wiseman, convener; house committee, Mrs. J. E. Burkholder, convener; entertainment committee, Mrs. Knox, convener.

It is expected that the opening club match of the season will be held during the week-end of Saturday, May 24. Teams will be selected by the president and vice-president, and competitions among the juniors are also to be arranged. The greens committee expect to have fresh sand on the greens within the next few days, and the flagpoles and flags replaced where necessary. The house committee intends making some improvements upon the internal arrangements of the house in the near future.

There passed away in the Wetaskiwin hospital on Monday, Joseph Matejka, of the Bittern Lake district, at the age of 65 years. He was born in Bohemia, and had been a resident of the Bittern Lake district for some time. The funeral service was held in the Roman Catholic church on Wednesday morning, and interment took place in the R.C. cemetery.

The funeral of Nellie Trout, beloved wife of Austin Trout, who passed away at her home at Clairmont, took place on Thursday, services being conducted by Rev. C. E. A. Pocock in St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. A large number of friends of the deceased assembled to pay their last tribute of respect, among them being many members of Victory Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star. The pallbearers were Messrs. H. R. French, W. Vanalstine, H. G. Angus, Herb. Chandler, R. D. Angus, and Walter Groves. The floral tributes were numerous and beautiful. The interment took place in the Wetaskiwin cemetery.

LONDON, May 3.—It will be a sorry day for Britain and the British commonwealth if politics become the sport of newspaper proprietors," writes the Rt. Hon. Philip Snowden, chancellor of the Exchequer, to J. W. Banfield, Labor candidate in the West Fulham by-election, in commending Mr. Banfield for opposing the policy of Empire Free Trade.

"You do well to keep opposition to this policy in the forefront of your program," says Mr. Snowden. "It was raised at the dictation of newspaper magnates, and it will be a sorry day for Britain and the British commonwealth if politics become the sport of newspaper proprietors and parties have to march at their bidding. That is the position of Mr. Baldwin is in today, and it is for the voters of West Fulham to say whether they will accept the degradation of such position in a democratic country."

Sylvan Citizens To Recommend Buying Camp Ground Site

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

SYLVAN LAKE, Alta., May 3.—Sylvan Lake citizens held a very largely attended meeting Wednesday night at the Alexander pavilion and after a couple of hours' discussion, by standing vote, decided to recommend to the village council that they purchase from A. Loiselle 210 acres of land at the extreme west end of the village for a proposed camp site, golf course and recreation grounds. The committee of investigation, headed by P. L. Appleton, recommended also that the village lease the property for operation to some private company.

The chairman of the meeting, Mr. Appleton, read a letter to the audience signed by about 25 residents of Calgary who own property here, in hearty support of the scheme.

Only actual property owners took part in the voting, which resulted 36 for and 8 against the proposition. Cost of the property is $6,000, with payments spread over a period of ten years.

The meeting was unanimous in pressing Mrs. Fitzsimon to reconsider but she definitely declined.

Edmonton Fruit Seen In Market Saturday Morning

That Edmonton is located in the midst of the fruit-growing belt might well be imagined by the appearance of the Edmonton city market on Saturday morning.

Trees and shrubs were everywhere, not merely the hardy native specimens, but plum, crab apple, gooseberry, raspberry, strawberry, rhododendrons, everything to delight the heart of the amateur gardening enthusiast, and taking Edmonton a long way ahead of the time and conditions embodied in a story recently related by Colonel F. C. Jamieson. The Colonel related to a gathering how some time ago he had the opportunity to look up some of the Canadian archives and read the agreement when the Northwest territories were taken into Confederation at the time of Sir George Cartier. There was a preamble to the document which said—"Seeing that the fertile belt extends to north bank of the Saskatchewan river."

Fathers of confederation should have a look round Edmonton market on a Saturday morning, and their early ideas of the extent of the fertile belt would have a shock, when they view the masses of beautiful blooms and wonderful vegetables that the district now produces.

Saturday's were charming yellow iris, and sweet scented heliotrope, with masses of yellow marigolds and other cut blooms, sweet peas and snapdragon.

Boxes of all kinds of bedding plants were available, and a heavy supply of eggs and poultry.

Start Construction Of Warehouse Soon

Construction of a new warehouse for the Oliver (Hartt-Parr) Plow company will commence the latter part of this month, it was intimated in a letter received by Mayor J. M. Douglas Saturday from J. P. Gregg, official of the company. It is expected that the new building will involve an expenditure in the neighborhood of $150,000 according to Mayor Douglas.

The building will be located at 104 avenue and 121 street, and the plans show an attractive design. Plans and specifications will be completed by May 9, it is expected, and Edmonton contractors will be invited to tender for the job. It is planned to have the tenders close by May 20 or 21 in order to make an early start on the building.

News And Notes Of Aviation

"We are being snowed under with letters from air mail fans," said Postmaster McKenzie on Saturday morning.

"Some bright brain in the United States," he continued, "started a story in the papers or magazines to the effect that there is to be a special air mail flight to Herschel Island on May 6th.

"In consequence we have been inundated with collectors' letters to be sent through the air for the purpose of securing the special cachets, which the story said would be used."

Postmaster McKenzie was busily engaged in packing for return large parcels of these letters and remarked that he expected many more on Monday.

SALARIES FOR POST OFFICE CAUSE DEBATE

During Talk Edmonton Wages to Laborers is Mentioned

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, May 3.—Post office estimates came under discussion for the first time this session in the House of Commons Friday. In committee of supply an item of $18,632,694 covering salaries and allowances was first discussed.

The question of an increase in salary for postal workers was raised by J. S. Woodsworth (Lab., Winnipeg North Centre). Mr. Woodsworth enquired if any steps had been taken last session by the Postmaster General in the way of obtaining increases for these workers.

Hon. P. J. Veniot, Postmaster General, replied that since last session he had asked the commission to reconsider its decision with a view to increasing these salaries; but the commission had answered in the negative.

A. A. Heaps (Lab. Winnipeg North) pressed for the appointment of a commission to enquire into the question of salary increases for these workers as had been done in respect to professional and technical officers.

Some interchanges ensued between Mr. Veniot and Mr. Heaps, who claimed that the government should set an example in the payment of wages. In the city of Edmonton, laborers were paid 60 cents an hour, while in Winnipeg they got 57 cents an hour. This contrasted with the $85 a month which the government paid its postal employes, he said.

Mr. Veniot observed that the $1,080 wage rate for postal employes prevailed during their first year of service only. The wages increased at the rate of $120 per annum until the maximum was reached in the firth year.

ALBERTA HAS 14 PER CENT. WORLD'S COAL

Howard Stutchbury, Trade Commissioner, Speaks At Minburn

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

MINBURN, May 3.—Speaking to the members of the Women's Institute at Minburn on the subject of "Selling Alberta to Ourselves," Howard Stutchbury, Alberta Trade Commissioner, said that Alberta had 14 per cent of the world's coal. Annually the province contributed 66 per cent of the petroleum products of the Dominion, and this figure will soon be raised to 80 per cent. Of Canadian natural gas production Alberta has 63 per cent, and was wasting 200,000,000 feet per day, which might be utilized in the manufacture of a hundred or so various by-products.

The province contained 15,000 square miles of bituminous sands, at least 50 feet thick, and in some places greatly exceeding that measurement. It was contended that in the tar sands the province had the greatest potential oil field in the world. At ten gallons per ton, it is estimated that the sands will yield 3,000,000,000,000 gallons of oil.

Much Timber

There are also in Alberta 60,000 square miles of merchantable timber, 2000 square miles of lakes, teeming with fine fish, more than a million horse power of convertible water. Salt, ceramic and other clays, ochre, bitumen, and minerals galore are among Alberta's resources.

Contending that if Alberta manufactures were to thrive they must be supported, Mr. Stutchbury said that Alberta produced 17,600,000 pounds of beet sugar, and the province consumed 54,000,000 pounds of sugar. If sugar-buying was confined to the Alberta product, the province could employ 4,000 beet growers, 50,000 acres of land which the crop will leave clean, will produce fodder for an immense number of cattle, besides encouraging a number of subsidiary industries.

Another thing was that if the province wanted milk plants, cheese factories, butter production, pea canneries, packing plants, the people must be prepared to keep the factory men supplied with an adequate supply of raw material.

There were received many inquiries from manufacturers who were ready to establish factories if only they could be guaranteed a supply of raw materials and a market. There might have been a woolen mill in Alberta for a long time if the knitting industry was developed to take care of the product.

ROAD RECEIPTS GROW

In 1919, with a registration of 7,566,466 vehicles, the average automobile receipts for highway improvement were $8.68 a car. Ten years later, with a registration in excess of 24,000,000 vehicles, the average income per car was $25.63.

EDMONTON FLIERS MAKE GOOD

Congratulations are in order to Capt. “Wop” May, on having been awarded the McKee trophy, which is annually presented to the flier who has during the year rendered the most outstanding service in the development of aviation in Canada. Last year the award went to his fellow-townsman, Lieut. “Punch” Dickins.

Its situation made Edmonton the base for air operations throughout northern Alberta and the great Mackenzie basin. The honors which have come to these two fliers is official recognition that Edmonton has the men to meet this opportunity, and that it is being met in a way to bring distinction to the airmen and the community and benefit to the flying service of the country.

NO BONUS REQUIRED?

Information given out in parliament shows that as yet the Government has paid nothing to the railways by way of a bonus for hauling Alberta coal to Ontario under the three year experimental rate. As this is the third year of the test, the railways were long ago entitled to whatever may be due them on the shipments of the first two years.

Their failure to collect invites a hope that the railways have found in experience that they can haul the coal without loss for the amount of the seasonal rate, and are thus not entitled to any of the bonus money. The hope may be illusive, but it is difficult to suppose the railways would not have been sending in their bills if there was anything coming to them.

MORE MARKETS NEEDED

The duty which Congress proposes to impose upon hides and leather entering the United States will affect alike the Canadian farmer and tanner. These commodities have hitherto entered the United States duty-free. Last year Canada exported to that country hides to the value of $7,766,590, and leather to the value of $5,634,116; a total of more than $13,000,000.

To the extent to which the new duties are effective, they will necessarily tend to depress the price the Canadian farmer can get for beef cattle, and to put the Canadian tanneries out of business. The remedy, of course, is to find alternative markets elsewhere for hides and leather. The United States is not the only country in which boots are worn, nor into which the materials for them have to be imported.

A NEW TARIFF POLICY

The Robb financial policy came to an end with Mr. Dunning's announcement of the changes he proposed to make in the tariff. Whatever the effect of these, they are numerous enough to constitute a new departure in the direction of the country's fiscal affairs.

A tariff revision which affects hundreds of articles of commerce, raising or lowering the rates charged under general, intermediate and British preferential classifications, and imposing countervailing duties upon a long list of commodities, is so sweeping as to amount to a new, and in some respects quite different, tariff policy.

Time will be required before the bearing of the new tariff upon production, trade, living conditions, and the national revenue can be gauged with any measure of accuracy. The public will quite naturally expect that light will be thrown upon all these aspects of the question during the debate in parliament, and in the meantime may be inclined to withhold judgment upon so comprehensive an overhaul of the customs schedules.

CASUALTIES OF THE WEEK

Senator Bostock was not well known outside British Columbia, where he had long resided and was very highly esteemed, but his passing means the disappearance of a western member of the Upper Chamber who never missed an opportunity to promote the interests of the western provinces.

Mr. Eugene Lafleur was one of the ablest lawyers Canada has produced. For two decades his name has been familiar to newspaper readers in all parts of the Dominion, largely on account of his appearances before the Privy Council, sometimes on cases of outstanding public importance.

In the death of Mr. Jaffray, the Provincial Government loses a faithful and efficient employee of long standing, Edmonton a citizen of the finest type, and the provincial library a director whose heart was in his work and whose engaging manner made friends of all those who had occasion to pay a visit there.

Mr. W. J. Carter had been a resident of Edmonton for many years, and was widely known and highly respected. He was a western pioneer of the pre-rebellion days, and a few years ago contributed to the Bulletin a series of most interesting articles in which he related his experiences in those exciting times.

The Dog Problem

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Because a dog may run away
Because a dog may die,
Because it tears a rug in play
Are not good reasons why
A little girl should lonely be
And sob herself to sleep,
And wonder every day why she Can't have a dog to keep.

Oh, we have tried it o'er and o'er,
The first cute puppy died
And Janet, for a week or more,
Was sad and teary-eyed.
Another dog tore up our shoes,
A third one ran away,
But are these reasons to refuse
The dog she wants today?

A dog is such a dreadful care,
More so, if finely bred.
You can't go wandering anywhere
Unless you know he's fed,
And always there is bitter woe
When dogs are killed or stray,
But still in spite of this I know
She wants a dog today.

And so once more we've talked it out
With reasons con and pro;
The care and grief they bring about
Too well we grownups know.
But still, despite the hurt and ache
And ruin dogs have wrought,
Today for little Janet's sake

Business Power

By GLENN FRANK

Lately I have taken been taken to task by editorial writers throughout the United States for an essay appearing in this column in which I suggested that, perhaps without realizing it, Bolshevism and Big Business are moving toward the same objectives but from different angles and along different routes.

Glenn Frank

Both move in the direction of freeing enterprise from the dead hand of mere ownership and putting its management into the hands of men who may take a professional interest in superior management.

Both seek to broaden the base of ownership, one through seizure, the other through stock selling, and so on and so on.

This essay has been greeted cynically by a good many editors throughout the country.

Today I should like to quote a statement from Owen D. Young which illustrates my contention that the statesmanship of industry is likely to bring a new and better economic order.

“I hope the day may come,” said Mr. Young at the dedication of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration, “when these great business organizations will truly belong to the men who are giving their lives and their efforts to them, I care not in what capacity. Then they will use capital truly as a tool and they will be all interested in working it to the highest economic advantage. Then an idle machine will mean to every man in the plant who sees it an unproductive charge against himself. Then every piece of material not in motion will mean to the man who sees it an unproductive charge against himself. Then we shall have zest in labor, provided the leadership is competent and the division fair. Then we shall dispose, once and for all, of the charge that in industry organizations are autocratic and not democratic. Then we shall have all the opportunities for a cultural wage which the business can provide. Then, in a word, men will be as free in cooperative undertakings and subject only to the same limitations and chances as men in individual businesses. Then we shall have no hired men.”

No one would think of calling Mr. Young a dangerous Red, and yet, on the soundest of sound business grounds, he is here suggesting that far-visioned capitalism may be approaching an era in which those who labor in industry will hire capital instead of capital hiring them.

Telegraphic, from Ottawa—

Charlton's motion that the Jesuits' Estates Act should have been referred to the Supreme Court of Canada was defeated.

Blake's motion that provincial legislation be referred to the Supreme Court to test its constitutionality before disallowance was carried unanimously.

Notice has been given of a resolution granting the Calgary and Edmonton railway company $80,000 a year for twenty years, for the carriage of men, supplies and mails, the payments to commence on completion of the line.

Daly moved that banks be allowed to lend money to farmers on chattel mortgage security. This was defeated. Watson moved that banks be allowed money to farmers on real estate security. This was also lost.

The Northwest bill has passed the senate, in amended form. The name is changed to the “Western Territories” of Canada. Power is given the assembly after the next general elections to legislate on the liquor question and to expend all moneys except those reserved by federal instructions, for the routine work of the assembly. Judges are empowered to grant alimony to wives entitled thereto by the laws of England. An attempt was made to expunge the clause giving the assembly power to legislate on the language question, but it failed.

THIRTY YEARS AGO

The Strathcona tennis club reorganized on Monday evening. Mr John H. Wilson was elected president. Mr. W. C. Richardson secretary-treasurer, and the following compose the committee of management: Messrs. S. H. D. Benson, J. I. McMillan, E. Hamilton, J. R. Boyle, H. Wilson.

A committee of Edmonton ladies are collecting money for the Ottawa relief fund, and a considerable amount has been already subscribed.

Pro-Boer sympathy is supposed to have been the motive of the men who attempted to dynamite the Welland canal.

TWENTY YEARS AGO

The Wolf Creek bridge was completed Saturday and the steel has been laid to the McLeod River.

Ottawa—The Conservation Commission recommends that railways be held accountable for fires caused by sparks from locomotives.

Constantinople—The revolt of the Albanians has assumed more serious proportions with the report that the rebels have sacked Turkish towns and put the inhabitants to the sword.

The Edmonton real estate exchange was formally disbanded by vote of the charter members.

TEN YEARS AGO

Ottawa—Sugar is likely to go to 30 cents a pound.

Peace River points report that spring has come there earlier than in the Edmonton district, though far later than is usual.

Warsaw—The Bolsheviki resistance has been broken in southern Ukraine, where the Poles have captured 15,000 prisoners.

Regina—The Court of King's bench upheld the action of the governors in dismissing three professors from the Saskatchewan university.

Winnipeg—The Mennonite colonies in Manitoba and Saskatchewan propose to remove to the Mississippi valley.

Health and Diet Advice

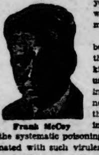
By DR. FRANK McCOY

Diet Specialist and Author of “The Fast Way to Health”

Questions on Health and Diet Answered by Dr. McCoy, when addressed in care of The Edmonton Bulletin

KEEP THE DRAINS CLEAR

If your bathtub and sink and toilet were stopped up, you would no doubt send out a hurry call for the plumber to discover the cause of the obstruction in the sewage system of your home. Most people do not become as alarmed when the sewage system of their own bodies becomes clogged, and yet the body is constantly throwing off refuse material which must be carted away and disposed of in some manner which nature has well provided.



Frank McCoy

The waste products of metabolism are constantly being thrown out by various channels, some through the skin, some through the lungs, some through the kidneys, and a large portion is converted into bile and used again as a digestive fluid to be eleminated by the intestines. If the elimination from any of these channels is imperfect there is a grave danger that some of these wastes (hence poisons) will be again re-absorbed into the circulation. Each time this clogging occurs, the systematic poisoning is greater, and finally the body may be so impregnated with such virulent toxins that disease readily develops. There is no doubt that one of the greatest causes of disease is an impure blood stream. The blood must be kept pure, as it carries the food which supplies life to all of the organs and tissues of the body.

Whenever a partial clogging takes place a dangerous cesspool is formed which may poison the entire system.

The large colon, by acting as a storage place for most of the solid excretions, is very likely to be a source of systematic poisoning, especially as in some cases the waste material backs up into the small intestines, where it is readily absorbed. Either partial or complete constipation is bound to permit some of the retained poisons to be forced back into the circulation to be handled by the liver. Unless the colon empties normally, its contents, really consisting of garbage, become decayed and fermented.

Whenever you find that your system is becoming toxic, you feel sluggish, or tire readily, or have any of the pre-disease symptoms, you may be sure that a dangerous cesspool has developed some place in your system. Some of your organs of elimination have become clogged. You will usually find that this condition is caused by such things as: using too much food, using bad combinations, using an excess of starch or sugars, not obtaining enough exercise, having weak abdominal muscles, not obtaining enough fresh air, allowing yourself to become enervated, or not obtaining enough sleep.

You can usually get rid of these dangerous cesspools by correcting the cause and undergoing an eliminative diet and the right kind of treatments. After this you can maintain good health if you will learn to live so that the eliminative organs do not again become obstructed.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS
Orange Peel

Question: G. S. asks: “Is it best for one suffering from stomach trouble to leave out all meats? Is fish harmful? Also I was told that the orange peel was just as beneficial for one as the juice. Is that right?”

Answer: It depends on the kind of stomach trouble. If you have ulcers or severe inflammation it might be well to use a milk diet and avoid all solid foods. Meat and fish are no more harmful than any other solid foods. If you have a mild gastritis an orange juice fast would be beneficial. However, the peel should not be used. One in good health may use some of the orange peel if he cares for it.

Baking Powders

Question: Mrs. H. asks: “Is it all right to use baking powder in making biscuits? I have tried to cook them without powder, but they seem so heavy and difficult to digest. What kind of baking powders would you suggest?”

Answer: There has been much difference of opinion between the various baking powder manufacturers, each claming that his baking powder was superior to others. However, I feel sure that the public is fairly well protected by the pure food laws against manufacturers who for commercial reasons alone would use injurious ingredients in making baking powder. The action of baking powder of almost any variety seems to be beneficial as it makes the dough lighter and therefore more easy to chew and digest. Generally the acids in the baking powder completely neutralize the alkaline elements, thereby overcoming the injurious action which they might otherwise have.

CHARACTER CLOSE-UPS

LARGE EYES AND SMALL MOUTH SHOW THIS MAN SAYS LITTLE BUT DEMONSTRATES MUCH IN LOVE

Mrs. Smith: “Well, she must be over forty, but she doesn't look thirty. I wonder how she does it?”

Mrs. Jones: “Oh! She manages to make up the difference.”

Fritz: “Not one.”

Father: “How is that?”

Fritz: “The boys who thrash me I can't bear and the boys I can thrash can't bear me.”

Old Lady—Oh, conductor, please stop the train I dropped my wig out of the window.

The Day's Motto

Astrology

By BELLE BART

Planetary Influences on Sunday for ALL.

Propitious for any matters dealing with creative and literary work, particularly for publications. Excellent influences prevail for philanthropic work and for recreation! also for taking journeys. It is a propitious period for seeking favors and for readjusting broken friendships.

For Those Birthday Is Sunday

If you were born on May 4 you are energetic and active, but must be careful and circumspect and avoid disfavor and prejudice because of adverse judgment. You may have many difficulties because of these indications.

Your best efforts would be expended in any work dealing with any of the sciences, jurisprudence or the stage, or as historian, jeweler or antiquarian. The most favorable periods for attempting anything reasonable in nature where beneficial results are required are the winter of 1930, the spring of 1931 and the winter of 1932.

Thomas Henry Huxley, Born May 4, 1825

An example of a person born on May 4 is Thomas Henry Huxley, celebrated English biologist, whose horoscope denotes a fertile, imaginative and penetrative mind, complacent and sagacious. There is a marked intuitive and inventive faculty, and the ability to take advantage of any opportunity provided it led into the field of physical anatomy. This is borne out by most qualities being in human signs in his horoscope. Venus was adversely aspected and must have brought many financial difficulties, and also personal grievances through sanguinary ties. Among his best works are “Oceanic Hydrozo,” “Evidence as to Man's Place in Nature,” and “Lectures on the Elements of Comparative Anatomy.”

MONDAY

Planetary Influence for Monday: Do Nothing of Importance.

If you were born on May 3rd, it is essential that you be careful of people with whom you associate yourself in order to avoid any disparaging remarks to which you are not rightfully entitled. Avoid litigation and keep as free from obligations as possible. Your best effort would be expended in any work dealing with literature, the diplomatic field, as archaeologist, adventurer, churchman, cabinet maker, economist, organist or tobacco grower.

ALONE

By Charles E. Burrows, 1st C.M.R.

(A thought on seeing an old comrade in military annex, University hospital, Edmonton, Easter, 1930.)

Twelve long, weary years have passed;
He lies and dreams alone;
Dreams of days that used to be
Back in the danger zone.

Days when he was young and strong,
Stalwart and brave and true;
Fighting for home and freedom;
Protecting me and you.

And shall we now forsake him
Lying there alone? He Dreams of days that had to be
Back in the danger zone.

“Why don't you buy a bicycle, Pat?” said his neighbor. “You would find it useful in going back and forth to your work.”

“Faith,” said Pat, “I'd as soon walk afoot as ride afoot.”

Insurance Agent: “Come along with me, my man, I can get you damages for this.” Big Nigger (hit by bus): “Good lawksie man, Ah don't need any mo' damages. What I needs is repairs.

How times change! They used to call it axle grease, and now they spread it on a cabbage leaf and call it a salad.

If Ford would teach England to raise wages, he must also teach her how to make leather upholstery from oilcloth.

Keeping Mentally Fit

By Joseph Jastrow, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., LL.D.

Professor of Psychology, University of Wisconsin, 1888 to 1917; now Professor emeritus; lecturer in the New School for Social Research, New York City; past president of the American Phychological Association

A COMPOSITE NEUROTIC

I am self-centered, morbid and emotionally unstable. I am very easily excited to anger or fear and so powerful is the emotion it paralyzes my reason. I have an inferiority complex and indulge in self-pity, but cannot help it. I try to reason, yet my moods come and go as the wind. I am constantly afraid of something. This condition has been with me since early childhood.

D. T.

Reply:

I have frequently commented alike on the composite factors of the neuroses in neurotics, by which term I mean those who react excessively and abnormally to the upsetting emotions of life, and to the aggravating circumstances that combine to the same unfortunate end. Because this “case” contains all of them compositely, is it worth citing in some detail. “Self-centered,” “morbid,” “emotionally unstable,” “easily excited to anger,” “indulge in self-pity,” “moods come and go,” “constantly afraid of something,” “condition since early childhood.” To these eight impediments to right living the rest of the letter rounds out the dozen. Others to wit: “Physically inferior,” “sensitive,” “spoiled,” “cry-baby.” . . . A bad start in childhood completes the picture.

These are the typical ingredients in recipe for the making of a neurotic; it doesn't take all of them by any means. Every one of these symptoms everybody knows on some scale in himself or herself; but they are kept in bounds and are not allowed to run to extremes. That's why most persons are in most respects normal.

And now we come to the real problem, which is the life-battle against these tendencies. “I always fight emotionally whenever I am given a difficult problem; but I am determined to fight it out, and the conflict between the two makes me neurotic. It is foolish to try and fight all the time. There must be some other way out.”

There is no other way; though there are wise and unwise ways of fighting, fighting with the support of good advice, or as is here confessed, “I block every attempt to get well.” Yet this composite neurotic confesses: “Once or twice I have completely lost all these neurotic symptoms and have felt absolutely normal.” What has been, can be. Just when and how these normal periods came on is not told.

Making over a “spoiled” individual is a long and arduous process. You can't unscramble an omelet applies, yet not wholly. The art of re-educating neurotics has become an indispensable specialty in modern life. Life is not easy for the neurotically handicapped; when the upbringing aggravates natural difficulties there is the making of a composite neurotic. The problem of the neurotic in the making is in recent years better understood; the problem of the neurotic in the making is the desirable next step in progress.

On This Date—

MAY 4TH

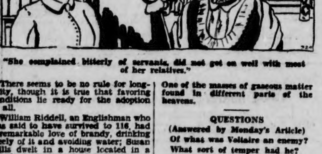
R. A. M. C. constituted May 4, 1898. The Royal Army Medical Corps grew out of the Army Medical Staff and the Medical Staff Corps. The title R. A. M. C. was created by Queen Victoria. Before 1914 this section of the British Army had little significance for the vast body of the general public. History's tale of martial glory does not unfold itself for posterity's adulation through the casualty clearing hospitals. Gallant deeds on stricken fields rightly get their prominence, but the stricken field itself is left for the night to hide its anguish. If British battles were written around the surgeon's tent, instead of the general's, the tales of heroism would be no less, but the glory of war would suffer sadly. An efficient medical service has not always been at the back of the battle. At one time the care of the wounded was of but secondary importance. In the alteration from this state of affairs the part played by the press was of value inestimable. The Crimean war saw the addition of the war correspondent to the field of battle. Among the many evils brought to the light of day by those gentlemen was the condition of hospital organization. The outcome was the visit of Florence Nightingale and the example of this gallant lady had an enormous effect on the future of the medical service. Since that day “battle wrack” has gradually become a phase of warfare that demands all that science can give it. The work of the various branches of the R. A. M. C. in the last war is but dimly realized, but even less clearly appreciated is the condition of horror that would have dominated the battle areas without its scientific aid. The job of the “poultice wallopers,” as they were jocularly known to the troops, gets no easier as civilization and science progresses, but there is one bright side to the business, it also gets more publicity. The “Charge of the Light Brigade” makes thrilling reading, but a description of a casualty clearing station is more likely to have a beneficial effect for mankind.

THE R.A.M.C. IN THE LAST WAR

Remarkable Old Folks of History

By J. P. GLASS

Life She Led should Have Killed Caroline Herschel But She Lived to 98.



“She complained bitterly of servants, did not get on well with most of her relatives.”

There seems to be no rule for longevity, though it is true that favoring conditions lie ready for the adoption of all.

William Riddell, an Englishman who was said to have survived to 116, had a remarkable love of brandy, drinking freely of it and avoiding water; Susan Mills dwelt in a house located in a marshy and often flooded district, but neither fevers nor rheumatism prevented her from attaining 101 years; the widow of George Dyer, the author, who lived more than a century, not only was uncleanly in her great age, but she was a big woman; finally, the Rev. W. Davis, incumbent of Staunton-on-Wye, who lived to 105, broke every old-age rule for preserving health. For the last 35 years of his life he took very little indoor exercise and none outdoors. Nevertheless he ate heartily, even of foods difficult to digest. He began the day with hot buttered rolls for breakfast atd ended it with hot roasts for supper. He also was a wine-drinker, though not excessive in his bibbing.

One of the most famous women of history, Caroline Lucretia Herschel, the astronomer, led a life not at all favorable to great years. But she died only two years short of a century.

She did not get enough sleep, toiled exhaustively, ate irregularly and hastily—sometimes she missed meals completely—and every once in awhile took unnecessary risks in unfavorable conditions of weather.

To top it off, she was not a genial person. She complained bitterly of servants, did not get on well with most of her relatives, was lonesome and took full note of every sickness from which she suffered.

But she had monumental will power. Her whole life, too, was given over to a single passion—love of her brother, Sir William Herschel, the distinguished discoverer of the planet of Uranus, and his work.

Caroline Herschel provides one of history's most notable examples of self-effacement. Becoming in girlhood her brother's assistant, she served him until his death with passionate devotion. No sacrifice of bodily or mental convenience was too great for her to make for him. Her reward was to discover eight comets, several clusters of stars and some remarkable nebulae.

She was twelve years younger. When Sir William died in 1822, he was 94. She lived on until 1848.

In extreme old age she was still sprightly in her movements, mentally alert and interested in the progress of astronomy.

Never for a minute did she relax her love for her brother. Dying, a lock of his hair which she had preserved, was put, at her request, in her coffin.

NEBULAE: Plural of nebula: One of the masses of gaseous matter found in different parts of the heavens.

His Worship: “You say you have known the prisoner all your life. Now, do you think he would be guilty of stealing this money?”

Witness: “How much was it?”

A girl was asked what she thought of married life.

“Oh, there's not much difference,” she replied. “I used to wait up half the night for Tom to go, and now I wait up half the night for him to come home.”

It was after dinner; father and son were left alone.

“Well, guv'nor,” asked the young man, “do you think they'll ever find a substitute for petrol?”

“They have one now,” said the father. “I wish you'd give it a trial.”

“Really?” queried the youth. “I've never heard of it. What is the new idea?”

“Shoe leather,” retorted his father

Billy: “Father, you promised me a shilling if I behaved myself at the party.”

Father: “Yes, sonny.”

Billy: “Well, father, you've saved it!”

“Pa ain't home,” he announced. “He went over to the golf club.”

The minister's brow darkened, and Willie hastened to explain:

“Oh, he ain't gonna play and golf. Not on Sunday. He just went over for a few drinks and a game of poker.”

Mabel: “You've been wanting some slippers, Amy, and here's your chance. A ‘gigantic slipper sale’ is advertised in the papers.”

GREAT RECORDS ARE RELEASED BY VICTOR CO.

Wide Variety of Selections Offered to Music Lovers

The list of 44 Victor records, offered as fresh entertainment for the merry month of May, provides a representative musical cross-section of the public's demands for the day. No composition has yet been written to please all of the people all of the time, but the range of the month's list should accomplish even this. Here is a choice of the leaders.

Dance Records

"The One I Love Just Can't be Bothered With Me"—Fred Culley and his Royal York orchestra—A catchy fox-trot melody emphasized by particularly smart and rhythmic lyrics. Culley's all-Canadian band is a hit.

"Cross Your Fingers"—Nat Shilkret and the Victor orchestra—This one goes back a few years for its melody, and makes you like it. The strains of "Bam! Bam! Bammy Shore" are quickly recognized, but the rhythm, of course, is strictly modern. Good foxtrot which also makes listening pleasant.

"In My Little Hope Chest"—The High Hatters—One of the many, not to say one of the best, of the day's "optimistic" songs. The orchestra clicks in putting it across for the foxtrotters.

Popular Vocal

Gems from "Sunny Side Up"—Victor Light Opera Company—If you've seen and heard the show, you'll want this one. If you haven't, the record will give you an idea of why the theatres are still standing 'em up for the screen version.

"The One Girl"—John Boles—Something away above the usual theme song. Boles scored with it in "Song of the West" and repeats on the record.

"And Then He Took Up Golf"—Frank Crumit — Rib-tickling patter about the world's most virulent athletic affliction. Grantland Rice wrote the words. 'Nuf sed.

Red Seal

"H. M. The King's Speech"—The address with which His Majesty opened the Naval Conference. Recorded simultaneously with broadcast. Excellent reproduction.

"The Rose of Tralee"—John McCormack—If the great Irishman needs any further popularizing with his public, his singing in "Song O' My Heart" should do it. The four songs he records reveal the typical McCormack and all the vocal qualities which have won him a place all his own.

"The Prophet"—Feodor Chaliapin—The remarkable Russian basso in a Rimsky-Korsakow composition which gives his talents full scope.

More Than 200 Entries For Musical Festival

Entries in School Classes Are Specially Gratifying—Outside Points to Send Competitors to Events

More than 200 entries have been received by Secretary Harry Turner for the Edmonton and District subsidiary of the Alberta Musical Festival Association. The local festival will be more or less of a preliminary canter to the provincial event, which this year is being held at Calgary from May 26 to 31 inclusive.

It is gratifying to note that there have been in the neighborhood of 60 entries in the school classes.

That there is considerable interest manifest in the event in out-of-town points can be attested by the fact that entries have been received from both Wetaskiwin and Vegreville.

Mrs. S. R. Keeling and Sam Hobson have been appointed as official accompanists.

The time table is now being drawn up by the committee and is expected to be released about the middle of next week.

The Calgary Herald have manifested its further interest in the Alberta Musical Festival by the making of a special award on One Hundred dollars ($100.00). The award will be used for additional tuition to the candidate under 21 years of age residing in the Province of Alberta and entered in the forthcoming Provincial Festival in any of the classes for Instrumental solos, who shall be recommended by the Adjudicators and approved by the management of the Calgary Daily Herald.

The Provincial Musical Festival will be held in Calgary, May 26 to 31. Entries for this Festival closed on May 1.

PUPILS GIVE FINE RECITAL

Violin Students of F. J. Darimont Heard at the Memorial Hall

Violin pupils of Fernand J. Darimont, assisted by Guy Turner, tenor, appeared in recital at the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall on Thursday night. A high standard of playing was set, which reflected the highest credit on both teacher and pupils.

ARTS PRIZES IN COMPETITION ARE AWARDED

Lord Willingdon Issues List of Those Capturing Trophies

Canadian Press

OTTAWA, Ont., May 3.—The results of the Willingdon Arts Competition (second year), were made public today.

The competition was instituted by His Excellency the Governor-General with a view to furthering and encouraging the cultivation of the arts and letters in Canada. Again, this year, His Excellency offered prizes amounting in all to $1,000 for certain specified works in the realms of music, literature, painting and sculpture.

In the literature section, the English prize was won by Howe Martyn, Burwash Hall, Victoria College, Toronto.

The prize for the French essay was won by Robert Choquette, Montreal.

In the music competition the prize for the composition for violin and pianoforte was won by George Cuotts, Regina College, Regina, Sask. He won the prize for vocal solo with pianoforte accompaniment.

The prize of $200 to be awarded for the best sculpture in bronze, marble, stone, wood, plaster, or terracotta, was won by Emanuel Hahn, A.R.C.A., Toronto, with his Vilhjalmur Stefansson.

The prize of $200, which was awarded for the best painting in either oil, watercolor, pastel, or tempera, was divided between George D. Pepper's painting "Totem Poles, Kitwanga", and F. H. Varley's "Vera". Honorable mention was awarded to "Scene River at Quebec," by Paul Bedard; "From My Studio Roof," by E. Grace Coombs; "Nuns, Quebec," by Kathleen M. Morris; "Indian Boy at Hagwelget Canyon," by Pegi Nicol, and "Chun Moy," by Vera O. Weatherbie.

The competition, it is stated, was very successful in all classes. The general level of exhibits was considerably higher than that attained last year.

Exhibits came from points all over Canada. The largest number of contributions were received from Winnipeg, Vancouver, Toronto, Montreal and Halifax, in the order named.

Edmonton Male Chorus Gives Enjoyable Concert

Request Program at First Presbyterian Church Draws Plaudits—Mrs. Ethel Norbury's Work Scores at First Hearing

The First Presbyterian Church was the scene of a most artistic and entirely enjoyable concert on Friday night when the Edmonton Male Chorus, assisted by Mrs. G. L. Hudson, gave a request program.

A goodly number of satellites of the justly celebrated chorus turned out to do homage to the mighty and revel in an evening of unmistakable pleasure.

Some of the numbers which have done much to spread the fame of the chorus were included, while the occasion was made all the more notable by reason of the fact that the first performance was given of the latest work from the the prolific pen of Mrs. Ethel Norbury, namely, a setting for tenor solo with choral and instrumental accompaniment, of Edgar Allen Poe's poem, "Annabel Lee."

A Few Lapses

In regard to the request numbers the chorus sang with accustomed artistry and polish with the exception of a few spots. There were lapses—lapses not usually associated with this estimable organization—in the "Volga Boatman," "John Peel," and "Land of Hope and Glory." But on a request program, such flaws often appear—not because the artists are not capable of doing better work, but because they know the work maybe too well. In sporting terms they call it "going stale" which indeed is more mental than physical.

However, the work of the chorus generally speaking was on a high plane and is a good start for the musical festival—and it is to be hoped the chorus will compete.

"Feasting I watch," Schubert's "Serenade," "Men of Harlech," "Drink to Me Only," "Ye Banks and Braes," "Loch Leven Lament," "Comrades in Arms," "Sleeping," "The Long Day Closes," and "The Omnipotence" were other numbers.

Mrs. Norbury's composition is the most ambitious from her pen to date with the exception of her stage work, "The Vendor of Amulets," given at the New Empire back in 1921.

In "Annabel Lee" she has written a smoothly flowing work, replete with pretty themes, pretty as indeed was Annabel. There is an atmospheric accompaniment, which while important on its own account, never intrudes into the vocal domain.

Mr. Hendra, in a preliminary address, got his alibi in early by stating that insufficient time had been available to properly prepare the work. It was apparent, alas, that Mr. Hendra had spoken the truth. However, it is to the credit of the ability of the chorus, individually and collectively, that such an understanding and enjoyable performance was given.

J. Irving Gish sang the tenor assignment with infinite credit. It is difficult, often soaring high up the scale. But he was equel to all demands.

Mr. Hendra conducted throughout as the most excellent musician that he is.

Mrs. Hudson, or the former Bessie Pilkie, proved her worth once more as a brilliant singer. Brahms' "Undying Love," Campbell - Tipton's "Hymn to the Night," and the solo part in "The Omnipotence," afforded her many opportunities to display her prowess, which she did to the utmost. It was a welcome reappearance before a host of admirers.

Mrs. S. R. Keeling, I. E. Williams and Fred Tucker provided excellent accompaniments.—J.O.

FINE CONCERT IS GIVEN AT ROSE THEATRE

Order of Eastern Star, Norwood Chapter, Sponsors Fine Event

Old-time songs of the sea sung by the officers, some of the members of Norwood Chapter No. 24 O.E.S. and their children, in white and navy sailor costumes from the deck of a well devised boat H.M.S. Norwood, formed an unusual and delightful entertainment in the Rose theatre, 118 avenue on Wednesday last.

Lifebuoys, coils of rope, wireless outfit in operation, flags and deck chairs all combined to give an excellent effect against a screen background of waves and sky.

Rollicking choruses, poet songs, ducts and solo numbers, including such favorites as, We Have a Navy, My Ships, When the Bell in the Light House Rings Ding Dong, I Love You Canada, Mandalay, Strike Up the Band, By the Silvery Sea, Noah's Ark and the Peanut Song were interspersed with sparkling bits of humor and short dialogues in which the leader, Bert Ward, and his mates brought roars of laughter from the audience. Soloists included Miss W. Crowthee, Mrs. Harris, Mrs. Speakman, Charles Furly, Arthur Jackson, Dave Spalding, Bert Ward, Mrs. M. Murie gave mouthorgan selections. Readings were given by Mrs. M. McQuarrie, Eric and Bruce Ward, Miss D. Marshalldanced the sailors' hornpipe. Frank Skinner played a violin solo. The accompanists were Mrs. Speakman, Mrs. Harris and Miss Skinner. The concert was brought to a close by the chorus singing Rule Brittania and God Sove the King.

Canadian Works Will Be Broadcast

NOVELTY OPERA GIVES BERLIN REAL SURPRISE

Music Lovers Hearing Unusual Work by Modern Writer

Canadian Press Cable

BERLIN, May 3.—An iron opera singing the metallic destiny of three humans caught among the cogwheels of modern mechanised life, is startling the music lovers of Berlin. The name, "Machinist Hopkins," would lead one to expect (or fear) a musical dramatization of factory life; but few who attended the opening of the Berlin Civic opera production were prepared for the extent to which this idea is carried out.

Max Brand, the young Viennese composer of "Machinist Hopkins,"—which is his first opera, by the way—conceives the towering machinery of present-day industry as more than inanimate metal. He endows it with a vague but ruthless personality, makes of it a looming, jealous deity of metal which dominates the humans who serve it and destroys the man who rebels against it. The story in which this metal god plays the deciding role concerns two machinists and a woman. One of the men, eager for escape from the enslaving machine, steals the production secrets of the factory and flees with the woman after killing her husband (a foreman) when the latter tries to block the theft.

The other machinist, Hopkins, is a man whose soul has absorbed metal from the atmosphere in which he works. He is in tune with the whirring deity of steel and copper, and it is he who finally upsets the plans of the slayer, who for a time seems to have won mastery over the machine and quick riches because of his possession of the stolen secrets. The backgrounds against which this drama unfolds are of unusual interest, particularly the enormous factory interiors of the prologue and second and third acts.

When Bill, the machinist, and his woman accomplice, Nell, slink into the silent factory at night the great, shadowy machines become vocal. The chanting of offstage choruses, whirring, hissing, murmuring choruses, throbs with the rhythm and suppressed power of great engines. (Brand even has written solo parts for "first wheel," "second wheel," "cogwheel," "piston," and the like.) The result is music, but the sort of music one might hear from an orchestra of hissing valves, chugging pistons, humming cogwheels and clinking chains.

The factory office scene in Act I, emphasized a different sort of rhythm. It might be called the chant of the yes-men. Bill, now a big industrialist, listens to the staccato reports of his bass and baritone heads of departments, and gives them his orders in clear tenor. "Ninety days, Continental Bank," sings a secretary, or "Two thousand tons, f.o.b. Bombay," and Bill sings back, "Check!" or "How much did you say?"

More lavish, though not so complicated technically as the factory interior scenes, is the roof garden cabaret scene in which Bill and Nell are shown spending some of the money which now comes to them in such abundance. A complete and very snappy jazz revue in the midst of a gay crowd of monied pleasure seekers provides the extravaganza atmosphere in which Nell achieves her great ambition—the signing of a stage contract. A later scene therefore takes place backstage in a big theatre. In other words, there is no lack of scenic variety in this opera.

Brand, who is 34, already has begun work on a second opera. Writing the book on "Machinist Hopkins" took him 14 days, he says, while the music occupied him seven months. He relates with some satisfaction how he tried to pass the entrance examination of a conservatory of music and failed; whereupon he went ahead and wrote songs and orchestral music, studying meanwhile with Alois Haba and Erwin Steinhoff.

During the war Brand was an officer in the Austrian army. It was not until afterward that he took up music as a career.

Temperamental Rudy Almost Spoils Talkie

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., May 3.—F. years it has been said that Arthur Hammerstein, famous New York stage impresario, was the only man who could successfully handle temperamental Rudolf Friml, America's foremost composer of light opera music.

Hammerstein proved it during the recording of musical scores for "Bride 66."

Having written the music Friml wanted to lead the orchestra to make sure the 50 musicians would get the spirit of his melodies. It is Friml's habit to keep time with his right foot as well as with his hands. Several costly records were ruined by the foot thumping, but Friml wouldn't put on the soft pedal.

There was much tearing of hair by the sound engineers and technicians. Finally Hammerstein dashed from the sound stage and returned a minute later carrying a heavily padded mattress. Hammerstein requested Friml to stand on the mattress. The recording began again. Friml still kept time with his feet. But only the music was heard.

Famous Artists Will "Go On Air"

MONTREAL, May 3. — Madeline Monnier, cellist, and Eugene Vives, baritone, will be the soloists during the Canadian National Railways' broadcast, Tuesday. The concert, beginning at 9:00 p.m., Central Standard Time, will be broadcast from Monckton to Vancouver, and Miss Monnier will play such numbers as Schubert's "The Bee," "La Source," by Davidoff, Lalo's "Chants Russes," and several rondes and minuets. An orchestra will play, "Crown of India," by Elger; "In a Country Garden," by Grainger, and other well-known compositions.

Miss Monnier is a winner of the Paris conservatoire prize and was recipient of the special fellowship from the French government and has played with some of the leading European and American orchestras.

A Manx program with Miss Ada Mylchreest as soloist, will be presented on Thursday, April 3. Walter Quilliam, tenor, and an orchestra under R. N. Cornfield, will assist.

Miss Sarah Smith Tells How Cuticura Healed Pimples.

"My trouble began as a rash of small pimples which later formed larger ones that were hard and red. They affected my face and back. The pimples festered and scaled over, and my clothing aggravated the ones on my back. They were very itchy and sometimes the irritation prevented me from sleeping. They caused disfigurement and lasted about two years.

"I began using Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me, and after using two cakes of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I was completely healed." (Signed) Miss Sarah Smith, Tantallon, Sask., July 13, 1929.

Methods Of Burial Have Undergone Alteration

Ancient Tombs Reveal History of Olden Times—Great Changes Have Taken Place in Last Few Years

"Show me the manner in which a nation, or community, cares for its dead, and I will measure, with mathematical exactness, the tender sympathies of its people, their respect for the laws of the land, and their loyalty to high ideals."—Gladstone.

The regard that mankind of different ages and nations has shown for their dead is a reasonably accurate reflection of their ideals, their civilization and their religion.

Throughout the world's history, when a race reached a high state of civilization, burial in the ground became unpopular, while entombment in catacombs, tombs and mausoleums was substituted as affording more durable and dignified memorials for the dead.

The pyramids of Egypt are among the most remarkable and oldest of the existing stone constructions of antiquity. The Great Pyramid containing the tomb of Cheops, second King of the Fourth Dynasty, is at least four thousand years old and covers thirteen acres of ground.

The countless tombs of the Caliphs of the Nile Valley, the Catacombs of Rome, and the hundreds of mausoleums along the Appian Way, as resting places of the dead of past ages, stand in a remarkable state of preservation, and are silent symbols of the intelligence of their builders.

It is from these ancient tombs that we are able to read the history and reconstruct the civilization of those ancient times.

When Mausolus died, 353 B.C., Artemesia, Queen of Cairo, Asia Minor, built the famous mausoleum at Hallcarnussus as a sanctuary for his remains and a monument to his memory. This mausoleum is counted one of the seven wonders of the world. The term "mausoleum" has ever since been applied to the more extensive kinds of burial tombs erected above ground.

The civilization of our day is expressed by the beautiful Royal Mausoleum erected by Queen Victoria, near Windsor Castle, Westminster Abbey, in whose silent crypts sleep many of Britain's most famous characters, is a notable example of national respect to the mortal remains of the great. The beautiful mausoleums erected in the United States in honor of Presidents Lincoln, Garfield, Grant and McKinley, and the ever increasing numbers of community and private mausoleums built each year, furnish eloquent testimony to the inherent desire of civilized humanity to provide beautiful and permanent resting places for the dead—resting places from which all the disagreeable features of earth burial are forever taken away.

Within the past few years wonderful changes and developments have taken place, so that the cemetery of today has become truly modern and the old idea of merely a burial ground has passed for ever. In its place we now find beautiful parking, driveways and artistic landscaping and the highest type of architectural expression in chapels, receiving vaults, lodges gateways and private and community mausoleums. Every scientific device known is provided to facilitate the beauty and utility of the cemetery as a tribute to the loved departed.

The trustees of these truly modern cemeteries recognize the steady growing demand for the mausoleum form of interment, and with a high standard of stewardship are making a thorough study of the subject, with the result that the community mausoleum is now considered a necessary feature of the properly equipped cemetery.

That a great wave of reform is sweeping the country in favor of entombment as contrasted with burial in the ground, is evidenced by the fact that there are now over eight hundred community mausoleums erected and in course of construction in the United States and Canada.

In Ontario, in the last few years, large community mausoleums have been erected in the cities of Hamilton, Galt, St. Catharines, St. Thomas, Sarnia, London, Windsor, Chatham, Stratford, Kitchener, Brantford, Oshawa, Belleville, Ridgeway, Welland, Woodstock, Ingersoll, and three beautiful structures, accommodating over three thousand bodies, have been erected in Toronto.

Guelph, as progressive a community as any of its size in Canada, is not lagging behind in this respect. The Woodlawn Community Mausoleum, which building is to be erected in Woodlawn Cemetery this summer, and which will be administered by the Guelph Cemetery Commission, bears ample evidence of this.

Edmonton, as progressive a community as any of its size in Canada, is not lagging behind in this respect. The Edmonton Community Mausoleum, which will be erected here this summer, and which will be administered by the Edmonton Cemetery Board, bears ample evidence of this.

The crown of pride, the drunkards of Ephraim, shall be trodden under feet.—Isaiah 28:3.

TO CONSECRATE NEW BISHOP NEXT MAY 7

Rt. Rev. Gerald Murray To Take Part in Ceremony

Rt. Rev. Gerald C. Murray, C.SS.R., bishop-elect of Victoria, B.C., will be consecrated next Wednesday, May 7, in St. Ann's church, Montreal, by His Excellency Most Rev. Andrew Cassulo, apostolic delegate to Canada. The co-consecrators will be Most Rev. Timothy Casey, D.D., archbishop of Vancouver, and Rt. Rev. E. A. Deschamps, D.D., auxiliary bishop of Montreal. The sermon will be preached by Most Rev. Neil McNeil, D.D., archbishop of Toronto.

Following the consecration, a banquet will be given at the Windsor hotel. In the evening Bishop Murray will officiate at solemn pontifical benediction in St. Patrick's church, the guest of Very Rev. Gerald McShane, pastor of the parish, and the following day will administer the sacrament of confirmation, St. Ann's church. The date of Bishop Murray's installation at Victoria is not known yet, but it is expected to take place towards the end of May. It is practically certain that his lordship will visit Edmonton en route to his episcopal see, and his friends here are planning to honor the occasion in a fitting manner.

Half Minute Sermons

Once again Death grins sardonically as it views the ever growing roll of those who fall victims to the automobile, for the summer months, the months of the gay and sunny outdoors, are also the months of tragedy resulting from motor car accidents. During these months the automobile is out in greatest numbers and during these months, too, men and women and tiny tots are out in the open and the opportunities for accidents are greatest as a consequence.

The police, state and city authorities and safety commissions are all striving again, and continuously striving, to inculcate thoughts of safety in the minds of pedestrians and motorists, but their work seems at times so fruitless. It must be fruitless unless these agencies have the loyal and eternal support of those who make accidents possible.

And so again this summer the same old appeal: be careful when you drive your car, be careful when you walk the public highways. The death and injury list mounts every day. Keep yourself out of it and keep out of it those dear to you and those dear to others.

Don't be heedless; accidents are needless.

Lambeth Parley Important Affair

The first Lambeth conference was held in 1867, with 76 bishops attending. The next was in 1878, with 100 bishops in attendance. Ten years after there was another meeting with 145 present, and in 1897 there were 197 who took their seats. In 1908 there was held a Pan-Anglican congress, when about 5,000 clergymen and members of the laity came together from every part of the world. The conference was opened later with an attendance of 242 bishops. The last meeting was in 1920, the number present being 250. From it the Appeal for the Reunion of Christendom was issued, which created unusual interest everywhere. The next session of this notable conference, in July next, will be attended with even more notice than given to any of its predecessors. The inrush of new ideas, the gathering of fresh knowledge and discovery of mysterious powers in nature are influencing everything in life. There will be important decisions, regarding social questions and the church union scheme at South India will be considered.

Toronto Church Maintains Position

St. James Anglican Cathedral, Toronto, which stands in the oldest part of the city, is still maintaining its historic position in the church. The total receipts for the past year were $42,028, the general fund showing an increase of $4,623 over the previous year. Two new windows are under the hands of artists, thus completing the fine series of paintings. Rev. H. P. Plumptre is rector. Bishop Sweeny confirmed 80 candidates at the Church of the Epiphany, Scarboro Junction.

ANNIVERSARY EVENT TO BE HELD SUNDAY

Central United Church Is Marking Four Years' Fine Service

Anniversary services will be conducted at Central United church on Sunday, this being the fourth such event in this congregation, during the ministry of Rev. Russell McGillivray, under whose leadership marked progress has been made in every department of the church activities.

Rev. Wilfred Gaetz, of MacDougall United church, is taking part in the services and will preach in the evening at 7:30. This will be the first occasion on which Mr. Gaetz has occupied the pulpit at Central church, and he is sure of a very sincere welcome from both pastor and people.

Rev. Mr. McGillivray will preach at the morning service, when his subject will probably be in keeping with the important event that marks this date in the church calendar of Central United.

This congregation during the past four years has measured up, in a fine Christian spirit, to every call that has been made upon it, and looks forward to rendering still greater service in the practical Christian way that will meet the needs of the present time, and also broaden the influence of Christianity and the Church in the lives of the people.

On Monday evening a supper will take place, and plans have been made for a big "at home" of the congregation and friends.

ARCHBISHOP TO PREACH AT ST. JOSEPH'S

Children of Mary Will Receive Communion Sacrament

The Children of Mary will receive communion in a body at the 9 o'clock mass on Sunday morning. It is hoped that all the members of the Sodality, together with those who are preparing to be received in the evening, will approach the communion rail on that occasion.

The eleven o'clock service will be broadcast. The sermon will be preached by His Grace Archbishop O'Leary.

Catholic Church Extends Activity

The Roman Catholic church is planning to take a greater share in bringing Christianity to the Oriental population in British Columbia. It is estimated that there are 50,000 Japanese and Chinese in that province. Already the Sisters of the Immaculate Conception from Montreal have a hospital, and Japanese Missionary Sisters of the Atonement from the United States are working there. Offerings are being received to bring out a few catechists from the Orient and to provide priests capable of speaking the native languages. Rev. Olaf Offerdhal is the first native son of Norway in 400 years to be made a bishop in the Church of Rome.

When the war closed no Roman Catholic from Germany would have thought of entering Rheims Cathedral. That spirit is gone, and among the notices are those in the German language directing visitors as in former days. Nicholas F. Brady, a wealthy Catholic layman, has just died in New York. He and his wife, at the cost of $2,000,000, erected the Novitiate of St Isaac Jogues, near Reading, Pa., as a memorial to the Jesuit priest who was tortured to death by the Iroquois Indians.

English Church Gives Statement

The financial position of the Church of England has just been published. The total income for the past year is £3,150,300. Out of this £79,945 went to the support of the bishops and £87,274 for pensions to the 814 retired clergymen. The Church Assembly amended the Clergy Pension measure of 1926 with the object of providing pensions ranging from £150 to £175 a year, whether the clergy were beneficed or not. The total income of the year showed an increase, notwithstanding the depression in agriculture, owing to the recovery of mining royalties and the expanding of ground rents, especially in the London district.

Recently 22 children from the Waifs and Strays Society of England left for the home at Sherbrooke, Quebec. There are in England and Wales 110 homes, where about 5,000 of these are cared for. The Bishop of London stated that an academy in Paris is training 40 Russian young men for the priesthood of the Russian Orthodox church, now under persecution. They will be ready to serve the church when that unhappy nation recovers from its enmity against religion.

Methodist Parleys Now In Progress

The Methodist conferences have been in session in Australia. Rev. J. H. Allen, who has been 20 years a missionary in India, is the new president in South Australia. In his opening address he urged ministers to rise an hour earlier on Sunday morning for prayer and meditation on the message prepared for the pulpit, in order that the year might be characterized by great preaching. The spiritual advance crusade conducted last year by Dr. Wm. Shaw will be continued. The conference in West Australia is confronted with the problem of finding charges for 20 probationers. In the state there are only 38 ordained men, and the mission fields are not sufficiently strong to support so many men who are at the stage of full standing. In New South Wales four young men were ordained. Four veterans, Dr. Carruthers, Rev. W. G. Taylor, E. J. Rodd, and J. W. Moore, have given 60 years in the ministry, and each has done distinct service to Methodism. In Queensland it was stated that 23 per cent of the total number of Methodists attended the Sunday Schools. At one of the sessions, "a parsonage choir" of ministers and their wives led the music.

Everybody can master a grief but he that has has it.—Shakespeare.

Praise the Lord: for the Lord is good: sing praises unto his name; for it is pleasant.—Psalm 135:3.

FAMOUS CHURCHES OF THE WORLD

By E. L. TINEMANN

Temple of Bodhidruma, Buddha Gaya, India

India is noted, not only for the many gorgeous and beautiful temples within her borders but also for those places of worship known as Rathas. The word ratha is of sanskrit origin and means literally "wheeled vehicle," "chariot," or "car of God." In its present sense it refers to an isolated shrine or temple cut out of a single block or boulder of granite, though most of the Indian rathas have in addition to such crude foundations an ornate mason door, vestibule or even a tower built of huge granite stones.

There are five of these in a row near Mahavallipur in Burma and they bear the names borrowed from the heroes of the Mahabharata; and one of the most elaborate and beautiful of the series is that great temple of Bodhidruma, soaring 170 feet above the jungle landscape. It is built of granite blocks in typical Burmese style of architecture, rises nine stories from its square base and is the only one of its kind ever erected of permanent materials by Buddhists in India.

Who commenced the building of the beautiful temple and when, are matters of doubt, but certain ancient inscriptions over the ornate doorway leaves no doubt as to the date on which it was completed. The latter date is 1299 A. D., this being the year of the reign of Nasiru'd—din Sultan of Bengal.

Tell Me A Story

A Queen Bee once flew up to Olympus with some fresh honey from the hive as a present for Jupiter. Now Jupiter was so pleased with the gift that he promised to give her anything she desired in return.

The Bee thought a while and then replied that she would be very happy if Jupiter would give stings to all Bees so that they might kill people who robbed them of their honey.

Jupiter was very much displeased at this request for he loved all mankind. But since he had given his word, he said it should be as the Bee wished.

The stings that he gave the Bees, however, were of such a kind that whenever a Bee stings a man the Bee must die as a result.

EVIL WISHES, LIKE FOWLS, COME HOME TO ROOST.

Missionary Buried With High Honors

A missionary in China, Dr. J. Walter Lowrie, was buried with honors seldom given to any man. His father had been a missionary in Shanghai, where he was born 73 years ago. When in his teens, he pleaded with his mother that she cease trying to make him a missionary. She replied that he did not need to be one, if he could help it. But the urge was too strong, and he began a wonderful career of evangelistic, educational and heroic services. During the Boxer rebellion he saved much bloodshed by going between the native and foreign forces. At his funeral most impressive scenes were witnessed, tributes of love being made in every way by both the workers and the common people. About a thousand followed in the long procession, as he was carried to a grave near to the Martyr Memorial at Paotingfu. He belonged to the Presbyterian church of the U. S. A.

Students and professors in the Presbyterian Theological college (McCormick) Chicago are mourning the death of Pat Wall, one of the caretakers. For more than 30 years he was a rare "character" in the institution, maintaining his Roman Catholic faith. A memorial service for "dear old Pat" was held in the chapel of the seminary at which many students and professors attended.

Woe is me for my hurt! My wound is grievous: but I said, Truly this is grief, and I must bear it.—Jeremiah 10:19.

WORRORA

The least significant member of the human family is a child of God, and has a Divine right to the Holy Scriptures which are committed to our trust. Therefore the Bible Society is at present printing the Gospel of St. Mark in Worrora, a language spoken by a tribe of 1,000 Australian aborigines of whom few can yet read.

Young Men Students For Mission Fields

The United Church of Canada has appointed [illegible] young men to student mission fields for the summer. Rev. Dr. Speer, of the United church, Dundas, has been elected an associate charter member of the federal council of the Church of Christ in America. The receipts of the United Church for missionary and maintenance purposes amounted last year to $2,696,711. Pine Hill Divinity Hall, Halifax, has organized a post-graduate school of theology. Professor Edwin Lewis, of Drew University, Madison, N.J., will deliver seven lectures on "The Person of Christ." Manitoba Conference has nominated Rev. J. W. Aikens, of St. John's United church, Winnipeg, as moderator of the general council which opens in London next September. Rev. Kenneth J. Beaton, B.A., has been nominated as associate secretary with Dr. Colin G. Young. He has been for 16 years a missionary in Chengtu, West China, and is at present Canadian secretary of the student volunteer movement. He has shown great ability both on the platform and pulpit.

SERMON SERIES ARRANGED FOR 'SCONA BAPTIST

Rev. M. L. Gregg Will Preach on Interesting and Timely Themes

Rev. M. L. Gregg, pastor of Strathcona Baptist church has arranged a special series of sermons for the Sunday mornings of the current month. Rev. Mr. Gregg has followed a similar course in past years with the delivery of special series of sermons and thereby has won great increase in the interest and number of attendants.

The sermons and their dates are as follows: May 4—"The Ascension of our Lord Jesus (Did Christ really ascend into heaven?). May 11—"The Session in Heaven of our Lord Jesus" (What is Christ doing now?). May 18—"The Great Commission of our Lord Jesus" (What does Christ expect the church to do now?). May 25—"The Return, Second Advent of our Lord Jesus" (Will Christ really come again?).

Questions

ABOUT THE BIBLE

1—How did Christ's prophecy of His own death affect the disciples?
2—What did they really expect Christ to proclaim?
3—What did the request of the mother of James and John indicate?
4—What did Christ ask of James and John?
5—How did they answer?
6—Was their fate in accordance with their answer?
7—What happened to them?
8—What was the difference in the attitude of the two ambitious disciples and that of the ten silent ones?
9—What did Christ mean when he said: "To sit on my left and on my right . . . . is for them to him it hath been prepared by my Father?"
10—What was Christ's idea of real greatness as opposed to the greatness of the rulers of the time?

The answers to these questions will be found below. How many can you answer?

1—They were sadly disappointed.
2—They expected Him to proclaim Himself King.
3—That she and her sons, too, had but selfish motives.
4—"Are ye able to drink the cup that I am about to drink?"
5—"We are able."
6—Yes.
7—James was martyred; John was exiled to Patmos.
8—The two were outspoken in their pleas; the ten were merely jealous and indignant.
9—Fitness, not influence, secures the highest reward.

Large Graduating Class At Seminary

The old Presbyterian Seminary at Princeton, N.J., has this year a graduating class of 53. Since the last Convocation a part of the student body and professors seceded to found the Westminster Seminary in Philadelphia. The proposal to combine Lane Theological Seminary, an honored Presbyterian institution in Cincinnati, with the Presbyterian Theological Seminary (McCormick) in Chicago, is not being accepted unanimously. The former has a history of over a hundred years.

Christian Science

At First Church of Christ, Scientist, of Edmonton, and at all Christian Science churches tomorrow, the subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Everlasting Punishment." The following is one of the Scriptural quotations contained in the Lesson-Sermon: "Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these: Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness . . . Envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the Kingdom of God. But the fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness faith, meekness, temperance, against such there is no law" (Galatians 5:19 21-23). One of the correlative passages from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, is as follows (page 322): "Man's wisdom finds no satisfaction in sin, since God has sentenced sin to suffer."

GRACE CHURCH IS PREPARING FOR SERVICES

Prof. Baepler Will Occupy Pulpit At Chapel Sermon

Can God be known? Must man cease to contemplate God? Must theology give way to sociology? Must the worship of Man take the place of the worship of God? These questions will be answered in the Sunday evening service of Grace Lutheran Church at the Howard and McBride chapel.

Special monthly service will be conducted at the Borden Park Sunday School in the morning immediately after the regular Sunday school session, 11 a.m. The Concordia octette will sing.

Prof. W. A. Baepler will accupy the pulpit in the morning servict at the 93rd street chapel.

Lutheran Churches Plain Big Event

In Lutheran churches Palm Sunday is the day when the majority of confirmations take place. In Canada and the United States about 75,000 young people annually stand before their altars and publicly declare themselves to be disciples of the Lord Jesus Christ. The United Lutheran church received 37,162 by confirmation in 1929. The American Lutheran church, a union of the Iowa, Buffalo and Ohio Synods, has more than half a million members. In Canada there are over 25,000 members, the majority being in Saskatchewan. In Ontario there are a little over 2,000. The strongest portion in the United States is found in Ohio.

PLAN TO HOLD COMMUNION ON SUNDAY NEXT

McDougall United Church To Hold Special Service

The Quarterly Communion Service will be held in McDougall Church at 11 o'clock tomorrow. As this will be the last service of this kind to be conducted in McDougall by the present pastor Rev. Wilfred Gaetz, all the members are asked to make a special effort to be present. Prof. A. T. Barnard will conduct the evening service.

The Imperial Welsh Singers whose concerts in March were heard by large audiences will give two sacred concerts in McDougall Church tomorrow, at 3 and 9 o'clock. The people of Edmonton will appreciate another opportunity to hear these great artists.

The music at the regular services will be of the usual high order conducted by W. J. Hendra with Fred Tucker as organist.

The Trade-mark

Old silversmiths, in order to help people tell pure silver from cheaper imitations, marked the real thing "sterling."

In a like manner, manufacturers, who stand back of their wares, identify them with trade-marks that are your guarantee of quality. By advertising these trade-marks, they focus on their products the searchlight of attention.

Only good goods, fairly priced, can flourish in this light of publicity. For no merchandise and no business can thrive under the weight of public condemnation. That is why a manufacturer, or a merchant, places the whole reputation of his business at stake every time he advertises. His goods must be as advertised. So, in looking through this paper, remember this: the man who spends his money to invite your consideration of his wares backs up his belief in his goods and leaves the final decision to you.

It pays you to read the advertisements. It pays you to buy advertised products.

CAPITOL GETS GREAT TALKIE NEXT MONDAY

"The Rogue Song" Comes Here Heralded as Fine Show

"The Rogue Song," heralded as one of the most elaborate all-talking musical pictures in the 1930 calendar will open at the New Capitol theatre newt Monday with Lawrence Tibbett, Metropolitan opera star as its featured player and a supporting cast which includes Catherine Dale Owen, Wallace Macdonald, Judith Vosselli, Kate Price, Lionel Belmore, James Bradbury, Jr., Nance O'Neill, Burr McIntosh, Florence Lake and the Roach comedy team of Laurel and Hardy.

The production was filmed entirely in Technicolor and was directed by Lionel Barrymore. Tibbett's song unmbers, ranging from operatic arias to simple love ballads, were written by Herbert Stothart and Clifford Grey with interpolations by Franz Lehar. Sisa Alsen, Wagnerian soprano, sings a special number accompanied by a women's chorus.

A symphony orchestra accompanies the songs, which include "Once in the Georgian Hills," "The Narrative," "The Rogue Song," "The Shame Cry," "To Live, To Love," "When I'm Looking at You," "Little White Dove" and "The Bandit Chorus."

The story is by Frances Marion, with dialogue by John Colton, of "Rain" and "Shanghai Gesture" fame and concerns a singing bandit chief in the Caucasus Mountains, a sort of Robin Hood who falls in love with a princess, goes through fiery adventure for her, and finally wins her love. It is set in the rugged Caucasus Mountains with castles, beautiful gardens and colorful gypsy villages as the locales.

Tibbett and his band do daring tricks in horsemanship and in one scene an entire chorus sings on galloping horses.

Star Says It Pays To Be Democratic

It pays to be democratic in Hollywood.

For "props" today may be "producer" tomorrow, or the extra may be the next reigning star.

Edward Chandler, in Radio Pictures original operetta, "Dixiana," will vouch for the truth of this.

Eighteen years ago, when Chandler was Mack Sennett's asistant, a slip of a girl applied to him for work. He had nothing to offer her—but he was kind about it.

"Drop around in a few weeks," he told her.

Today that consideration bears fruit.

The slip of a girl was Bebe Daniels, now the sensational singing star. Through her request Chandler was given his best talkie part in "Dixiana."

"You never know!" declares Chandler.

HOMETOWN FOLKS

Three prominent "hometowners" of Worcester, Mass., met on a movie set in Hollywood. The set was Radio Pictures' original operetta, "Dixiana," now in production. One of them was Everett Marshall, youthful Metropolitan Opera baritone who is making his film debut opposite Bebe Daniels. Another was Arlene Calvert, a member of Pearl Eaton's dance ensemble. The other was Marguerita Padula, mammy singer de luxe, who appeared recently in Radio Pictures' "Hit the Deck," in the sensational "Hallelujah" number.

"Father And Son" Will Open Run At Monarch Monday

Stories of the supreme sacrificing tendancy of mother love have long been the theme for motion pictures and fiction writers. Similar stories of paternal devotion have somehow been neglected. We often become a little conscience striken when we think of the inglorious reputation surrounding our male parent—a provider—that and nothing more. Rarely do we hear of him as a glorified person in the sense that he is confronted with a spiritual struggle which will allow him to make a martyre of himself for the sake of his child.

Columbia Pictures has taken this unusual theme for "Father and Son," a production synchronised with dialougue and music, which is coming to the Monarch theatre on Monday with Jack Holt, Dorothy Revier and Mickey McBan. The sacrifice Frank Fields, played by Jack Holt, is ready to undergo for his son, Jimmy, portrayed by Mickey McBan rivals in intensity any story of parental devotion that has ever been told.

BILLIE DOVE IN EMPRESS FILM

"The Other Tomorrow" Is Attraction Coming Next Monday

A village typical of the average small community in Georgia was constructed at Hollywood, Calif., at the studios of First National Pictures for "The Other Tomorrow" Billie Dove's newest picture, yhich opens Monday at the Empress theatre.

A film architect spent two weeks traveling through the Southern state and drawing plans of houses and streets of small towns. Back at the studio, he had a village set made that was the "average" of those he had seen, from the village church to the main street.

Constructing the set to be perfectly authentic was the idea of Lloyd Bacon, the director, who wanted to make the Octavus Roy Cohen story as true to life as it is possible to get such a tale in Hollywood. The paper and plaster town occupied as much ground as many a real Georgia community.

And, as in many a town below the Mason-Dixon line, the film plot unfolds. There is the girl whose beauty wins the love and gealousy of many men and whose pride will not permit her to "make up" after a quarrel with her sweetheart. There are the village gossips. There is the sheriff who prevents a murder. And there is the fued between two men which supplies much excitement to the plot.

"The Other Tomorrow" is one of the most dramatic vehicles beautiful Billie Dove has ever had. It is her first role as a Southern girl, and her fifth talking picture.

What Doeth The Little Busy Bee?

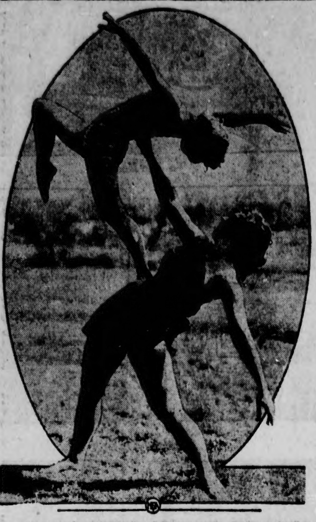
Thirty men had spent hours arranging the set for the take. Six players had rehearsed the same length of time. The director had lost ten pounds.

During the "take" the bee crawled into the microphone and buzzed around. The sound men tore out of their cage. The thumping of a bee when magnified one million times sounds like an artillery bombardment. The "shot" was ruined.

Co-eds Star In Classic Dances



Just a couple of University of Kansas co-eds staging a startling dance fantasy are these two girls. The "strong man" is Louise Allen of Topeka, president of the Tau Sigma honerary dancing sorority, who holds Dorothy Jane Bradshaw of Tulsa, Okla., a member. Both girls are sophomores.

"Cameo Kirby" For Empress Thursday

Irving Cummings blossomed out as stage director, dialogue writer and musical director in "Cameo Kirby," Fox Movietone romantic musical drama, the feature at the Empress starting next Thursday.

A veteran of the stage and a playwright, Cummings was well equipped to carry the multiple burden he has assumed on this beautiful costume play of the pre-Civil War days.

There are five songs in the audible screen version of the famous play by Booth Tarkington and Harry Leon Wilson. Several of them are regarded as sure fire song hits, including "Romance" a romantic ballad; "Home is Heaven," a negro song in the spiritpual style; "Tankard and Bowl," a drinking song, and "I'm a Peaceful Man," a comedy song sung by Stepin Fetchit.

Walter Donaldson and Edgar Leslie, famous Broadway song writers, and Ed. Brady and John Straus, are credited with the various song numbers.

J. Harold Murray and Norma Terris, recently recruited from the Broadway musical stage, are co-starred.

"Street Of Chance" Opens Engagement Dreamland Monday

William Powell, whose versatility is admired by millions of enthusiastic talking screen fans al lover the world is coming to the Dreamland theatre on Monday next in another of those splendid characterizations of his.

The picture, an all-dialogue Paramount release, is "The Street of Chance," an original story by Oliver H. P. Garrett, former star reporter of the New York World.

It is a picture in which "big time" professional gambling is held up to the mirror of reality. Powell is the central character, "Natural" Davis, lord of all gamblers, who nightly gather in green-shaded hotel rooms to stake their fortunes and sometimes their lives on the deal of a poker hand.

Powell is a lovable villain. Immersed as he is in the lawless swirl of poker cards, nevertheless he has a sympathetic spot in his case-hardened heart for Regis Toomey, his young brother. Powell pays thousands for the college education of his brother and thousands more to prevent the lad from following along the treacherous pathway that he himself has followed.

But in spite of Powell's efforts, Toomey gets involved in one of the biggest and most dangerous games on the street of chance. He is playing for high stakes with men who shoot faster than they think.

Inovation In Art Composing Music

"Give me about six more yards of that music!" shouted Luther Reed, director, during a rehearsal of "Dixiana."

The request marks an innovation in the art of composing music. The idea was born when, during a rehearsal, it was found that the song theme ran out before the players finished their lines.

"Six mord yards!" shouted Reed to Max Steiner, who was arranging the orchestration, "something we can chop off anywhere to make it fit."

"Aha!" retorted Steiner, "I should be a tailor as well as a musician."

Al Lost His Head In Film "Salome"

Hollywood film stars have a new game, originated during production of "The Fall Guy," a Radio Pictures comedy drama.

They tag their victim and ask: "What were YOU doing ten years ago?"

Al Roscoe, who plays a detective role, gave a snappy comeback.

"Ten years ago I was looking for my head which had just been cut off. I was leading man for Theda Bara in 'Salome.' I played 'John the Baptist.' However, I'm not the only bird that lost my head over Theda."

Ruggles To Direct For Radio Pictures

Wesley Ruggles will direct Radio Pictures' adaptation of "Cimarron," Edna Ferber's best-selling novel.

Miss Ferber's epic of the Oklahoma frontier is considered the ace directional assignment of the year at Radio Pictures' studios. Ruggles' successful direction of "Street Girl" and Ronald Colman's "Condemned," along with his intimate knowledge of Oklahoma backgrounds, won him the assignment.

Richard Dix heads an all-star cast.

PLUSH COVERED CUSPIDORS

The public will soon learn something iconoclastic about the fine genteel generation of 1840, that lived in the vicinity of New Orleans. Max Ree, R.K.O. art director, discovered in research that southern gentlemen used plush-covered cuspidors! No drawing room or library was complete without one. Such articles will be seen in "Dixiana," Radio Pictures' original operetta, starring Bebe Daniels.

MARSHALL MAKES STAGE DEBUT

Everett Marshall, Metropolitan Opera star under contract to Radio Pictures, made his first Los Angeles stage appearance at the Olympic Auditorium with Mme. Schumann-Heink, Marguerita Padula and other artists. He appeared in the interests of an American Legion benefit.

FINE MYSTERY FILM BOOKED FOR RIALTO

"Murder on the Roof" Is Opening Monday For Two-day Run

"Murder on the Roof," the famous story of New York night life, by Edward Doherty, which ran in the Liberty Magazine for ten weeks and was considered by that publication the greatest circulation builder since "Wings" has been brought to the screen by Columbia Pictures as a pretentious special. It is scheduled to play at the Rialto theatre, on Monday.

Doherty, the author, is one of the outstanding writers of short stories dealing wih the Gay White Way and the underworld of Manhattan. He spent several years of his life on Metropolitan dailies, where he rubbed shoulders with all strata of society. His characters are all drawn from life in a most realistic manner.

The film has been produced on an elaborate scale, with singing and dancing sequences. All the color, glamor and lure of the sparkling night life along Broadway, together with the adventures and thrills of racketeers has been included in the production. Members of the cast include, Dorothy Revier, Raymond Hatton and Margaret Livingston.

Short subjects include a reel of screen favorites, "The Voice of Hollywood," and a bright comedy, "Hotsy-Totsy."

This program will be played for two days only. From Wednesday until the end of the week, the feature will be "The Phantom of the Opera" with Lon Chaney and Mary Philbin as stars.

THE PAT REJOINDER

Pat O'Malley, film player, appearing in "The Fall Guy," Radio Pictures' comedy-drama, drives a Rolls Royce.

Why does he drive a Rolls Royce?

"Because," says he, "he is an Irishman, born and reared . . . . all his life he has longed to sit upon something English."

Buddy Rogers Star Of Princess Film Opening Monday

Every corner of the world has come to know Charles (Buddy) Rogers as a great dispenser of joyful entertainment and, in his latest action-romance, "Half Way to Heaven," which will show at the Princess theatre starting Monday for three days, he has the part which gives him all the opportunity he needs to amuse and thrill.

"Half Way to Heaven" brings Rogers to the all-talking screen as a youthful trapeze performer in a carnival. In this daring role, he falls in love with Jean Arthur his feminine partner whose charms have also catpured the heart of the third member of the act, Paul Lukas, a dangerous character whose fiery jealousy threatens even Rogers' life. Rogers' own skill and daring alone save him from Lukas' rage but Lukas vows to kill him while the trio are performing under the "big top."

The story comes to a smashing, hair-raising climax when Rogers, evading Lukas' attempt on his life, turns on the villain, beats him so severely that Lukas leaves the show and Rogers and Miss Arthur are free to continue their interesting romance.

Hard Boiled "Gob" To Be Seen At Gem

"Wise cracking" a comedy situation in a destroyer, while mal de mer looms in the imminent offing—that, says William Haines, is a form of the brand of heroism that the actor exhbits when he insists to his inner consciousness that the show must go on, regardless.

Haines admits that this heroism was his, due to a combination of Pacific ground swells, a light navy destroyer, and a heavy production schedule. It all happened in the making of "Navy Blues," his first Metro - Goldwyn - Mayer all-talking vehicle which will be shown Monday at the Gem theatre.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

IS BABY'S BATH A STRUGGLE, OR SPLASH AND GURGLE?

Baby's daily bath usually takes place one-half hour before his second morning feeding. It remains with the mother whether it will be a daily howl and struggle or a period of splash and gurgle.

All preparations for the bath should be completed before baby is taken from his bed. The water is drawn and the bath thermometer sunk into it to give an accurate idea of whether we are intending to wash baby or perchance scald him. The mother's hand is a poor index of the water's heat and a twenty-five cent thermometer will end all guessing. For the tiny baby 99 to 100 degrees is right; 98 to 99 for the older child.

In the toilet basket will be absorbent cotton, mineral oil, a bottle of salt water (one point water and one teaspoon of salt boiled and bottled), Castile, or other mild, white soap, some squares of cheesecloth and a can of baby powder.

Put a thick pad on the table or bed, put tub beside it, clothes in the order they are to be used and toilet basket, within reach.

Handle Baby Gently

Undress baby, handling him gently. The heavy-handed mother who pulls off baby's sleeves, and twists his tender arms, soon has baby screaming his natural resentment and injury, and the bath is started all wrong.

Wrap baby in a Turkish towel. Wash face with clear water and wipe dry. Put a drop of mineral oil on a tightly-twisted rod of cotton and drop in each nostril. Do this quickly and don't polk at baby's nose. He hates it. The crusts will soften and later can be wiped out easily. Wash head with soap and water, using good friction over top of head where dirt and scales so easily gather (due chiefly to mother's fear of touching the soft spot.)

Rinse head and wipe dry. Do not wash baby's mouth and if there are white spots in it (thrush), bring this to the attention of the doctor who will explain its cause and treat it before it spreads.

Tub Toys Keep Him Happy

Dip clean bits of cotton in salt water and wipe each eye from the inner to outer edge of eyelid. If there is any secretion in the eye this needs medical attention and is not to be treated at home. This may be a serious infection. Wash the outside but do not touch the inside of the ears.

Soap baby all over following these preliminaries and slip him into the tub. If he is manifestly afraid of being plunged into the water, stretch a towel over the top of the tub and ease him into the water gently. The towel will cover the bottom of the tub softly. Rinse him off, letting him splash and kick. If he is old enough, a few celluloid tub toys will keep his hands and eyes busy. Lift him out, pat him dry, rub creases lightly with mineral oil or powder, depending upon whether his skin is oily or dry. Dress him in only a few garments so that he may take that long nap for which you have been preparing him.

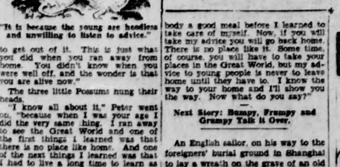
Little Stories for Bedtime

Peter Offers to Lead the Little 'Possums

By THORNTON BURGESS (Copyright)



"It is because the young are headless and unwilling to listen to advice."

Good advice is always needed
But also, is seldom heeded.

When the three little 'Possums, Bumpy, Frumpy and Grumpy, had told all their troubles to Peter Rabbit he sat for a long time in a brown study. Finally he spoke.

"Why don't you go back home?" he asked, and there was a twinkle in his eyes, for he knew very well why they didn't.

"We don't know the way," confessed Bumpy.

"You mean you are lost," said Peter.

"Ye-s," confessed Bumpy, slowly and reluctantly, "I suppose we are."

Peter looked very grave and tried to make his voice sound very serious as he replied. "This is what comes of being headstrong and thinking you know as much as your elders. I never knew it to fail, never! There are some of us who have been out in the Great World a long time, and we don't know all there is to know about it yet. My goodness, no! Why, I learn something every day. If I didn't keep my ears open and my eyes open every minute something would happen to me. The Great World is full of dangers. But if you know how to watch out for them it is not such a bad place. There are wonderful things to see and do, but the first and most important thing is to learn how to take care of yourselves and never do anything reckless."

To have heard him you would have thought that Peter never took chances but was a pattern of caution, whereas everybody knows he is often heedless and careless and almost every day has a narrow escape.

"It is because the young are heedless and never willing to listen to advice that so many of them never live to grow up," continued Peter. "They think they are just as smart as their elders, often a little smarter, and so they go ahead and run straight into trouble and are lucky if they live to get out of it. This is just what you did when you ran away from home. You didn't know when you were well off, and the wonder is that you are alive now."

The three little Possums hung their heads.

"I know all about it," Peter went on, "because when I was your age I did the very same thing. I ran away to see the Great World and one of the first things I learned was that there is no place like home. And one of the next things I learned was that I had to live a long time to learn as much as my father and mother knew."

"When you found that out did you go back home?" asked Frumpy.

Peter shook his head and the twinkle came back into his eyes.

"No," said he. "You see, I was ashamed to go back and admit that I had been foolish and silly. So I kept on learning the ways of the Great World and was lucky, very, very lucky, that I did not furnish somebody a good meal before I learned to take care of myself. Now, if you will take my advice you will go back home. There is no place like it. Some time, of course, you will have to take your places in the Great World, but my advice to young people is never to leave home until they have to. I know the way to your home and I'll show you the way. Now what do you say?"

Next Story: Bumpy, Frumpy and Grumpy Talk it Over.

An English sailor, on his way to the foreigners' burial ground in Shanghai to lay a wreath on the grave of an old comrade, met a native carrying a pot of rice. "Well, John," he hailed, "where are you going with that 'ere?"

"I takee put on glave of my fliend," said the Chinaman.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the sailor, "and when do you expect your friend to come up and eat it?"

"All time samee your fliend come up and smellee your flowers," replied John.

DOROTHY DIX

Folly of Using Marriage As An Escape from Fault-Finding Parents—Can a Man Be Really in Love With His Third Wife?—Children's Welfare Paramount

DEAR MISS DIX.—I am very unhappy at home. My mother is most devoted, but my father makes my life unbearable. He says he loves me and gives me plenty of money, two lovely cars and gorgeous clothes, yet I am never with him for an instant that he isn't finding fault with me. I have on too much rouge and lipstick, or my sorority is damned: something is the matter with all my friends. None pleases him. He tells me to get home by 12 o'clock when the dance doesn't begin until 11. The boy friend I have at present wants me to run off and get married. I don't know whether I love this boy or not, and he couldn't give me the luxuries I have now, but he could at least make me happy. Please tell me whether I should marry him, or put up with my father's terrible disposition. I will exactly follow your advice. BLUE EYES.

Answer:

Well, my child, if you take my advice, you will certainly not run off and marry this boy just to get away from your father. A lot of girls are silly enough to marry the first man who comes along to get away from unpleasant home conditions and they invariably find out that they have made a bad matter worse and jumped out of the frying pan into the fire, as the homely old adage puts it.

Don't think that fathers are the only ones who criticize and feel that they have a right to dictate to a girl about how much paint she shall put on and when she shall come home and what sort of friends she shall have. Why, fathers are perfect amateurs in fault finding compared to husbands. If you think that when you get married Friend Husband is going to give you the glad hand about everything you do, and not make a remark when you are 10 minutes late getting home, and that he is going to think that all the girls you go with are just too sweet for anything, you are due for a rude awakening.

Believe me, my dear, when you get a husband you will have a little critic on the hearth who will always be chirping, so don't run away from papa in the hopes of escaping that affliction. As long as a woman has any sort of man belonging to her, whether he is father, brother, husband or son, he will feel he has a perfect right to dictate to her about what sort of complexion she shall put on, and whether she shall bob her hair or wear it long, and what she shall generally do, or leave undone.

Men are simply built that way and they can't help it. I bet the first thing Adam said to Eve was that she had too much color on and didn't she think her hair would look tidier on the top of her head instead of hanging down.

Another reason why it would be foolish for you to elope with the boy whom you do not really love in order to get away from a home that is discordant is that the present unpleasant state of affairs is merely temporary, while if you make an unsuitable marriage your misery will be permanent.

At most, you will only have to endure your father's fault-finding for a few years. Then some man whom you love and who loves you, and who will be able to take care of you properly, will, in all probability, come along and you will marry him and be happy ever after. But if you marry a lad who isn't ready to marry and for whom you have no great affection, there is every chance in the world that you will plunge yourself into utter wretchedness that will end in divorce, and divorces are messy things at best.

Of course, your father is doing a very foolish thing in his ceaseless nagging of you. That is not the way to handle a young girl in these days, but perhaps you will have a little more patience with him and not feel so resentful toward him if you realize that the motive that actuates his fault-finding is jealousy. He adores you so much that he simply cannot endure the thought of your growing up and caring for some other man and marrying and leaving him.

He wants to keep you a little girl always, and that is why he hates to see you putting rouge and lipstick on. He is jealous of your having any outside interests and that is why he wails at your sorority. It stabs him to the heart to think of your getting married and that is why he can't endure any of your boy friends.

I heard a father once say that no lover ever endured such agonies of jealousy as he went through when his oldest daughter had her first date and stepped out to her first party with a boy. And many fathers are like that.

Instead of running away from father, why don't you try handling him with tact? Use the same technique upon him that you do upon the boys you go with. Jolly him a little. Laugh at him and tell him you know he wants you to have a good time and that he would feel awfully miffed if you sat at home while all the other girls were stepping out. After all, fathers are human and amenable to the same tactics to which other men succumb. So it is a real reflection on a girl's intelligence not to be able to handle papa.

Try this out on your piano and see how it works.

* * * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX.—A man who has lost two wives by death wants to marry me. Can a man have the same love for the third wife that he did for his first wife? G. L. J.

Answer:

How often a man can love depends upon the individual man. There are one-woman men who love only once and who give all the affection of which they are capable to one woman, but the great majority of men seem capable of loving as often as the occasion demands. Their hearts are like a hotel in which women are transient guests and as soon as one is gone the place she occupied is furbished up and ready for a newcomer.

Certainly I think a man can love a third wife as well as he did his first. Perhaps he can love her even better, but he loves her in a different way. You cannot carry the misty pink of the dawn into the prosaic light of midday, and so no man can ever bring to his second or third marriage the romance and the illusions that he did to his first. No other woman can ever be to him such a figure of mystery as his first bride. He can never go into any other marriage with such impossible hopes and ideals as he did into his first. His subsequent marriages are soberer, more practical affairs in which the head plays as great a part as the heart, and by that token they are generally happier than the first.

In considering how many times a man may love it must be borne in mind that he can love different women equally well for different reasons. He may have fallen in love with his first wife because she was pretty and sentimental and artless and ignorant. She may have been a cherished child-wife whose strongest appeal was to his gallantry and sense of protection and he may have felt a peculiar tenderness for her just because she was so helpless and incapable of taking care of herself.

But he may love a second wife equally well because she is strong and wise and capable and efficient and is a real helpmate who shoulders her half of the burden. He may find an unending delight in her companionship and like to pal with her because she is his mental equal.

And he may love a third wife as well as either of the other two because she is tender and affectionate and gives a warmth and softness to his life that he has never known.

So you needn't be afraid to be Mrs. Number Three. It is the last love that always counts with a man. DOROTHY DIX.

* * * * * * *

DEAR DOROTHY DIX.—I have a son who has been living with me all his life. He has five children, whose mother deserted them when they were babies. I have cared for them for five years. The oldest boy I raised from infancy. He is now 12 and I am devoted to him. Now my son has married again and he and his wife are planning to move into a home of their own and take the children with them, but I am unwilling to give up this oldest boy. His father says that he loves this child as much as he does the others and that he does not want to separate the family and that the boy would never regard him as his father if he gave him up. I say I have done enough for my son for him to let this boy stay with me, as I am getting old. Which one should have the boy? MRS. S. W. M.

Answer:

The thing to be considered in deciding this question is solely what is best for the child. Search your conscience, Mrs. S. W. M., and deal honestly with the subject.

Do you think that a doting grandmother is fitted to bring up a boy? Can you discipline him, or will you spoil him? Don't you think that the difference between the age of a grandparent and a young child is too great for them to meet on a common plane, and for that reason aren't grandparents either likely to be too lax or too severe? Don't you think that a boy entering his 'teens needs a father's strong hand over him and the contact with other children that he would miss if he was brought up alone?

Consider the question from the boy's side alone and I think that you will see that he will be better off with the family group than he will if he is brought up just by himself. DOROTHY DIX.

DOMINION ANGLICAN MEET

Women of the Maritime Provinces are particularly interested in the annual meeting of the Dominion Women's Auxiliary of the Anglican church, which is to meet in Saint John, N.B., in 1931. The invitation for the meeting was extended by Mrs James F. Robertson, of Saint John, when she attended the Dominion executive meeting in Quebec.

SILK COATS

Black and navy blue faille and crepe coats are getting into the fashion parade. If you haven't rid your soul yet of the cape complex, treat yourself to a silk coat with a cape. It one is superior for chic and jauntiness.

FUR SCARFS

There is a deceiving casualness in the new fur scarfs that tie and bow up under the chin, just like silk. You must learn just how to tie them and never deviate from the dictated mode.

DULL HOSIERY

It no longer is considered au fait to let your legs shine. Helping out the long skirts in this matter are dull creepy weave silk hosiery.

WRAPPING COAT

A new Vionnet coat of beige wool, has a most fascinating cut and wraps across the front to fasten, diagonally across the side. Its narrow belt is attached across the back and ties shut.

BEAUTIFUL HAIR

The first requisite in any beauty program is absolute cleanliness. The woman whose body is always scrupulously clean, whose nails are never marred by one bit of soil and whose scalp and hair are as immaculate as the rest of her body is usually the woman who retains her youthful beauty longest. For one bit of carelessness in care of the skin, care of the hair and scalp or of the hands and nails takes its toll as loss of beauty. It takes a long time to bring skin coarsened by grime and dirt back to a lovely, fine texture. Because hair which has lost its life and luster through lack of care doesn't come back to its lovely sheen very quickly, it behooves every one to make cleanliness the first law in the quest for beauty.

If one examines the hair under a microscope it will be easily seen why it is sometimes difficult to get the hair thoroughly clean. Each hair, instead of having a smooth surface as it appears to the naked eye, is sheathed in minute scales somewhat resembling the shingles on a roof. It is under these little scales that oil, grime and dandruff lodge, and unless they are removed by very careful shampooing the grime becomes lodged there so firmly that cleansing is not very easy. Harsh as it may sound, lack of cleanliness is one of the most frequent causes of hair losing its sheen and gloss; therefore, its beauty.

When these little scales on each hair are clean, the light striking them has the same effect as when it shines in a rare jewel—the result is a gleam and light from the hair. On the other hand, if dirt has become lodged in the hair there will be no gleam or gloss and the hair assumes that dull, drab, lusterless appearance which is detrimental to its beauty and soon results in the hair becoming faded, brittle and lifeless.

Brush the hair for several minutes every night and morning, using a brush with long bristles that will penetrate through the hair. Massage the scalp with the fingertips, moving the scalp itself to stimulate the circulation of blood. Shampoo at regular intervals, using a mild liquid shampoo mixture, such as pure Castile soap liquid, olive oil, cocoanut oil or liquid tar soap. There are many good shampoos on the market and it will be found that pure Castile soap liquid is always a reliable shampoo. The olive oil in this soap gets down into the indentations on each hair shaft and loosens the particles of dust and grime.

The first step in the shampoo is massage. Massage the scalp thoroughly for at least five minutes, then brush the hair itself for several minutes. Next wet the hair with warm water and mix the liquid shampoo with warm water to make a good lather. Apply the soap lather to the hair rubbing it well into the roots of the hair. Rinse off the first soap lathering with warm water; apply another application and proceed as before. Two, three or more applications of the liquid shampoo should be used, depending upon the condition of the hair. Oily hair needs more soapings and so do scalps with excessive dandruff. Rinse the hair thoroughly after each application of the shampoo mixture. Finally, rinse the hair in three or four waters, using any special rinse that the type of hair and color calls for. Dry the hair well by hand, using warm towels and massaging the scalp with the fingertips. Shake the hair, bending over from the waist and throwing the hair over the face, and give it an air and sun bath if possible. Those whose hair has a tendency to be dry will find it a good plan to rub warm olive oil into the scalp before and after the shampoo, as this will replenish the supply of natural oil and lubricate the hair.

SUNDAY AFTERNOON BIRTHDAY CELEBRATION

Questions—Mr. and Mrs. X. wish to give a birthday party for their 17-year-old daughter. She would like to have her classmates present, but some of them take music lessons on Saturday afternoons or on Friday evenings, when there is no home study. Would it be all right to have the celebration on Sunday afternoon, as that is the exact birthdate? What entertainment and refreshments could be offered to the young guests? Should a birthday be mentioned in the invitations or not?"

Answers—If agreeable to all, Sunday afternoon is a nice, homey time to have a birthday party. It is not customary to have dancing, cards or other games on Sunday, but nobody can object to good music. Generally, young people find so much to talk about that no set form of entertainment need be provided.

Boys and girls appreciate homemade cake, frosted chocolate, ice cream and candy, all of which may be passed around among the guests.

Because it suggests the expectation of presents, mention of a birthday should be omitted when writing invitations.

HEAT THE REAL TEST OF A REFRIGERATOR
FRIGIDAIRE is built to withstand HEAT
BURNING HOT

Heat is a real test of an electric refrigerator

The surface of the cabinet is so hot it will burn your hand yet the temperature inside is 45°

Come in and see this amazing demonstration" See Frigidaire put to the heat test

No matter how hot the kitchen or the weather, Frigidaire has the surplus power to keep your food safely cold. It has the power to freeze ice cubes and desserts quickly.

Frigidaire Porcelain-on-steel won't peel or blister . . . even when heat is applied direct. Even if your Frigidaire is placed beside the kitchen stove the finish stays beautiful. Frigidaire Porcelain-on-steel is the most permanent refrigerator finish yet discovered.

The mechanical unit is in the bottom where the air is coolest. It operates inexpensively in the warmest room or on the hottest day.

Frigidaire insulation keeps the heat out and the cold in—reducing operating costs.

this is ONE reason why

FRIGIDAIRE is sold with a definite guarantee, backed by General Motors. And still more important to you as a purchaser is the fact that year after year Frigidaire continues to give satisfaction—long after the guarantee has expired. If service should be required it is rendered instantly and without removing the machine from the premises.

Lady Strathcona Lodge Entertains 200 at Banquet

A very successful supper was arranged by Lady Strathcona Lodge No. 138, L.O.B.A., in the Orange Hall, South side, on Friday evening when over two hundred members and friends were in attendance. The reception rooms and tables were beautifully decorated in spring flowers. The program included violin selections by Lester Darby, accompanied by Miss Tonstad and Mr. Neilson; vocal solos by Miss Dorothy Blackwell and Mrs. Clark; comic songs by Mr. Ratcliffe, who also sang in duet with Miss Blackwell; solo by little Billy Griffith, and piano selections by Miss Edna Giles, and Scottish dancing by Miss Rita Scott. Mr. C. Sayle acted as chairman; Mr. T. Smith accompanied the soloists; Mrs. J. Adamson played for the community singing. Mr. J. Wyler was master of ceremonies for the dinner. Mrs. J. Murray was the capable convener of the committee, which included Mrs. H. Spicer, Mrs. D. Forbes, Mrs. W. Murray, Mrs. A. V. Lord, Mrs. J. Goddard, Mrs. Collier, Mrs. Ward, Mrs. Waring, Mrs. Grathan, Mrs. Jackson, Mrs. Martin, Mrs. Davies, Mrs. A. Girvan, Mrs. Adamson, Miss Molly Martin, Miss Ella Murray.

Keeping Baby Lovely and Well

Some babies thrive from the hour of their birth while others make so little progress as to be the cause of much anxiety. As a rule it is the digestion that is at fault with these backward ones and they start to go ahead directly Baby's Own Tablets are made the corrective of their stomach and bowel troubles.

Baby's Own Tablets are specially designed for the use of babies and little children. They are absolutely safe and the mother can feel perfectly secure in giving them to even the most delicate child. They are a mild but thorough laxative which banish constipation and indigestion; break up colds and simple fevers and allay the pains which accompany the cutting of teeth. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"Sweet Lavender" Is One of Season's Best Productions

All Saints' Choir Present Well-loved Play Friday Evening

One of the most artistic and best balanced productions seen on the local amateur stage for not a few years was witnessed at All Saints' Parish Hall on Friday evening when, under the auspices of the Pro-Cathedral choir, a performance of Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's play "Sweet Lavender" was given.

There was about the whole production an atmosphere that smacked more of the professional than the amateur stage. There was an understanding of the lines and characters on the part of all players that testified to assiduous study and painstaking direction.

This was not altogether unexpected, as most of the players had previously appeared in the same play, while several are veterans in stage work.

However, in this world, results count and the result in this instance was eminently satisfactory.

All members of the cast are members of the cathedral choir, which is another fact worth noting.

The performance commenced on time and ended at a reasonable hour, while the whole proceeded with exceptional smoothness.

Etta Manuel Petch as Lavender gave a splendid performance which gave unmistakable signs of rapid artistic strides. Alan H. Petch as Clement Hale was at his best and seldom in his long and honorable career on the stage has he been seen to better advantage.

Helen Bryson as Ninnie Gilfillian is a find in theatrical circles of whom more, undoubtedly, will be heard. Mavis Spilsted as Ruth Holt was convincing at all times. Phyllis Tate as Mrs. Gilfillian acted her difficult role with no little artistry.

Vernon W. Barford as Richard Fennel read his lines flawlessly and with a well-controlled and modulated voice that proved highly effective.

Elmyr Stutchbury as Horace Breen reached new histrionic heights with a convincing characterization. R. P. D'Alton as Geoffrey Weatherburn would have been difficult to improve upon. C. F. Sweetlove as D. Delaney, C. H. Norminton as Mr. Maw and Tommy Barford as Mr. Bulger all contributed in no small measure to the success of the evening.

"Sweet Lavender" will be repeated on Saturday evening in aid of the choir festival fund. —J. O.

Women's Institute Hears Address On Growing of Roses

Mr. H. W. Stiles, president of the Edmonton Horticultural Society, was the speaker at a largely attended meeting of the Women's Institute in the Y. W. C. A. on Friday evening, when he gave an address on "Rose Culture". Relating his subject particularly to the growing of roses in northern Alberta, the speaker gave in a graphic manner an account of the most approved methods of planting, pruning, fertilizing and winter care of these blossoms. He also traced in an interesting manner the history of the tea rose since its introduction into England from China in 1810 to the glowing specimen of today.

Mr. Stiles concluded with an appeal for the co-operation of the women of the city in the constant efforts of the Horticultural Society to inculcate in children a love of beautiful surroundings, and particularly a love of trees on the boulevard.

Mrs. W. A. Flack introduced the speaker and Mrs. A. R. Walsh expressed the appreciation of the club. Mrs. A. C. Rankin was appointed delegate to the provincial meeting in Calgary May 20 to 23. Mrs. D. J. Maddocks was re-elected associate director of the Exhibition board. Mrs. McCormick, the treasurer, reported on contributions sent in for the Mrs. McKinney portrait fund. It was announced that Mrs. Montgomery, the provincial president, would be in town from Wetaskiwin for the June meeting, when a special program will be prepared.

Taylor-Trunks Full of Hope for Coming Game With Grads

With great hopes of defeating the Grads at the forthcoming games, the Taylor Trunks arrived from Chicago on Friday afternoon. All the members of the team are in wonderful condition, the captain, Miss Elizabeth Falbisaner, reports, and are anxious to play the Grads again. The trip out was full of wonders to those who had not been here before, Miss Kathie Martin, Miss Hazel Kelstrum, Miss May Wiese, and Miss Mary Killens. The captain has played in Edmonton before with the other members of the team, who are Miss Marie Curtain, Miss Dorothy Bernard, Miss Ella Smith, and Miss Violet Krubaech.

Interest in basketball is very keen in the Windy City, they report, although the season really closed a month ago.

Marion Mitchell Becomes Bride of Julian Garrett

High Noon Ceremony Performed at Mr. Justice Mitchell's Residence Today of Interest to Society

MRS. JULIAN GARRETT

The home of Hon. Mr. Justice Mitchell was the scene of an interesting wedding at high noon on Saturday, when Miss Marion Isobel Mitchell, daughter of Mr. Clarence Mitchell, of Vancouver, and the late Mrs. Mitchell, became the bride of Mr. Julian Garrett. Rev. Thomas Mitchell, of Robertson United church, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate members of the family.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Justice Mitchell, was lovely in a three-piece ensemble of powder blue with her hat and other accesories of egg shell shade. Her corsage bouquet was of ophelia roses, forget-me-nots and lily of the valley.

Following the wedding luncheon, at which Mrs. W. J. A. Mustard assisted her uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Garrett left on a motor trip to Portland and Vancouver, later to take the boat trip to Stewart, B.C. For travelling the bride chose a sport suit of dove grey, over which was worn a coat of the same shade with a silver fox collar. Mr. and Mrs. Garrett will be in town again about the middle of June.

Well-Known Canadian Writer Is Visitor In City Friday

A Canadian writer of note in the historical field as well as in the realm of poetry and women's activities visited Edmonton on Friday in the person of Mrs. F. N. Sherk, who was en route from Vancouver to her home in Winnipeg. Mrs. Sherk was for ten years historian of the Canadian Women's Press Club, and thus acquired an extensive knowledge of Canadians and their works in the field of literature and the press. She is at present at work on an amazing book of early days in the Hudson's Bay Company, which has received the sanction of Governor Sale of the Hudson's Bay Company and is the story of life in the Red River settlement and the Selkirk settlement and other posts from 1820 to 1874. The material is made up of original letters, not only of such men as Donald Ross, chief factor at Norway House, and other important men of the time, but of Europeans to these far-away friends, telling something of the life of the day in cosmopolitan capitals of the world.

How She Discovered Letters

Mrs. Sherk tells in an interesting manner of her discovery of the letters which are very valuable. She had been working for the Smithsonian Institute in Washington, for which she has done considerable research, and the desire for a biography of the late Donald Ross, the famous old factor, was expressed.

After three years' effort Mrs. Sherk finally obtained the letters, which were tied up in the old-fashioned leg-o-mutton sleeve of a dress that had not seen the light of day for many years. The discovery proved invaluable as a new light on the early authentic happenings in the west.

One of the interesting facts brought to light by the letters, says Mrs. Sherk, is that much of the Canadian Pacific coast would have belonged to the United States today but for the efforts of the Hudson's Bay company.

Mr. W. E. Ingersoll, who won the short story prize in McLean's last year, is writing the foreword to the book, which will be published by Dent and Sons in the autumn.

Mrs. Sherk is contributing a number of articles on the letters to the Winnipeg Free Press, and Mr. W. J. Dafoe is very interested in the discovery.

Interested In Aviation

This "grand old lady of the press club" who is 73, was for many years editor of the woman's section of the Fort William Times-Journal, and is well-known as a poet in the dominion. Her book "The Work Shops" is known to many.

She wears the decoration of Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, upon which Lady Willingdon commented, saying it was seldom seen in Canada.

One of her cherished possessions is a certificate which tells for an airflight over Baltimore on October 19, 1928, and she expresses her keen interest in aviation.

Rheumatic Victim For Sixeen Years

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Restored Her Health

Rheumatism is a disorder of the blood. Wet, cold weather may aggravate it but that is not the cause. Bad blood charged with uric acid is the reason. Re-build the blood and rheumatism will disappear. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills enrich and purify the blood and that makes good health.

Mrs. John C. McPherson, St. Mary's Ont., writes:—"For sixteen years I was a victim of rheumatism. For eleven years I was unable to walk. Massage and chiropractic treatment failed. I was utterly discouraged till I heard how strongly Dr. Williams' Pink Pills were recommended for cases like mine. I began their use and in a few weeks the pain lessened, my appetite and color improved, and now I am able to do light housework. It is wonderful what these pills have done for me."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills do one thing but they do it well—they enrich and purify the blood. This rich blood banishes rheumatism, sciatica, neuralga and neuritis and promotes health and strength. The Pills are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Should Married Women Hold Jobs?

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

The time is rapidly approaching when ALL women will be wage-earners, in one way or another, and an idle, parasite woman will be regarded with the same contempt and surprise that we feel now for an idle man.

How many women are actually making a success of home-making and job-holding, both at once? Not many, says Miss Frances Perkins, an Industrial Labor Commissioner in the State of New York.

Miss Perkins says that any woman who goes out of her home to earn money and cannot make at least $3,500 a year, is an economic failure, and has no place in business. She has to spend that much for increased household expenses and extra help at home, Miss Perkins says.

My own opinion would be the exact opposite. It seems to me that the very—the VERY few women who could earn that much money would be too small a minority to talk about and that the success of hundreds—of thousands of women who are combining home duties—jobs as wives and mothers, with lucrative outside work, at wages much less than three hundred a month, are an answer to anyone who questions the efficiency of the arrangement.

Indeed, I would go further. I would go far enough to say that the time is rapidly approaching when ALL women will be wage-earners, in one way or another, and an idle, parasite woman will be regarded with the same contempt and surprise that we feel now for an idle man.

Even when the children of the family are small, there are but a few years when their mother ought not have some outside interest. The slaving, drudging, all-enduring mother has gone quietly out of fashion; she does not belong in today's scheme, and her children are not reared to fit into it either. From babyhood, they are happier and better behaved, and given a better chance generally, when Mother delegates some of her duties to the right person, for a few hours a day. Many mothers today deliberately do so, going away from home, just as Dad does, daily, only for a shorter time—and spending all the money they earn on the office suit, the cleaner's bill, the motor car that takes them to and fro, and the helper's salary.

Nurses today are not what they were thirty years ago. The cruel, stupid, ignorant, and sometimes child-hating, women to whom our mothers and grandmothers cheerfully delegated their offspring truly WERE evil influences—our tired, nervous, sometimes equally-ignorant mothers were far better for us than they were.

But today the care of children, and the understanding of children, has been infinitely raised and standardized. Crying babies are no longer given "sugar-sucks" or slippery medicine at the first whimper; pallid little pimply boys don't dine on hot biscuits, veal, and bananas. Fits and convulsions and hip disease and crossed-eyes and "crankiness" have departed from the nursery. A dumb, bewildered, foreign-born peasant no longer whips and shakes our children into obedience and terror. They know about spinach and naps and baked prunes and all the rest of it, now.

And with all this ritual of carefully-prepared meals, pleasant voices, efforts to understand and persuade, rather than bully and beat developing little souls and bodies, the undertaking has grown much too complicated for any one woman to handle. The mother who shuts herself up in a house or an apartment today, and devotes herself to a racketing, spirited boy of 5, and girls of 3 and 2, is a foolish woman. Her nerves and the children's will pay for this blind and stubborn adhesion to an outgrown custom,—this determination to put new wine into old bottles. It can't be done.

In the old slipshod days children could scramble up, in the average middle-income home, without worrying their elders overmuch. They ate whatever they liked, fought, wept, developed all sorts of undesirable traits, like teaching and sensitiveness and jealousy, spoiled their nerves, digestions and tempers. Mother never worried about these things because she was too busy baking, sewing, feeding chickens, putting up fruit. Children were often "pests," and "bothers" and "nuisances" to her, but she did not take them very seriously.

Today she DOES take them seriously, and they are correspondingly healthier, happier, saner. Today her house is equipped with a thousand conveniences of which her own mother never dreamed, and the housekeeping that used to fill the entire day can be done in a few hours. No grimed wooden floors to scrub, no half-acre kitchens to clean, no oil lamps to fill or ashes to shovel out of a filthy stove, no old wooden dresses to sponge and rip and press, no vegetables to water and gather and shell and cook, no lard to try out, or country boots to grease, with telephone and ice-machine, quick grocery delivery in clean grocery packages—today's housekeeper can reduce her duties to a matter of minutes, if she will.

And she can find some good woman in the neighborhood to run the children for four hours—five hours, with great benefits not only to the older, poorer, simpler woman but to the children and Mother too. Mother appreciates home and babies a hundred times more gratefully, when she has to go away from them for awhile, and when she comes back tired and cold and hungry to their affectionate welcome. They like to have news, and reports, and questions, and surprises for Mother. Dad likes Mother's new interest and widened viewpoint. Mrs. O'Brien likes the $15 a week, and the part-time employer likes to get hold of a woman of Mother's intelligence and character to run his cash register, or his linen room, or his renting agency.

That's the actual, practical situation, and no amount of newspaper suggestion from Labor Commissioners will affect it. Every year more young girls continue a long-drawn education, follow up high school with college, or with years of special study in music or the professions, and every year more married women step over the threshold of home and begin to explore the neighborhood for new paths of money-making.

A Chicago woman who employs about 300 other women told me last year that half her "girls" were married, keeping homes and raising children.

"Menace to marriage?" she echoed my question surprisedly. "Why, on the contrary, it's one of the real safeguards. Busy, interested, happy women don't get divorces, and when a woman has a home, a husband, a baby and a job she has everything life is going to offer her!"

There's that side to it, obviously. And there is the further consideration that part-time jobs make earlier marriage possible, and early marriage, to my thinking anyway, would be an unmixed blessing to the nation. A young husband's sense of burden and responsibility is infinitely lessened when he has a wife who enjoys work, who knows the value of money, whose determination to make the venture a financial success is equal to his own.

It won't be half as tiring to either one, believe me, as the jazzing, speeding, drinking, night-club type of honeymoon is—it won't take the part-time-working-wife away from home any more than beauty parlors, bridge luncheons, movies and matinees take the women who criticize and condemn her. Indeed, if I had a girl of 18 or 20 to settle in life today, I would infinitely rather see her marrying young, marrying a poor man, taking on, almost immediately, some part-time work, going home to serve the partly-prepared dinner, at five o'clock, and spending her evening in comfortable weariness, over a book and beside a radio, until time to turn in at nine or ten—infinitely rather have her pattern her life on this sort of scheme, than to have her put off her marriage until her young man was making enough to take care of her and the car and the servants and the night-life, too, or have her marry only to run into discontent and debt and fretful idleness.

Looking back, from middle-age, one doesn't see much to envy, in the average marriage of today, with all its noise and extravagance, its silver hip-flasks and red roadsters, its $4 silk stockings and $3 lipstick; its empty, shallow, brainless competition with all sorts of empty, brainless, shallow ideals.

But to marry young and poor—ah, that remains the great adventure! To work out one's own plan, independent of the jealously watchful eyes and the superficial criticisms—to have a budget and a savings account, to have originality and independence about the whole thing—that's LIFE.

After awhile, like an Indian woman when the tribe is on the march, perhaps the young wife drops by the wayside for a few months. But presently she is back in line again, all the more vital, and confident, and happy because the new firm has a third member who must be budgetted and systematized into the scheme.

Thirty-five hundred a year! Why none of us would ever have gotten started at all if we had had to wait for that income, or half of it! A sister of mine, 17 years old, started to help OUR family budget, in 1900, on the modest salary of $60 a year—and DID help it, too. Even $20 a month is a big help; $50 a month takes care of the grocery and milk and meat bills. By this time any woman reaches the $3,500 a year mark she doesn't need any advice from anybody—she is probably making twice what her husband does.

Meanwhile, my advice to any young mother who finds the care of even the most adorable babies something of a nerve-strain, day out and day in, is simply this—get a part-time job.

Mrs. Norris Says

The time is rapidly approaching when all women will be wage-earners, in some way or another, and an idle, parasite woman will be regarded with the same contempt and surprise that we feel now for an idle man.

Even when the children of the family are small, there are but a few years when their mother ought not to have some outside interest. The slaving, drudging, all-enduring mother has gone quietly out of fashion.

Lady Alice Mason Dies in Toronto

Canadian Press

TORONTO, Ont., May 3.—Following several weeks' illness the death occurred recently of Lady Alice Melisse Mason, wife of Sir Alfred Bishop Morine, K.C., Belaise Drive, former minister of justice and leader of the government party in Newfoundland legislative council. Her ladyship was born in Halifax N.S., 70 years ago, where she was educated. She was married at St. John's, Newfoundland. With Sir Alfred she attended the Imperial Conference in London, England in 1926. An Anglican, she was keenly interested in all the activities of the church. An enthusiastic sportswomen and angler she accompanied her husband on his salmon fishing trips. She maintained active interest in public affairs and by her charming and affable manner won an enviable reputation as a gracious hostess. At one period of her career she took active interest in the I.O.D.E. Besides her husband, one son, A. Mevinne Morine, barrister, Toronto, and one daughter, Mrs. P. H. Ross of New York, and six grandchildren survive.

MEMORIAL TO BLISS CARMAN

Mrs. H. F. McLeod, of Fredericton, N.B., was elected president of the New Brunswick chapter of the I. O. D. E. at the annual meeting in Saint John recently. A committee was authorized to act in purchasing a memorial tablet to be placed by the chapter on the boyhood house of Bliss Carman in Fredericton.

DON'T IGNORE WARNING SIGNALS

Headaches, Listlessness, Bad Breath, Backaches, Indigestion—Stop Them with Kellogg's ALL-BRAN

This is a serious matter. You must conquer constipation! Stop it at once before its poisons get in their deadly work.

Nearly 90% of all sickness has its origin in irregular elimination. If you neglect the symptoms—constant fatigue, bad breath, headaches and coated tongue—you may be laying yourself open to permanent ill-health.

There's a natural, easy way to free yourself from this terrible scourge once and forever. By eating regularly a delicious cereal—Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. Physicians recommend ALL-BRAN because its action is different from pills and drugs. Ordinary cathartics give only temporary relief, and are often habit-forming.

ALL-BRAN acts naturally, gently. Its roughage sweeps the system clean of poisonous wastes and impurities.

And ALL-BRAN is a great aid to health in other ways. It contains abundant iron which enriches the blood, builds strength and the glowing color of health. With milk or cream—or in fruit juices—it brings important vitamins to the diet.

You'll find the flavor of ALL-BRAN delightful. A crisp, ready-to-eat cereal, with a nut-like flavor.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is guaranteed to keep you free from both temporary and recurring constipation if you eat it according to directions on every package.

Ignoring constipation is like playing with dynamite. Start serving Kellogg's ALL-BRAN now. Sold by all grocers in the red-and-green package. It is served in restaurants, hotels and dining-cars. Ask for it by name.

Hello, Folks!

According to a fashion expert musical gowns, embroidered with all the notes of the scale, are again fashionable in London. Our office cynic says they probably call 'em musical gowns because hubby makes a song about them when he gets the bill.

Well, we can imagine a lady in a musical gown replying in a quevering voice when her husband gets crotchety.

And of course when dressing for a party it would be quite in order for hubby to tell wifie to B sharp.

Naturally these musical gowns will be very toney.

They will certainly be trimmed on a scale never before attempted.

And we'll bet as far as father is concerned the chief note will be doh!

Still, if these musical gowns are no longer than the present ones, there won't be much to make a song about, will there?

It goes without saying that they will be fastened with chords.

And there is just a possibility that if hubby pays up and looks big they will lead to closer harmony in the home.

Li'l Goldilocks, our office vamp, says she hopes they won't be as tight as her present ones or she won't be able to breve in 'em.

BALLAD OF LIPSTICK
(On which we got stuck)

O lady of the laughing lips,
(More scarlet than the reddest rose
From which the bee the honey sips),
Dare I your secret to disclose
To sheiks on whom you now impose,
Who hang around in dalliance,
Methinks they'd say to you "and so's
Your old man," and off would dance.

O lady heed not scornful quips
About your most retrousse nose;
And though it really upwards tips,
You still have your fair share of beaux,
Despite your critics and your foes.
But if your secret, I perchance,
Should give away, ah, then, your woes,
I fear I greatly should enhance.

A kiss in honeyed sweetness drips;
(How often goodness only knows)
A sweetness that's laid on it strips,
As you before the mirror pose,
Ah, sad it is, but so it goes,
And I can see with half a glance,
When I'm not gazing at your hose,
Just how you lead the boys a dance

L'ENVOI

Princess, this song my rhyming strips,
Your secret's safe from poet's lance.
Ballade of lipstick halts and trips,
Though painted beauty still may prance.

PLANS GETTING UNDER WAY TO TAKE FIGURES

Assessor Thinks Returns Will be Completed by Early June

Estimates as to Edmonton's present actual population are exercising the minds of local citizens now the annual civic census is under way. Those who are making wagers with friends on the matter would be well advised to base their estimates on a probable population of 78,500, judging from statistics issued at the civic block Saturday.

For the past week the staff of Thomas Walker, city assessor and tax collector, has been busy making preliminary preparations for the census and next week the census takers, numbering in the neighborhood of 30, will commence their work.

Walker Declines

Interviewed Friday Mr. Walker declined to guess the city's 1930 population put pointed out that the figure would be the city's actual population, exclusive of transients, hospital or school attendance, and would bear no relation to "directory" figures. He estimated that returns would be completed early in June.

In 1929 the city's actual population was 74,298, in 1928, 69,744, and in 1927, 67,083. It is within the bounds of probability that 1930 will show an increase over 1929 at least as great as 1929 showed over 1928.

In 1929 the natural increase of population, as shown by the numbers of births over the total deaths, amounted to 927, as 1,650 births and 623 deaths were recorded that year. During the first three months of this year the natural increase was 315, latest returns showing 567 births and 252 deaths reported in that period.

Good Barometer

A reliable barometer of population growth is shown in building permits for residential buildings. In 1929 construction of 418 new dwellings and one apartment block was authorized, compared with 298 dwellings in 1928 So far this year permits for 108 new dwellings have already been issued.

Further evidence of the city's growth in population is shown by the fact that 17,008 water services are in use at the present time, compared with 16,969 at this time last year, 20,008 electric light and power meters, as against 19,380 at May 1, 1929, and 16,623 telephones, compared with 15,889 at the corresponding time last year.

What Happened In Police Court

Frank Bentley was fined $15 and costs, with the option of 15 days in jail, when he appeared before Magistrate G. B. McLeod in city police court on Saturday on a charge of negligent driving.

Albert J. Cardinell was given seven days in jail on a charge of driving an auto while intoxicated.

Elijah A. Cobb, colored, "divine healer," was granted his umpteenth adjournment on a charge of a breach of the Medical Professions Act, until May 10.

Alex. Pedro and Mike Polchuk were granted a further adjournment until May 7.

Simpson Ryric, who pleaded guilty to an unnatural act some time ago, was granted a further adjournment until May 10.

Mineral Locators Chief Goes North

For the purpose of commencing the season's operations in the north, J. D. Nicholson, field manager for the Mineral Belt Locators, which has its head office at Edmonton, will leave the city on Tuesday next, accompanied by four men and with an outfit of two canoes and supplies. The journey north would have been made by airplane only the season has not yet sufficiently advanced to allow the use of pontoons.

Mr. Nicholson will return to Edmonton about June 1, after getting work under way in opening up one of the company's claims on the north shore of Lake Athabasca, which is believed to contain a very rich copper deposit. The journey out from McMurray will be made by water as far as possible, the party hoping to make use of the open water which may be found near the shore line, although the ice has not yet gone out of the lakes and river.

Extensions of sewer and water services to serve the block between 108 and 109 avenues and 109 and 110 streets, in which the Separate school board proposed to locate a new school building, will cost $1,100, according to Commissioner David Mitchell. The commissioner said the closing of a lane was also involved, and the whole matter would be decided at a later date.

Liberals Showing Keen Interest In Coming Election

Speakers Condemn P.R. System For Cities—Howson Says Debt of Province Has Increased Too Much

Indicative of the interest that will be taken in the forthcoming provincial election, a crowded house assembled for the Liberal rally held at St Faith's hall, Alberta avenue, on Friday night, under the presidency of A. R McLennan. Both federal and provincial politics were dealt with, and the budget proposals were highly eulogized.

"It is the Liberal policy," emphasized the chairman, "of meeting conditions as they find them."

Speaker after speaker addressed himself to assailing "class" administration in Alberta, and in initiating the attack the chairman asked what, during his years of office, the attorney-general had done for Edmonton, which he was directly representing?

Scores P.R.

The iniquity of the proportional system of voting in the case of the cities was the theme of W Rea, who contended that the government had no mandate to inflict the system on the cities.

Referring to the great interest now being shown in connection with the provincial election, R. McLaughlin predicted that it will lead to increased representation by Liberals in the provincial house and greatly increased prestige in the province. The present government, he claimed, did not represent the citizens as a whole.

Turning to federal affairs, Mr. McLaughlin said that the budget was being referred to as an election budget, but he asked where it differed from other budgets brought down by the Liberal government, which had always stood for reduced debt and taxation.

"We are proud to be supporters of the party that has governed Canada during the last eight years," said W. W. Prevey, M.L.A. In connection with the acquiring of the natural resources by the province the speaker claimed that the Liberal government at Ottawa had made it possible for the province to obtain the resources on better terms than some time ago the province was willing to accept.

Debt Increases

W. Howson declared there had been a tremendous increase in the debt of the province in the past few years, and Captain J. C. Bowen held that Premier Brownlee was asking for a mandate to administer the natural resources with the same reckless expenditure that had characterized the past few years.

J. T. J. Collisson claimed that the government was out of touch with the aspirations of the people, and Gerald V Pelton argued that the knowledge that a farmer government was in power had kept capital from investing in Alberta.

During the evening a program was contributed by Miss E. Douglas, Miss Winnie Crowther, A. Thomas, Miss Mabel Strutt, Mrs. Ridgway and H. Van Buskirk.

Road Log for Motorists - -

Reports on road conditions at various points in the province were received by the Edmonton office of the Alberta Motor Association Saturday morning as follows:

Edmonton to Athabasca and Peace River—Gravelled section to Clyde, good. Athabasca to Peace River, now open to traffic and in fair condition.

Edmonton to Lloydminster—The gravelled section to Vegreville, good. Vegreville to Vermilion, good. Vermilion to Lloydminster quite dry but rough. Lloydminster to North Battleford, dry but rough.

Edmonton to Wainwright—Gravelled to Cooking Lake, good. Cooking Lake to Viking, fair. Viking to Wainwright, dry but rough. Wainwright to Chauvin, fair.

Edmonton to Camrose—Gravelled section to Camrose, good. Camrose to Killam, good. Killam to Hardisty and Provost dry but rough in places, no bad holes.

Edmonton to Stettler, Castor and Coronation—Good, rough in places.

Edmonton to Evansburg, Edson and Jasper Park—Some rain Friday night, a little sticky but clearing up Saturday morning, cars getting through without chains.

Roads in the southern part of the province are mostly rough, but the all-weather roads are in fair condition. The Edmonton-Calgary trail is in good shape.

150 PLAN TO ATTEND TORY RALLY HERE

Are Selected at Three Primaries Held Friday Night

Approximately 150 delegates will attend the Edmonton Conservative Association nominating convention which will be held at the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall, at 8 p.m. on Monday to select candidates to contest the six city seats at the forthcoming provincial general election on Thursday, June 19.

The delegates were selected at three primary meetings held Friday night, in West Edmonton at Patricia Hall; the East Edmonton at the lecture room of the Public Library; and the South Edmonton at the South Side Library.

The chairmen of the meetings were the presidents of the respective organizations, namly, James H. Ogilvie for West Edmonton; F. Richardson Lovette for East Edmonton; and N. C. Willson for South Edmonton.

To Fight Seats

The opinion of all three meetings was that the seats should be contested and that prospects were bright for capturing a goodly proportion of them.

D. M. Duggan, leader of the provincial party, and Col. C. Y. Weaver, D.S.O., M.L.A. both spoke at the library meeting giving brief outlines of Conservative activity in the province.

Delegates registered at the three meetings will find their credentials waiting for thm at the door of the Memorial Hall at Monday's meeting.

Apple Queen

It's a safe prediction that there'll be no fairer flower at the Shenandoah Apple Blossom Festival, to be held at Winchester, Va, than Susanne Pollard, above. She, the daughter of Governor John Garland Pollard of Virginia, will be crowned queen of the festival, which is to start whenever Virginia's famous apple trees begin to bloom.

Saturday morning witnessed the removal of the Montreal Trust company from their offices at the Royal Bank building, Jasper avenue, to a new location at 210 McLeod building. In doing this the Montreal Trust Co. are severing an association which has extended for many years.

U.F.A. DELAY CAMPAIGNING UNTIL MAY 29

Premier Tells Of Party Plans—Answers Criticisms

Active campaigning by the United Farmers of Alberta for the provincial general election is not likely to commence until about three weeks before polling day, June 19, according to an announcement made on Saturday by Premier J. E. Brownlee.

He also intimated that he would ask His Honor Lieut.-Gov. Dr. William Egbert for a dissolution of the legislature between May 10 and 20, with the probabilities nearer the latter date.

Asked in regard to the organization deferring gearing up to battle pitch until three weeks before election day, the Premier stated that the farmers were all busy seeding and would be so engaged until between May 20 and 30. Thus there would be little likelihood of rural meetings being well attended until seeding is completed.

Answers Criticism

In regard to criticisms levelled at the government from some sections of the community that it had acted in an extraordinary manner in announcing an election date prior to dissolution of the house, the Premier stated that if any longer time was to be given the public than the statute called for, that an advance announcement was the only way in which the information could be given the public. As it is nearly eight weeks notice has been given to all concerned, thus insuring all ample time for preparation.

It will be recalled that during the recent session of the legislature the Premier was pressed by all opposition sections of the house to declare himself on an election and his reply on all occasions was that he would give out the information as soon as a decision was made. How strictly he kept his word is known by the fact that while on a week's visit to Victoria he made up his mind and immediately communicated his decision by telephone to Hon. George Hoadley, acting Premier, who gave out the information on the Premier's behalf.

In the meantime U.F.A. conventions are being called and the Premier is being deluged with invitations to deliver addresses.

Lac Ste. Anne, May 16; Clover Bar, May 17; Bow Valley, May 20; Sedgewick, May 23; Lacombe, May 27; and Westlock, May 29.

It is believed the U. F. A. will make a concerted effort to capture the Bow Valley riding which was represented for the last four years by Joseph T. Shaw, K.C., former Liberal leader. Mr. Shaw was elected by the smallest possible majority and the U. F. A. believe there is a gain in sight in this riding.

In the meantime all eyes on Saturday will be focussed on High River, where the nominating convention for the amalgamated riding of Okotoks-High River is being held. This will decide the long-awaited question of whether Hon. George Hoadley, minister of agriculture and health, will stand for the riding he has represented for the last 25 years or whether Sam Brown will be nominated.

Latest information is that the minister is strongly favored.

Plans are being made to start the city's annual weed extermination campaign in June, according to Commissioner David Mitchell. Last year the City of Edmonton spent $6,048 in weed killing, while Calgary spent but $1,226, the commissioner said.

Dunning Budget Very Favorable Says Marshall

"Local reaction to the budget cannot be anything else but favorable. It is the most effective budget ever brought down in Canada, and it affects the consumer in a very vital way."

That is the opinion expressed Saturday by R. C. Marshall, former mayor of Calgary, and head of the Crown Paving Co., Ltd., and other business organizations in Edmonton.

"There is another feature which does not seem to have been noted generally," continued Mr. Marshall, "and that is that donations to churches, hospitals and educational institutions can now be deducted from the income tax returns. This will undoubtedly augment the finances of all these institutions. It is an indirect contribution to them from the government, and will help them considerably. It should do much for the churches, hospitals and colleges of Canada."

Information as to regulations designed to control dogs during the gardening season was requested in a letter received by Charles Ed. K. Cox, city clerk, Saturday from the parks board of Saskatoon. The Saskatchewan city is now exercised over devising a means to prevent stray dogs and cats from spoiling freshly laid flower beds. Mr. Cox replied that Edmonton had no such specific regulation. He was of the opinion however, that citizens should endeavor to prevent their dogs and cats from destroying other people's efforts to make a city beautiful.

SEVEN LABOR CANDIDATES WILL FIGHT

Leader Of Party In Edmonton Today, Tells Of Plans

Labor will contest seats in seven localities at the forthcoming provincial general election on June 19, according to Fred J. White, Labor leader and M.L.A. for Calgary, who is a visitor in this city to attend a meeting of the Labor executive to lay plans for the campaign.

The localities are the four urban centres, Edmonton Calgary, Lethbridge and Medicine Hat and three coal mining points, Edson, Drumheller and Rocky Mountain.

This would give Labor a possible representation of 17. But Mr White stated that these 17 seats would not all be contested.

From present indications it would appear as though four candidates would be run in Edmonton three in Calgary, and one in each of the other ridings, this being a total of 12

Labor has at present six members in the house and high hopes are held out to win Drumheller, which is a mining centre and made up of parts of the old constituencies of Hand Hills, Didsbury and Bow Valley. This seat was created in the redistribution bill passed at the last session of the legislature.

Lower Summer Rate To City Gardeners

Reduced rates for consumers who wish to water their lawns and gardens during the summer months are now in force, J. W. Turner, waterworks superintendent, announced Saturday. Those who wish to take advantage of the reduced rates must make application to the waterworks department, and they will receive a fifty per cent rebate on all water used in excess of the average monthly consumption for the previous six months. Only those whose water bills are fully paid up will be considered, Mr. Turner added.

Today's Scramblegram

RAPSRENT

There's never less than two.

There are at least four mistakes in the above picture. They may pertain to grammar, history, etiquette, drawing or whatnot. See if you can find them. Then look at the scrambled word below—and unscramble it, by switching the letters around. Grade yourself 20 for each of the mistakes you find, and 20 for the word if you unscramble it. Tomorrow we'll explain the mistakes and tell you the word. Then you can see how near a hundred you bat.

CORRECTIONS IN YESTERDAY'S ERRORGRAMS

(1) There are only three great pyramids at Gizeh. (2) Pyramids is spelled incorrectly in the conversation at the left. (3) The pyramids at Gizeh were built before 3000 B.C. (4) The camel should have cloven hoofs. (5) The scrambled word is CALLNDAR.

Young People At Mirror Hold Last Social Of Season

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

MIRROR, Alta., May 3.—The Mirror Young People closed their club for the season by putting on a big banquet in the Imperial hotel April 28. A delightful evening was spent in listening to toasts, and in singing. Toasts proposed were: "To Our Country," by Virginia Bransager; "To Our Church," by Elmer McFadyen; "To Our Club," by Bill Scott; "To Our Town," by Erna Moller, and to "Our Parents," by Claude Marshall. These were responded to, respectively, by Helen Carruthers, Rev. Upton, Henry Flewwelling, Mayor McDonald and J. V. Flewwelling.

The society will open up again next fall.

TENDERS WANTED

SEALED TENDERS addressed to the undersigned and endorsed on the envelope "Tender for New Blue Quills Indian Residential School near St. Paul De Metis, Alta," will be received up to noon of the 19th day of May, 1930, for the erection of the above mentioned building.

Plans and specifications may be seen at the Post Office at St. Paul and Vegreville, at the office of Mr. Race, Indian Agent, Edmonton; at the Builders' Exchange of Calgary; at the office of the Indian Commissioner, Mr. Graham, at Regina; and at the office of the Inspector of Indian Agencies, John R. Bunn, at Winnipeg.

Each tender must be accompanied by an accepted cheque on a chartered bank of Canada for ten per cent of the amount of the tender, payable to the order of the undersigned. (War Bonds of the Dominion or Canadian National Railway Bonds will also be accepted as security (or Bonds and cheque if required to make up an odd amount) which amount will be forfeited if the person or persons tendering decline to enter into a contract, when called upon to do so, or fail to complete the work contracted for.

The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.

DUNCAN C. SCOTT
Deputy Superintendent General
Department of Indian Affairs,
Ottawa, April 23, 1930.

Tenders for the General Contract for the Erection of a Court House at Red Deer, Alberta

Sealed Tenders and Endorsed Tenders addressed to the undersigned for the General Contract for the erection of a Court House Building at Red Deer, will be received up to 12 o'clock noon, Monday, May 12th, 1930.

Plans and specifications may be had on application to the Building Branch Office, Department of Public Works, Parliament Buildings, on deposit of a marked cheque for $25.00 which will be held until the plans and specifications are returned to the Department.

Each tender must be accompanied by a marked cheque or bid bond for five per cent (5%) of the tender, which will be returned within six days after contract is awarded. Successful bidders will be required to give a bond of a Security Company for twenty per cent (20%) of the contract.

The right is reserved to reject any or all bids.

J. D. ROBERTSON,
Deputy Minister

Judicial Sale of City Property

There will be offered for sale by public auction by ROBERT SMITH, at the Court House, in the City of Edmonton, Alberta, at 12.00 o'clock noon, on Saturday, the 17th day of May, A.D. 1930, the following property, namely

Lot 19, Block 94, River Lot 18, Edmonton, Plan I.1

The property is numbered 9912 85th Avenue, in the City of Edmonton, and located thereon is an eight-roomed fully modern house, 2½ storeys, consisting of hall, living room, dining room, kitchen and pantry on the ground floor, with maple floors, and four bedrooms and bathroom on the second floor with maple floors. On the third floor is one bedroom. There is a cement basement, hot-air furnace and gas installed for kitchen use.

The property will be offered for sale subject to an upset price which has been fixed by the Master in Chambers at $4500.00 and to taxes for the current year.

The terms of sale are: The purchaser is at the time of sale to pay down a deposit of 10% of the amount of the purchase price to the Vendor's solicitors, and the remainder of the purchase money is to be paid into Court within sixty (60) days without interest, or the Purchaser shall have the option of paying ten (10%) per cent. of the purchase price as aforesaid and giving a mortgage to the Vendor for $2000.00 payable as follows: $100.00 half-yearly for the first four years and the balance at the end of the fifth year, with interest at Eight (8) per cent. per annum, payable half-yearly, and to pay the balance of the purchase price then owing into Court within sixty (60) days without interest.

In all other particulars the terms and conditions of sale will be standing conditions of the Supreme Court of Alberta, as approved by the Master.

Further particulars can be had from MESSRS. PARLEE, FREEMAN & HOWSON, Barrister, etc., 301 Bank of Commerce Chambers, Edmonton, Alberta.

PRODUCTS OF CANADA ARE ON DISPLAY

Canadian Industries, Topic Of Discussion by Wetaskiwin W.I.

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

WETASKIWIN, May 3.—Mrs. J. A. Rodell was the speaker at the April meeting of the Women's Institute and the topic of discussion was "Canadian Industries." Something of outstanding importance was on display from each province. The speaker first spoke of Prince Edward Island, displaying some delicious lobster, drawing the attention of the ladies to the fact that this province was one of the largest fishing centres in Canada. Next came New Brunswick, this also being a fishing centre, with sardines on display. From Quebec was shown flax in all stages, from the field to the loom. Dried apples were one of the main industries of Nova Scotia, some of which were on display, as well as a dried apple pie with whipped cream.

From Ontario was a display of baskets and novelties made from Inter-Lake crepe paper, also samples of Tontine window blinds, manufactured at Toronto. White and brown bread, and buns baked from Lake of the Woods hard wheat flour did justice to Manitoba. Briquettes from Estevan, Sask., made from coal screenings and sold reasonably, netting Saskatchewan a nice profit each year. From the National Biscuit Company, B.C., were a number of samples of biscuits which were given to the ladies.

Alberta Exhibits

Exhibits from five industries were on display from Alberta. Glass from the Dominion Glass Co., Redcliff. This company believes that goods packed in glass are superior to goods packed any other way. White bread, brown bread and buns from Ogilvie flour, sugar from Raymond, cake flour and cereals from North West Milling Co., toothpaste, face cream and shampoo from Claynett Distributors, Edmonton; these toilet articles are manufactured from clay taken from the banks of the McLeod river, Jasper.

The speaker closed by showing a display of goods manufactured in Wetaskiwin. Tin and copper from Mellett's tin shop. Candy from Lively's store, and bread from MacEachern's flour.

A piano duet was rendered by Kathleen Orr and Estor Somers; piano solo by Jack Blickenstaff, and a solo by Cecil Bridgeman. The hostesses were Mesdames Geo. Wiseman, A. R. Dickson and J. Knowlan.

Spring Work Well Advanced, Jarrow

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

JARROW, May 3.—Mr. and Mrs. E. Peet are rejoicing over the birth of a son at the Viking hospital last Tuesday night.

Mr. Swap and family, north of town, are leaving in a few days for North Battleford, where they have taken up a homestead.

Mr. Geo. Grant left a few days ago with his farming equipment for North Battleford, where he has taken a homestead. Since he left Mrs. Grant has been taken to the Viking hospital, and Mr. Grant is expected to return in a few days.

Mrs. Jim Miller, who has been a patient in the General hospital, Edmonton, for the past two weeks, returned on Thursday. Mrs. Miller is much improved in health, and it is hoped that she will soon be entirely recovered.

W. H. Barton, who has been acting postmaster since P. R. Bigney vacated the position, has been definitely appointed postmaster.

Spring work is well under way in this district, and some farmers have already finished seeding their wheat. Owing to the recent moisture which has come in the form of rain and snow, the tension has somewhat relaxed and there is a growing spirit of optimism in the community.

Wm. Bridgman, who has been suffering for some time with a severe attack of heart trouble, has been home for a few days. However, he will be returning to the Viking hospital shortly.

F. J. Stouffer, who has been farming for some years on an S.S.B. farm southwest of town, has rented his farm and will be leaving for the Peace River in a few days. Mrs. Stouffer will visit with her daughters before joining him.

Mrs. Kennedy, of Edmonton, has been visiting for the past two weeks with her daughter, Mrs. C. Jenkins, and her sister, Mrs. H. H. MacDougall. Mrs. Kennedy will return home on Friday of this week, and Mr. and Mrs. Jenkins will accompany her.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Luxton are spending the holidays with Mrs. Luxton's people at Innisfree.

Miss Dinwoodie, the junior teacher of Jarrow, spent the holidays at her home in Lavoy.

The Jarrow boys are getting ready for the baseball season. Practices will be held on the sports ground every Tuesday night.

Early Tuesday morning Henry Treichel was taken to Viking hospital in an unconscious condition. It was discovered at the hospital that he was suffering from spinal meningitis, and he was rushed to the isolation hospital at Edmonton.

Seeding Is Nearly Completed In Area Surrounding Viking

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

VIKING, May 3.—Seeding of wheat in the Viking district is practically three-fourths finished. Moisture conditions are considered ideal and somewhat better than at this time last year. Over half an inch of rain fell on Monday and Tuesday, and aided by local showers during the previous 10 days, there is sufficient moisture to carry the germination and growth for a period of three weeks. Cool weather prevails and the moisture that has fallen is being preserved.

There is possibly a slight decrease in the acreage sown to wheat. On account of the very dry fall there was very little plowing done, and much of the crop has been disced in, which may retard growth and yield unless the district is blessed with frequent showers throughout the growing season. The farmers are staying with the old tried varieties of wheat such as Marquis, and it is estimated that at least 20 per cent. have used registered seed.

The recent rains have improved the feed situation. Stock in the district has wintered remarkably well. There is a tone of optimism throughout the whole district and the outlook at this time is very promising.

LIME BURNING IN CANADA

OTTAWA, May 3.—Lime is burned in every province of Canada but two. Both high-calcium and magnesium limes are produced from the limestones of Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Ontario and Manitoba, but in Quebec, Alberta, and British Columbia high-calcium limes only are produced at present.

Murder Backstairs

BEGIN HERE TODAY

From the floor of a lake on the BERKELEY estate, DETECTIVE DUNDEE lifts the body of lovely DORIS MATTHEWS, lady's maid, grimly announcing "Murder!" to his fellow guest, SEYMOUR CROSBY.

It is seven o'clock of a Saturday morning in September. Friday evening in the Berkeley home had been so unpleasant that Dundee, invited to Hillcrest by young DICK BERKELEY for the week-end, had had premonitions of disaster. In the household are: Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley, the latter a vulgar, snobbish social-climber; Dick, tipsy profligate; CLORINDA, engaged to Crosby, a New York society widower; GIGI, 15-year-old sub-deb; MRS. LAMBERT, social secretary to Mrs. Berkeley and a close friend of Crosby's; WICKETT, the butler, and EUGENE ARNOLD, chauffeur, Doris's fiance.

Before sleeping Dundee had puzzled over several questions: Why is Clorinda marrying Crosby when she is still in love with JOHN MAXWELL? Why did Clorinda steal out of the house after 11? Why did Gigi snatch the crystal flask of perfume, presented to her mother by Crosby, and sprinkle all the guests with it? Did Doris meet Dick Berkeley late at night as he had forced her to promise? How late did Mr. and Mrs. Berkeley quarrel over Clorinda's engagement in the library?

And now, who killed Doris Matthews by striking her over the head with that perfume flask, whose odor pervades the summerhouse? Dundee summons CAPTAIN STRAWN of the Homicide Squad.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER VIII

"HELLO! Dundee speaking. . . . Connect me with Captain Strawn's home, please," the young detective said, in a low voice when Police Headquarters had answered. A minute or two later, after his chief's sleepy growl had come over the wire, Dundee recounted the discovery of Doris Matthews' murder in as few words as possible.

"Murder at Hillcrest!" Strawn interrupted early in the recital. "You didn't get bored with nothing to do, and kill the girl yourself, did you, Bonnie?"

But when the brief story was finished Captain Strawn was not in a jocular mood. He issued orders grimly: "Get back on the scene of the crime immediately, and don't let Crosby out of your sight till I arrive. You say the butler's with him now? Good! See that nothing's touched, and for God's sake, don't spread the alarm through the house. . . . And say, lie low, Dundee! Don't give yourself away as a detective. As a guest in the house, forcibly detained there by the police, you may be a lot of help, just as you were in the Rhodes House murders."

Dundee grinned faintly as he "Yessed" every order of his chief. "A lot of help" in the Rhodes House murders, indeed! He'd solved that case practically single-handed, hadn't he? And Lieutenant Strawn had become Captain Strawn as a result! But what did credit and promotion matter? It was the game itself he loved. . . .

As he obeyed his chief and returned directly to the summerhouse, Dundee realized, a little shame-facedly that his horror over Doris's brutal murder was already giving way to the thrill of the chase to run down her murderer.

BUT tears for Doris had already begun to flow, Dundee discovered, as he neared the summer-house. Wickett was dabbing at his eyes with a folded handkerchief, and Crosby wheeled, whipping out his own handkerchief from his retrieved dressing-gown, when he saw his fellow-guest approaching.

"The police will be here immediately," Dundee announced. "Captain Strawn in charge."

To his relief, the name meant nothing to the butler. Undoubtedly Wickett had come to Hillcrest and the Berkeleys since the middle of July; otherwise, if Wickett took any interest in crime news at all, he must have seen Strawn's name daily in connection with the murders at the Rhodes House. Then Dundee remembered one of Mrs. Rhodes' quotations from the society page, in which August was mentioned as the date Mrs. Berkeley and Clorinda had returned from Europe. Probably the house had been closed for the summer; with luck, not even Dick Berkeley would remember that he—Dundee—had been "mixed up" in another sensational murder.

But Wickett was speaking, tremulously: "Mr. Crosby and I have been talking about the poor girl in there, sir. You saw her for a moment last night yourself, sir. I'm sure you will agree with us that she was a—a little darling, sir."

The expression fell strangely from the usually austere lips of the butler, and Dundee was touched to the heart. Here was sincere grief.

"Yes, she was a very beautiful girl," Dundee answered huskily. "You knew her, too, Mr. Crosby? I believe I heard you talking about her with Mrs. Lambert last night."

Seymour Crosby pocketed his handkerchief, but his somber brown eyes glistened with fresh tears as he answered unsteadily: "Yes, I knew her very well indeed. She was my—wife's maid for several years. Phyllis—Mrs. Crosby—was extremely fond of little Doris, and so was I. But—if you'll forgive me, Mr. Dundee—I don't believe I can talk about her—yet." And he turned sharply away, to stare at the placid, silvery surface of the lake which had been Doris' very temporary grave.

"I understand," Dundee answered sympathetically, in the character of fellow-guest.

"Pardon me, sir," Wickett spoke. "I see a special delivery boy coming up the driveway. Perhaps I'd better go and sign for the letter, sir—"

"I'll go," Dundee interrupted. "I'm expecting a special delivery letter myself."

Luckily, he reached the back door before the boy had dismounted from his bicycle. As he had expected, the long, thick envelope was addressed to himself. He signed the slip, and was eagerly scanning the first of the newspaper clippings which the envelope contained before the boy was well away.

"These must be from the newspaper morgue," Dundee decided. "I'll have to be careful of them. Much better than the resume I asked for. Good old Strawn!"

NO time to read them now, although he was kneen to refresh his memory of the briefly sensational "Crosby case." Strawn and his men might arrive any minute, and his chief must not catch him disobeying orders. He thrust the envelope into the pocket of his dressing-gown, wished heartily for trousers, and walked slowly back to the summerhouse. If only he could get to work, make a thorough search of the summerhouse and the lake's edge for clues! But, of course, Strawn was right. As a guest in the Berkeley home, his professon unsuspected, he could be of infinite value to the police. He did manage, however, without being noticed by Crosby and the butler, who were talking together, to retrieve the crystal stopper, picking it up with his handkerchief, in which he wrapped it carefully before putting it into the pocket of his dressing gown.

It was dreary waiting, with that still, wet body on the bench, and the odor of the perfume pouring over them, with every gust of the now brisk south wind. But at last the ordeal was ended. Three cars, with the initials "P. D." on their doors, swept up the driveway and curved round the house to the east. Climbing out of the first car, Captain Strawn apparently gave orders to his police retinue to sit tight and await further orders, for he was alone as he strode across the clipped green lawn.

"Well, the law is upon us, and I imagine I am in for the first grilling," Dundee said to Crosby, and, with a well-assumed air of resignation, went to meet his chief.

"Well, boy, what's the lay?" Strawn asked. "Any facts you didn't tell me over the phone?"

Briefly, but omitting no essential detail, Dundee told of seeing Clorinda Berkeley steal out of the house the night before; of Dick Berkeley's proposed rendezvous with the murdered girl, and of Dick's absence from his room throughout the night.

"Hmm!" Strawn considered, frowning. "Wonder if those two facts are connected? Suppose Clorinda knew, in some way, of the affair between her brother and the maid, had the same bright idea you did of preventing another meeting and a possibly messy scandal on the eve of her marriage to the society swell, sneaked out to argue with the girl and killed her during the quarrel that followed—her brother being present and then beating it in a panic?"

"PERHAPS," Dundee conceded respectfully, "but—how did the flask of perfume get mixed up in it? Clorinda wasn't carrying it. I'm sure of that. Not in her hands, at least, for she had nothing in them but the scarf with which Doris's skirts were bound. And she was wearing one of those light, floating capes which don't have capacious pockets, I believe. Although the light was dim, I had a pretty clear picture of her as she descended the stairs and I could swear the cape wasn't weighted down at all—floated about her, in fact."

"Maybe the maid, Doris, had stolen the perfume," Strawn offered.

"I heard Mrs. Berkeley say last night that Doris hated perfume, that it gave her a sick headache to smell it," Dundee objected. "And although the stuff was expensive—worth $32 an ounce, according to Mrs. Berkeley—and the crystal flask was valuable in itself, I can't somehow see Doris as a petty thief. Also, why should she take it with her on a rendezvous with her mistress' son?"

"By me!" Strawn shrugged. "But you yourself say she was killed with the perfume flask, or at least stunned with a blow which broke the flask before she was dumped into the lake. It'll be up to the coroner to determine the cause of death, and I suppose he'd better get busy as soon as he arrives. . . . Now, one other thing. Young Berkeley hasn't returned, I suppose?"

"Not that I know of. He wasn't in his room, as I told you, when I went in to arouse him for the swimming party. I haven't been up since the murder was discovered. You told me to stay on the scene of the crime."

"Right!" Strawn agreed. "But now at the risk of Crosby's thinking you are too thick with the police, I want you to go and have another look in his room. Take care not to spread the alarm, however, and if young Berkeley's there, have him come to the summerhouse immediately. . . . By the way, whose idea was the swimming party, anyway?"

"Georgina Berkeley's," Dundee answered curtly. "They call her Gigi. She's only a kid—15."

"Then I suppose that lets her out," Strawn conceded. "She'd hardly invite a party down to see what she'd done, then obligingly discover the body herself. Unless there's something in that old saying about a criminal returning to the scene of the crime. . . . Hey, boy! Keep your shirt on! I'm not accusing anyone—yet! But in a case like this you've got to think of everything. Now get along with you!"

(To Be Continued)

Conducted by PHIL. A. TELY

Knowing that stamp collecting is the hobby of hundreds of our readers, The Edmonton Bulletin has inaugurated its Stamp Collectors' Club. Every Saturday a pictured representation of some stamp, together with an article of outstanding interest to collectors, will be given in this column. ANY collector and those desiring to become one are eligible for membership, which is free. ENROL NOW and, under the guidance of an expert, take up this fascinating hobby of great educational value, which is also highly profitable. You will receive a membership card and a present of stamps for your collection.

We must ask those writing to COMPLY STRICTLY with the following simple rules: (1) Give name, address and age. (2) State number of stamps in collection and in what countries you are especially interested. (3) If you wish to exchange with fellow-members, state whether stamp for stamp or on a price list basis. (4) You must ENCLOSE A STAMPED ADDRESSED ENVELOPE EVERY TIME YOU WRITE and desire a reply.

Phil is, at all times, pleased to answer questions regarding stamps and to shop for members, especially those out-of-town. There will be no delay. Arrangements can be made for selections of single stamps and sets to be sent on approval WITH SPECIAL DISCOUNT TO CLUB MEMBERS. Write and state your requirements.

Address all correspondence to: The Director. The Edmonton Bulletin Stamp Collectors' Club.

Club Notes

M. Dupont No. 124 reports that no reply has been received to second letters sent last week in March to No. [illegible], Sub 6 P.O., Edm.; 309, Mirror and [illegible], Pouce Coupe, B.C. Will the three members please write her at once.

Type No. 20, Canada, appears today and is relative to last week's article. Be sure and clip the club corner for your scrap book.

Your stamp album, remember, can be an ideal companion for a rainy day during the summer months. The summer holidays will allow the student collector time to re-ararnge the album.

Membership to date is 397.

DOMINION OF CANADA
"Quebec Tercentenary Issue"
16th July 1908

The 300th anniversary of the founding of the city of Quebec by Samuel de Champlain was commemorated by the issue of this pictorial set. Some of the values of the set are found on both white and toned paper and the ½ cent stamp shows an interesting plate variety (both 44 in the sheet) in which there is a line of color through the word "Canada" and an extension of the frame line at the lower right corner. There is only one of this variety in every hundred stamps.

Our stamp collecting king, then the Prince of Wales, attended the celebration at Quebec of this historical event and his portrait, with that of his queen, appeared on the low value of the set. Cartier and Champlain those interpid explorers, were pictured on the 1 cent stamp Wolfe and Montcalm, opposing generals, both fell on the same field, appeared on the 7 cent value. "Quebec House," Champlain's headquarters, and historical scenes on the three high values completed the set, with the exception of the 2 cent stamp on which appeared Edward, the Peacemaker, and his queen.

This beautiful set, of unusual historic interest to Canadians, should be in every collection, of Canadian philatelists. It may be obtained for about $3.25, complete.

251 Members, Five Planes Grew From Very Small Start

Starting With Nothing But Hope, Club Has Become Organization That Sends City's Name to All Parts of Canada

From an oat-field in what was then the "sticks" of Edmonton—from a membership of nothing—from nothing in the way of equipment—this was what the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club started out, less than three years ago, when it was first organized in the Macdonald hotel on the night of August 2, 1927.

And now?

Well, the club has its headquarters in what is freely admitted, even by rivals, to be one of the finest hangars on one of the finest flying fields in the west, complete and replete with practically every modern aid and convenience to make flying safe. It has a membership of 251 on its rolls, practically 100 per cent of whom are active members. And last, but far from least, the club has five planes, three of which have been in use for some time while the fourth arrived in the city from the east on Friday, and the fifth is now enroute to the city over the Canadian National Railways.

Fine Record

That, in brief, is the record of the flying club which has its headquarters in the city which has always loomed big in the day's news of flying feats. Some bonny fighters went overseas from Edmonton and won their wings in France, before an aeroplane had ever been seen in this "neck of the woods." Not all of them came back, but their fights have gone down in aerial military history. And since the war, when commercial flying had a tough air row to hoe, Edmonton men and Edmonton machines sent the name of Edmonton as a breeder of winged vikings over cables to the far corners of the earth.

That is the background of flying in Edmonton; it is the background against which the Edmonton flying club was raised. And this is how it started.

A tip was received from Ottawa that the Dominion government was going to start flying clubs throughout the country, in any center where a nucleus of 10 war-pilots and 40 students would form a flying club. Now flying in Edmonton and "Wop" May are one and the same thing, so those interested immediately got in touch with "Wop" May. That very evening a meeting was held in the Macdonald hotel, and 20 ex-wartime pilots and 60 students joined up right there and then.

Club Gets Planes

The upshot of this meeting was that two moth biplanes were sent to the club and training started right away. May was first president and also instructor to the club, but C. Becker, now general manager of the Commercial Airways, later became president, while "Wop" continued as instructor "Cy" Becker has continued uninterrupted as president since those early days, and "Wop" later ceased to be instructor when he became a regular pilot for Commercial Airways.

Maurice Burbidge, who had been with the R.A.F. in France and Palestine and the Afghan border with various bombing squadrons, was then secured as club instructor, "and a darn good one he is, too," say club members. Curiously enough, when Captain Burbidge arrived here, he found an old comrade in arms in the person of Capt. James Bell, first vice president of the club since its inception and now manager of the municipal airport. Bell and Burbidge were both based at Nancy at one time when with the Independent Air Force. From there they used to make forays over Rhineland on "good nights," tossing bombs hither and yon with joyous abandon.

The story of the upward climb of the club to its present position reads like the hokum interviews handed out by success specializers—hard work, self-denial, frugality and thrift. But that's exactly the recipe which the club used.

Self Helped

Instead of gracefully leaning backward on the government subsidy and waiting for manna to drop from the skies to help them, the members of the club helped themselves. Only two paid appointments were made when the club was formed—May, as instructor, and one man as his helper to look after the planes. When any work was to be done, the members just buckled down and did it themselves. And, in addition, they went out and preached the gospel of flying to all who would listen, helping to mould public opinion in Edmonton so that the airport bylaw was finally passed by a good majority.

That this work has borne good fruit is evidenced by the present record of the club. Where other clubs started out in a blaze of enthusiasm when the government scheme was first announced, and then wilted, the Edmonton club is in a flourishing condition, with 251 members. The confidence of the club in its leaders is shown by the fact that practically the same officials have been elected to office every year. Occasionally, this shows apathy on the part of the members, but that rule doesn't hold good in Edmonton.

Here are the officers of the club at present: president, C. Becker; first vice-president, Jas. Bell; second vice-president, A. Clarke; secretary-treasurer, Leroy Mattern; directors, E. Loveseth, A. Rankin, F. E. Brown and J. Victor Horner.

No Time Wasted

That the members who have passed for commercial licenses have not wasted their time is shown by the fact that two of them—H. L. Woollson and A. D. Kennedy—are now Royal Canadian Air Force instructors at Camp Borden. No higher compliment to the ability of Edmonton-trained men could be paid. Others who have taken out commercial licenses are: Captain Becker, Captain Mattern, Ted Field and W. J. Beaumont. It takes 5 hours of solo flying, and a solo cross country flight of 175 miles to qualify for a commercial pilot's license, as well as written examinations on technical subjects.

The first students to get private pilots' licenses as a result of their club training were: R. P. Brinkman, A. Rankin, A. Clarke, R. P. Owen and Ted Field. Since this time, a large number of other members have got their licenses, including three women. Miss Elsie McLean, Marjorie Chauvin and Mrs. "Gladys (Graves) Walker. Miss Chauvin, incidentally, is now working with an aircraft corporation in Toronto.

The other private pilots are: Chester E. Moffet, W. M. Thompson, R. F. Gladden, J. D. Hare, Helgi G. Eyjolfsson (he came from Iceland to take a course in Edmonton and learn English at the same time), A. H. J. Want, Otto J. Thibert, Jack K. Lewis, Enoch Loveseth, Edger R. Field, Jos. W. Austin, Alex. M. Sutherland, C. C. Agar, Frank E. Brown, J. V. Horner, G. M. Peterson, J. J. Murdock, Wilbur Gallinger and Louis Dubuc.

"Happy landings" to them all.

RAIN LIKELY OVER WEEKEND

Spatterings Start at 9:30, With Northerly Wind

Impending showers threatened the city early Saturday morning, and the first spattering of rain was received at 9:30 a.m. Slate-colored skies promised more rain, and the official forecast for the day is for unsettled weather. However, the wind on Saturday morning was blowing from the north, and as rainfalls are usually carried in on the west wind, it is not expected that the precipitation will be very heavy.

The barometric reading at 9:30 Saturday was 27.25 steady, with the thermometer registering 42. Friday's maximum was 68.

Hourly temperature reading, commencing at midnight Friday, was as follows: 12 p.m., 46; 1 a.m., 46; 2 a.m., 45; 3 a.m., 45; 4 a.m., 44; 5 a.m., 43; 6 a.m., 42; 7 a.m., 42; 8 a.m., 43; 9 a.m., 43.

Telegraphic despatches carry a forecast for mostly fair and cool weather for Saturday evening, with possibly light local showers on Sunday. This forecast covers both Alberta and Saskatchewan.

Big New Launch Takes To Water

Gleaming with bronze and brass fittings, with a sheathing of silk between the mahogany planks, one of the finest launches to cut the waters of a northern lake was launched by Jim Weir, of the Alberta Motor Boat Company, at South Cooking Lake, on Thursday.

The boat was built by the company to the order of Arthur Brown, well-known old timer of the city, who owns an island out at the lake and is extremely fond of summer outings on the water.

Twenty-two feet long, with a five-foot beam, the boat has engines developing 35 horse power and will hit up a speed of 24 miles per hour with her passengers aboard. It has an electric starter and automobile controls, a searchlight on the bow, and colored starboard, port and stern lights, while the instrument panel on the dashboard would compare favorably with that of a high-priced car.

A unique feature is the sheathing of raw silk between the double planking, the silk having been treated with glue before being covered with wood.

Reorganized Board Of Health To Meet

The inaugural meeting of the city's new enlarged board of health will be held next Thursday afternoon, it was announced by S. Main, secretary, Saturday. Only routine business will be transacted at the initial meeting and presentation of the monthly report for April of the department of health will be the principal item on the agenda. Here is the personnel of the new health board, as authorized by a recent amendment to the city charter:

Ald. J. W. Findlay and Ald. R. V. Bellamy, representing the city council, Dr. F. W. Crang, representing the public school board, T. S. Magee, representing the Separate School Board. Dr. Harold Orr and Dr. D. B. Leitch, medical practitioners, Mayor J. M. Douglas, Dr. R. B. Jenkins, M.H.O., and A. W. Haddow, city engineer, ex-officio members of the board.

MAY BE NAMED BY TORIES AT MEET, MONDAY

Medicos Urged by Conservative Friends to Let Names Stand

Following the three Conservative primaries held in this city on Friday night the names of two more prospective candidates were brought forward as likely to go before the party nominating convention to be held at the Canadian Legion Memorial Hall on Monday.

These two are Dr. F. J. Folinsbee and Dr. W. A. Atkinson.

Both have been approached and while it is understood that neither one has yet agreed to allow his name to go before the convention, it is felt by their friends who are urging them, that they will stand.

Dr. Folinsbee is no novice in the political arena. He ran as a Conservative candidate at the last provincial general election and polled a good vote, not dropping out of the race until the 10th count. He has always taken a prominent part in Conservative affairs and is considered as one of the strongest available candidates.

Dr. Atkinson has never taken an active part on the public platform, but like Dr. Folinsbee has been prominently identified with his party's activities in this city for years.

With the possible addition of these two the likely Conservatives to go before the nominating convention include D. M. Duggan the provincial party leader and Col. C. Y. Weaver, D.S.O. his colleague and sitting members for this city, A. F. Ewing, K.C., former M.L.A., ex-alderman Joseph W. Adair, Col. F. C. Jamieson, K.C., H. Ray Milner, K.C., F. Richardson Lovette, N.C. Willson, Mrs. W. D. Ferris, Mrs. T. D. Fitzsimon, Mrs. R. J. Russell and Mrs. J. Clyde MacDonald.

OIL SHOWINGS IN LIMESTONE

Western Alberta Continuing Drilling 275 Feet in Producing Sands

Western Alberta, pioneering lime drilling in the southern Highwood area of the Turner Valley field, has drilled into saturated lime with some gas showings of unknown proportions, according to a news despatch from Calgary. Drilling is continuing at about 275 feet in the limestone, total depth being 3406 feet.

While drilling is being done with mud-circulation, the operators are taking cores regularly, and recent cores showed the occurrence of green oil. The gas has been apparent in return circulation from the bottom of the well, but it is stated that no violent display of action has yet occurred.

The gas and oil was encountered as the bit drilled into slightly softer formation.

Victor Day, manager of the Day Oil Co., stated on Friday that his company intends drilling on this same structure in the near future. "The limestone is very shallow in that area," said Mr. Day, "and drilling is a comparatively easy matter compared with drilling in Turner Valley and other fields."

Broadcast Service From Cathedral

The 11:00 o'clock service will be broadcast from St. Joseph's Cathedral, Edmonton, on Sunday morning, May 4. The beautiful mass which was so well rendered by the Cathedral choir under the direction of Mrs. B. T. Olsen on Easter Sunday morning, will be repeated. The special sermon, the subject of which will be, "Mary, the Mother of God," will be preached by His Grace, Archbishop O'Leary.

An impressive ceremony will be held in the evening, when the annual reception into the Soladity of the Children of Mary will take place. It is expected that all the girls of the parish who are not yet members of the Sodality will be received on that occasion. The sermon will be preached by Rev. Father McDonald, C.SS.R., pastor of St. Alphonsus' parish of this city.

Two Reports But Only One Mishap

A boy was concerned in each of the two accidents reported to the city police over Friday.

H. Gordon, 11621 89 street, told police that a 4-year-old son of his had his kiddie wagon broken by a passing motorist near the intersection of 117 avenue and 89 street, the time not being given. It is not stated whether the driver was a hit-and-run one, or not.

Fred Ashton, 10260 99 street, reported to the police that he knocked down Leonard Stower, 15, 11246 90th street, when the boy ran into the side of his car, near the corner of 101A avenue and 100A street, at 8:15 p.m. Fortunately, Ashton was going slowly at the time and the boy only received a slight cut on his head. The driver took the boy to a doctor.

R. A. Brown, of Calgary, head of the Alberta Shriners, arrived in the city on Saturday morning, and is staying at the Macdonald hotel. Mr. Brown will meet the local Shriners for the purpose of making arrangements for the forthcoming convention at Toronto.

FRATERNITY AT 'VARSITY AFFILIATED

Delta Mu is First in Alberta To Join International

Delta Mu Fraternity of the University of Alberta has the honor to be the first fraternity on the University campus to become affiliated with a national or international fraternal organization. Phi Kappa Pi, an all-Canadian order, which was petitioned by Delta Mu last fall, has granted a charter to the local group, according to information received by Herbert Surplis, president, from the head chapter in Toronto.

Phi Kappa Pi is the only purely national organization of the kind in Canada. It is composed solely of Canadian branches, of which there are five in number, stretching from coast to coast. Two prominent Edmonton University men were among the charter members when the order was first formed about 1909, A. E. Corbett, of the department of extension, and Professor John Allan, of the department of geology. Mr. Corbett is at present honorary president of Delta Mu.

Frat Grew Quickly

This fraternal group was formed as a result of a meeting held by two local groups, Alpha Beta Gamma, of McGill, and Sigma Psi, of Toronto, about 1909. Both groups had been petitioning an international order for several years, and had grown impatient with the delay in the granting of the charter. The meeting was held with a view to organization of a national order with chapters at different Canadian universities. The plan was soon adopted, and a constitution formed three years later, in 1912, and the Phi Kappa Pi Fraternity definitely established. The next chapter to be taken in was at Dalhousie University, which was followed the next year by a group at the University of British Columbia, the first frat formed at that university in 1917. Western University, at London, Ontario, was the next group taken in. The local group makes the fifth chapter. Negotiations are at present being carried on for a chapter at the University of Manitoba, although no definite arrangements have been made.

The Delta Mu Fraternity officially came into being on February 3, 1930. Previous to this time, however, the fraternity had been in existence, growing out of the Rocky Mountain Goat club which originated in Banff in July, 1928.

The members include Mr. A. E. Corbett, honorary president; Herbert Surplis, president; Garfield Stewart, vice-president; Donald McKenzie, secretary; Vincent Allen, treasurer; Art Allen, Eric Austin, Jim Broughton, Alan Carscallen, Joe Edwards, Eric Gibbs, Reg. Hamilton, Herman Hayes, Al Harding, Al Hall, Christopher Jackson, Tommy Knight, John Lynch-Staunton, Hugh Morrison, George Prieur, Walter Smith, Jim Small, Bill Shandro, Pete Tingle, Harold Turner, Frank Werth, Harold Wright.

Intermediate Ball League Will Open Thursday, May 15

The opening of the Edmonton Intermediate Baseball League schedule will take place on Thursday, May 15, at Boyle street diamond, it was decided at a meeting of club representatives and league officials which was held in the Y.M.C.A. Friday evening. The opening this year will be one week earlier than last season.

Four teams will again operate franchises in the league, namely: C.N.R., Scona, Gregory Tire and Alberta College. The last-named team was allowed to enter the league during the coming season in place of the Bearcats. The latter team, however, has been given the option of renewing its franchise in 1931.

The following officers were elected for the 1930 season: President, "Windy" Dyer; secretary, C. Kiefer; treasurer, R. H. Stewart; team representatives, C.N.R., J. Cook; Scona, George Harris; Alberta College, W. Mulloy; Gregory Tire, C. Smith.

A world traveller in the person of James Peech, who is connected with the steel industry of Sheffield, Eng., arrived in the city on Saturday and is a guest at the Macdonald hotel.

News And Notes Of Aviation

Despite poor visibility and a thick smoke haze caused by brush fires to the south and east of the city, Capt. Maurice Burbidge, instructor to the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero Club, took off in a club Moth biplane on Friday afternoon, bound for Camrose where he is to give two days' instruction to the 20 members in Camrose who are affiliated with the club.

Frank Burton accompanied the instructor as his helper to groom the plane, while Ted Field, well-known air club member and a licensed commercial pilot, escorted the departing plane for some distance south in another club Moth.

The first of the two new Gypsy Moth machines awarded the Edmonton and Northern Alberta Aero club by the federal government arrived in the city on Friday afternoon over the Canadian National Railways. Its unloading was supervised by J. Victor Horner, club director, and it is to be assembled by members on Saturday and is expected to be ready for instrucitonal purposes by Sunday. When the second of the new machines now en route arrives, the club will have a total of five machines available for instructional purposes.

Members are enthusiastic over the latest addition to the training machines. The new Gypsy Moths have slotted wings to prevent stalling, and bulky air wheels, which considerably reduce shock on landing.

International Basketball Trophy at Stake in Series Opening Tonight

CHICAGOANS CONFIDENT OF VICTORY

"Taylor - Trunks" Have Kept in Strict Training For This Attempt

By JOE DWYER

A three-mile hike before and a three-mile hike after breakfast! Yes sir, that's what the Chicago "Taylor-Trunks" are doing to keep in trim for their International championship basketball series with the Grads tonight and Monday at the Arena.

Coach Harry Wilson is authority for the statement that the Chicagoans haven't been on wheels since they hit town Thursday afternoon and they won't be on them again until they board the train for home on Monday night.

"I know the folks here in Edmonton consider the "Taylor-Trunks" just another basketball team for the Grads to walk over, but you wait and see!" Mr. Wilson told the Bulletin.

"The girls are in perfect condition and they've been here long enough to become acclimatized, now watch us go."

Yesterday afternoon the team worked out at the Y.W.C.A. for close to two hours, then they rested until dinner time and finished off with another three-mile hike before retiring. Wilson limits his protegees to two meals a day, morning and night and he believes it means a lot in the speed of the girls on the basketball floor.

Grads Are Set

The Grads as usual are in wonderful condition for 40 minutes of strenuous work and you'll notice they never call for time out. Coach Page isn't saying anything but he's looking forward to his 80th straight victory.

Yesterday the peerless mentor took the boys into camp at Mayfair in 18 holes of brilliant golf and he never even mentioned the game.

The Grads will go into the battle as big favorites and they intend to roll up a lead for Monday night's encounter.

With the exception of an injury to Babe Belanger's finger, there isn't anything wrong with the squad.

This series will more than likely be the final appearance of the Grads this season unless Vancouver Varsity, Canadian representatives at the women's Olympics at Prague, play here on their Canadian tour to raise funds.

Mae Brown, who proved an important factor in the Canadian final against Toronto Lakesides, has taken good care of her ankle which has bothered her no little, and she is prepared for any kind of a struggle.

Class By Themselves

The smooth-working regular front line of MacBurney, McCormack and Fry is going to be a difficult trio for the Illinois experts to fathom and Doris Neale and Elsie Bennie at the guard positions, have demonstrated many times before just how hard it is to score baskets against them.

Brown, Belanger and Kinney are always able to more than hold their own and the youthful Babe and Margaret are especially anxious to pile up a few points in this series. They weren't on very long in the games against Seattle and Toronto and they are out to make up for it.

Big And Fast

Curtin, Martin and Krubaeck, the starting forwards of the "Taylor-Trunks" are big and fast and they work nicely together as anyone who watched them perform in the practises will tell you.

Falby and Smith, the guards, were in a large measure responsible for the victories over Cleveland Allertons for the United States title and they are confident of having just as much success with the Grads.

Benoit, Kilens and Weise form the relief front line, and they are dropped into the fray frequently, with the result that the team is always fresh.

In any case when the best basketball team in Canada and the best basketball team in the United States mingle, there's bound to be action and then some.

Bill Douglas, fastest referee ever seen in basketball, will again handle the whistle.

JACK HOBBS SCORES 111 FOR SURREY

Famous Cricketer Still Brilliant Enough To Pass Century Mark

Canadian Press Cable

LONDON, May 3.—Nearing the half-century mark in age, Jack Hobbs, England's premier cricketer, showed yesterday he is just as good as ever when he made a second three-figure innings in a match. He was playing for Surrey against Glamorganshire. This was the fifth time he has centuried in each innings in first class cricket. Hobbs' great efforts were not enough to pull Surrey out of the hole and Glamorgan get the points for a first innings win. Leicester also annexed the points for a first innings lead against Middlesex, Hendren another veteran, fresh from triumphs in the West Indies, scored a century for Middlesex.

Scores when the matches ended were:

Surrey versus Glamorgan at the Kennington Oval: Glamorgan, 474 and 204.

Turnbull, 61, Hills, 53, Allon, four wickets for 50 runs; Surrey, 333 and 190 for two wickets, (Hobbs, 111, not cut, Sheppard, 52, not out).

Middlesex versus Leicestershire at Lord's: Middlesex, 196 and 249 for five wickets, declared, (Hendren, 101, not out, Lee, 95); Leicestershire: 208, and 127 for five wickets (Shipman, 52).

TONY LAZZERI AND KOENIG PULL BONERS

Yankee Stars Lead in Dumb Moves For This Season

By WM. BRAUCHER

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 2.—Some big-hearted gent who doesn't hate to see his name in the public prints ought to give a prize of some sort, any little token would suffice, for the major leagues' prize "pansy," or bonehead play. The contest could be divided into the months of the baseball calendar, and called the Boob of the Month Award or something like that.

To date the wonderful faux pas of Messrs. Koeing and Lazzeri of the Yankees holds the ranking position. In the opening game with a nice double play in sight, Koeing took a bounder from the bat of Al Simmons and tossed to Lazzeri to force Mule Haas at second. Lazzeri then started complacently off the field, thinking three men were out and that was all. It happened that only two were out, however, so Shortstop Koeing went about the business of retrieving the play. How did Shortstop Koeing go about retrieving the play? By chasing down Mule Haas, who already had been forced at second. Meantime, Al Simmons strolled down to second base, asked for a Murad and how's your uncle.

Press Box Breaks Out

This was the signal for the press box. Stories of pansies flew thick and fast.

"Do you remember the time?" was the theme of the meeting after that. Every scrib in the box did happen to remember another prize play.

Fred Merkle's failure to touch second base in the pennant race of 1908, a failure that cost a pennant for the Giants; Heinie Zimmermann's chasing Eddie Collins across home plate in a world series; John Anderson's stealing of second base when it was already occupied—these and other classics of the diamond were recalled.

Heinie All-Time Champ

Heinie Mueller the former Cardinal outfielder, who built a lovely chicken coop in the cellar of his home and had to tear it down to get it outdoors, pulled a prize pansy in a game at Chicago some five years ago.

Doak was pitching for the Cards and Mueller had been instructed to watch the signals carefully. When a slow ball was called for, Mueller was to come in about 20 feet, and he was to back up against the fence when a fast one was signalled. The wise crowd in the bleachers got next to what Heinie was doing and started to sing "Slow ball, slow ball, slow ball" whenever Mueller moved in, and "Fast ball, fast ball, fast ball" when he retreated.

The crowd's rhythmic chanting finally so got on Heinie's nerves that, with the bases loaded, he came in on a fast ball signal. The batter socked one far over Heinie's dome and that broke up the game.

A Classic Reply

Branch Rickey asked Heinie about it after the game.

"What's the matter, Heinie, didn't you get the fast ball signal?" Rickey asked his errant outfielder. "Sure," was Mueller's surprising reply, "I knew a fast ball was coming, but I thought I would cross that gang in the bleachers."

It happened that Doak overheard the conversation.

"What chance has a guy like me got?" said Doak. "I'm only trying to fool the batters—and Mueller is out there fooling the crowd."

"JAM" MOUNTIFIELD LEAVES FOR POSITION IN VANCOUVER

"Jam" Mountifield, one of Edmonton's most talented golfers, former holder of the Western Canada amateur title, and winner of the city championship on more than one occasion, is lost to Edmonton golf perhaps for a long time, the brilliant-stroking 22 year old marvel having hied himself to Vancouver where he is taking up a position—not a golfing one.

The clever "Jam" who comes by his golfing ability naturally, the Mountifields being the outstanding golfing family in Canada, left Thursday night for the coast metropolis at the urging of Don Gowan, ex-Edmontonian and golfer of note and Dunc Sutherland, former pro at the Country Club here.

Naturally Good

"Jam" Mountifield is one of those enviable golfers who can wait around all season without practising too hard and then enter a tournament and take the honors or come very close to it. Semi-finalist in the Canadian amateur in 1929 is amongst his various golfing feats.

His sister, Mae Mountifield is also ex-amateur ladies' champion of Western Canada and one of the finest golfers of the fair sex in the country.

You'll more than likely hear of "Jam" in the Pacific North-West tournament around the end of June for he intends entering and he's bound to be up when the prizes are being handed around.

Edmonton's loss is just a big break for Vancouver and "Jam's" legion of friends will wish him the best of luck in his new surroundings.

SHOOTING WITH SHUTE by DENNY SHUTE

"NEVER UP, NEVER IN," IS OLD ADVICE, BUT IT'S BLAMED GOOD STUFF, DE CLARES DENNY

Some will criticize me for bringing up "old stuff," but to that group I am forced to put this question, "Didn't it help you once?" And for the great army of new golfers who never may have heard it, the "old stuff" is this ancient saying, "Never up, never in."

It's an old phrase the pros have for being sarcastic with pupils whose putting falls short of the cup and means, simply, that a putt that is not struck hard enough to reach the cup is one that will never drop in. It hasn't a chance.

Aim at Opposite Rim

I was told long ago by my father, who also is a professional, that the best way to avoid this particular putting ill is to aim to reach the far side of the cup. If you can do that, they'll never go too far or not far enough.

A putt that falls short is just about the most disgusting thing that can happen to a good player. He seethes within because of his temerity and frequently it hurts the rest of his game.

Get 'Em Up There

Learn early to get your putts up to the cup. Lots of the long ones you least expect to make will drop in if you do.

In a recent article I mentioned the difference in putting stances used by some of the good players. About all I can add to my advice of that article is to take a comfortable position; forget about everything except getting the club head through without "cutting" the ball; and get it up there.

States Davis Cup Players Work Hard

PHILADELPHIA, May 3. — John Van Ryn, of East Orange, N. J., and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas, for the second straight day defeated George M. Lott, of Chicago, and John Hope Doeg, of Santa Monica, Calif., national doubles kings, in a Davis Cup workout test at the Huntingdon Valley Country Club yesterday, 6-4, 7-5.

Japan Gains Lead Over Hungary 2-0

Associated Press

BUDAPEST, Hungary, May 3.—Japan took a 2 to 0 lead over Hungary in the first two singles matches of their Davis Cup tie here yesterday.

Poland Divided With Rumanians

Associated Press

WARSAW, Poland, May 3.—Rumania and Poland divided the opening singles matches of their first round Davis Cup tennis tie yesterday. M. Mishu of Rumania defeated Max Stolarvo, 6-3, 4-6, 6-4, 6-4 and Tloczynski, of Poland, defeated Poulieff, 6-3, 8-5, 6-4.

Austin Himself Suggested Drop From Davis Play

Associated Press

LONDON, May 3.—W. H. "Bunny" Austin, the young and somewhat erratic British tennis ace, has not been dropped from the Davis Cup team, it developed yesterday, but is only resting out of Britain's second round match against either Poland or Rumania at his own request.

Austin, in a letter to the English Lawn Tennis Association, said he did not desire to play in the next series feeling the need of a respite.

"I told them," Austin said, "that I did not think I could do either my country or myself justice in my present form, and that I needed at least a fortnight's rest from strenuous lawn tennis. The team selectors agreed and that is the reason I shall not be on the next team."

Clarence De Mar Banking On Win In Olympic Games

BOSTON, May 2.—Clarence Harrison De Mar, famous Melrose, Mass., distance runner, who recently captured the Boston A. A. marathon race for the seventh time, hopes to crown his illustrious career with a victory in the 1932 Olympic Marathon at Los Angeles.

He was twenty-four years old when he finished twelfth at the Stockholm Marathon in 1912. He finished third in the Paris Olympics in 1924 and finished twenty-seventh in the Amsterdam Marathon in 1928.

De Mar competed in thirty-five marathons and has won fifteen as follows: The Boston Marathon, seven times; Brockton in 1911 and 1917; Baltimore in 1926 and 1927; Portchester, N. Y., 1926; Sesquicentennial at Philadelphia in 1926; Providence-Boston (forty-four miles) 1928 and Halifax, Labor Day, 1929.

The Seven Living Ex-Heavy Champs To See Big Fight

NEW YORK, May 2.—The seven living former heavyweight champions will be invited by the Milk Fund boxing benefit directors to sit at the ringside on the evening of June 12 when Jack Sharkey and Max Schmeling battle for the title that has been in cold storage since Gene Tunney iced it nearly two years ago.

Invitations have gone out to Tunney, Jack Dempsey, Jim Jeffries, Jack Johnson, Jim Corbett, Jess Willard and Burns, the Canadian. Corbett, Tunney, Burns and Johnson are now in New York. Dempsey will come from Chicago and Willard and Jeffries from Los Angeles.

GUN CLUB TO OPEN SEASON MONDAY NIGHT

Official Opening Carded With Competitions in Three Classes

The official opening of the Edmonton Gun Club for the 1930 season will take place on Monday night at its ranges in the West End when a record number of marksmen are expected to compete in the trapshooting.

In order to make this year's official opening the greatest in the history of the club, all members have been invited to attend Monday night's shoot and each of them has been asked to bring a friend in order to have as many as possible in the competitions.

The initial competitions of the season will see the competitors divided into three classes, "A", "B" and "C", being rated on past performances.

To the winner in each class will go a silver spoon, suitably engraved, three of them having being donated by A. E. Turvey, of the Dominion Ammunition Co.

As there will be only one trap in use Monday night, all members are asked to be on hand at five o'clock sharp. The trap in use at the present time has been moved east to better ground and ideal conditions are expected for the official opening.

PATS and PANS
by BILL LEWIS

The move of the local Senior Amateur Baseball League in switching all of their Sunday games this coming summer to the new Lakeview resort at South Cooking Lake seems to be meeting with a lot of favor among the boys along the main stem who take their baseball seriously but who also like to get out of the city on Sunday during the hot weather. There are some, of course, who don't think very highly of the move in taking the Sunday games out of the city judging from the talk of close followers of the senior leaguers, there seems to be a good-sized majority of them in favor of it, and there is likely to be a general exodus of ball fans from Edmonton to Lakeview on Sundays once the season gets underway.

The feeling prevalent at the meeting the other night when the managers of the four clubs decided to give the Lakeview proposition a tryout, was that no harm could be done by going there for this summer at least; if present interest in the decision amounts to anything, they may do better in the Sunday games at the lake than they have done in the city in the past. At any rate, they're going to stage the week-end games there and only time is required to tell whether the move is a success or not.

And, speaking of the senior leaguers, just a week and a half remains before the teams swing into action in their 1930 campaign for the championship of Frank Harris' four-club circuit. In order to allow sufficient time for the play-off and challenge cup series after the completion of the league schedule, the opening was moved up a week by a vote of the executive at the last meeting. In the past, when the play-off for the league title was over there was not much time left for the challenge round for the Empire Hotel cup, which series is open to teams in the senior and intermediate leagues. The Bulls and South Side are billed to pry off the lid on May 14 this spring, the opening day being a Wednesday.

There has been some talk this past winter of a Dominion play-off for amateur baseball teams in 1930. Whether these playdowns between provincial champions will materialize remains a matter of extreme doubt in the mind of your chronicler. So far as declaring a Dominion championship team is concerned, there does not appear to be a great deal of hope but it is possible that the holding of the provincial titular series may be revived.

The Alberta Amateur Baseball Association was reorganized last year and those at its helm are trying to regain the old play-offs which were lost a few years ago when semi-pro ball came strongly to the front in Northern and Southern Alberta.

Semi-pro ball had existed for years in the province, but when the last big group of amateur stars had their cards taken away, it saw the breaking up of a number of the old simon pure clubs, the disappearance of the Alberta play-offs and the semi-pro brand forged more to the front. Amateur baseball, in Edmonton, at least, has made a gradual recovery and, with the annual meeting of the A. A. B. A. scheduled in Stavely next Wednesday, there is a bare possibility that something may be done about the revival of the provincial championship series this summer.

Basketball fans who have had a look at the size of the playing members of the Chicago "Taylor-Trunks" and seen them in practice on the Arena floor since their arrival here Thursday, predict that the Grads will be facing the toughest assignment they have had in years when they hook up with them in the first of their two-game series tonight. Every member of the team is tall and carries plenty of poundage. On top of that, they appear to be a real good basketball team if form in workouts count for anything. With good opposition for Coach Percy Page's champions assured, a big crowd of hoop fans will likely be on hand when the teams line up at 8:30 this evening.

Had a look at the new holes under construction at the Mayfair Golf and Country Club yesterday and came to the conclusion that the course on the South Side will be hard to beat anywhere in the country when the work is completed this summer. Every one of the holes is being well trapped and the setting of each improved.

Work on the new Highlands Golf Club course is being rushed to completion for the official opening of the first nine holes next Saturday. The recent warm weather has helped to get the greens and fairways into good shape and everything is expected to be in readiness in good time for the opening.

SENATORS HIT THREE BROWNS FOR 13 RUNS

Joe Sewell's Consecutive Games Record is Broken

Associated Press

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 3.—The Senators pounded three St. Louis pitchers for 17 hits yesterday while Sad Sam Jones was holding the Browns to seven safties to pave the way to a Washington victory by a score of 13 to 5.

Joe Cronin, Washington shortstop whose big bat has helped put the Senators on top of the league, hit four times out of five for two doubles and a triple, thereby accounting for four of the Nationals' runs.

Clancy Big Shot

NEW YORK, N. Y., May 3.—Ted Lyons and Bud Clancy took the show away from the other players yesterday as the Chicago White Sox opened their eastern tour with a 10 to 1 victory over the tail-end New York Yankees.

Lyons held the Yankees to six hits and kept them well scattered. Clancy, Chicago first baseman, hit two home runs, a triple and a single to drive in six runs. Each homer came while Cissell was on base. Earl Combs made two of the Yankee hits.

Sewell's Streak Ended

BOSTON, Mass., May 3.—Cleveland won its fourth straight game yesterday by scoring six runs in the last two innings to beat the Red Sox 8 to 3 in Boston's first east-west game of the season.

Joe Sewell's record for consecutive games played, ended when he was forced to remain in bed with a temperature of 102. Starting in 1920 Joe had played 1,102 consecutive games for Cleveland.

First Night Ball Game Successful

DES MOINES, Iowa, May 3.—The Des Moines and Wichita clubs of the Western League demonstrated to 7,000 spectators last night that baseball can be played successfully by electric light.

The clubs opened the home season and Des Moines won 13 to 6, largely by virtue of a wild first inning in which 11 runs were scored.

The lighting was carried out by the use of 140 General Electric floodlights and the game was broadcasted. It is expected that the new wrinkle will be adopted in many parts of Canada and the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif., May 3.—The Oakland Oaks retained their leading position in the Pacific Coast League despite the fact that they dropped both ends of a double-header to Los Angeles yesterday. The scores were 3-2 and 4-1.

The local Seals moved into second place by defeating Sacramento 9-8 in a tight battle.

At Seattle, the Missions made it three out of four by pounding out a 13-5 victory over the Indians. Hollywood and Portland were rained out.

Brooklyn Breaks Atlanta Relations At Last — Bu

ATLANTA, May 2.—Baseball relations between Atlanta and the Brooklyn Robins have been discontinued, according to Rell J. Spiller, vice-president of the Atlanta Club. There had been a strong alliance between the two clubs for several years, and it was thought that with peace reigning in Brooklyn that the arrangement between the Crackers and the Robins would continue without interruption.

Patricia Tennis Club Courts Open

The courts of the Patricia Tennis Club are now ready and open for play, although the official opening is not planned until some time next week.

A number of club members have been working out lately on the courts and pronounce them in excellent condition.

The secretary will receive applications from any players in the city desiring to join the club.

Ontario Allows S'ball 1st Sacker To Play With Mitt

TORONTO, Ont., May 2.—The Ontario Amateur Softball Association last year had some 8,500 members affiliated with it. At the annual meeting held recently in Kingston, Ont. a recommendation from Windsor, that first basemen, as well as catchers, be allowed to use a mitt, was carried, but the rule is optional with players.

Hitting Splurge in Second Inning Drives in Seven Runs for Cincys

CINCINNATI, Ohio, May 3.—The Cincinnati Reds put on a big burst of hitting in the second inning yesterday and opened their stand against the eastern clubs of the National League by beating the New York Giants 9-8. They made eight hits among them a double and a triple by Heilmann, off Fred Fitzsimmons and Ralph Judd in the one inning.

Bill Terry's home run featured the ninth inning stand. There also were ten doubles and two triples in the game.

CHICAGO, Ills., May 3.—The Cubs made better use of 14 hits than Philadelphia did with 15, to win the opening game of the series, 11 to 8, yesterday.

Eleven extra base-hits, most of them by the Phillies, featured the contest. Hal Carlson went the route for Chicago, while Koupal, Grover Cleveland Alexander and Milligan worked for Philadelphia. Lefty O'Doul of the Phils and Kiki Cuyler, for the Cubs, hit safely four times in five times at bat, while Klein and Sigman got home runs for Philadelphia in the ninth.

Alberta Amateur Ball Association Meeting on May 7

E. D. Baltrum, secretary-treasurer of the Alberta Amateur Baseball Association, reminds clubs that the annual general meeting of that body will be held in Stavely on Wednesday, May 7, at three p.m.

All clubs intending to play amateur baseball in the province this year are urged to be represented at this meeting.

Delegates must bring to the meeting credentials signed by two executive officers of the club concerned and fee for their club membership for the ensuing year.

The association already have five championship cups and six district challenge cups; addition district challenge cups have been offered if sufficient clubs join the association this year. Full details of all the competitions are contained in the 1929 handbook, which can be obtained from the secretary-treasurer.

Brantford Welcomes Back Pro Baseball

BRANTFORD, May 1.—Brantford will be in the new Ontario professional baseball league without a doubt. This much was assured after Knotty Lee and Dixie Walker the latter local manager, conferred with a number of business and professional men.

The financial support will be forthcoming to place the club on a sound footing, and with players reporting next week for practice the citizens are looking forward to some good baseball this summer.

Dixie Walker has already been besieged with applications, and will have no trouble making up his quota of Canadian players with men who have had experience. The manager has also lines on his regulars, who, he states, will not be experiments.

The citizens generally were pleased to hear of the attempt to bring the pro. game back. The Telephone City team will toe the mark with the other six teams on May 14.

Fill 'Em Up With Song

SPECTACULAR BODY TEST IN MOVIE FILM

A spectacular movie of an engineering experiment in which Dodge Brothers Mono-Piece body sedan is seen hurtling down a steep mountain-side has proved a unique feature of interest at Dodge dealer meetings held throughout Canada. The view of the automobile rolling over and over in a giddy, breath-taking plunge down a jagged, precipitous slope, provided a convincing demonstration of the extraordinary qualities of this type of body construction.

Planned originally to test the strength of Mono-Piece metal bodies, pioneered in this country on Dodge Brothers automobiles, the experiment upon which this dramatic and intensely interesting film was based proved equally effective in measuring the sturdiness of chassis, frame, wheels—in fact all parts of the car.

Three different times the car is seen "taking-off" from a special runway built on the mountainside. Altogether it is turned completely over nine times on its way to the bottom of the hill. Twice its descent is checked by its own inherent balance. Crucial stages of the car's exciting adventure were "stopped" for engineering analysis by slow-motion close-ups.

The runway, which is supposed to upset the car as it begins its perilous journey, fails at first to offset its balance. Tilted precariously on two wheels, the car careens off wildly down the treacherous incline, but like a cat, finds its feet and comes to rest unharmed.

For the second trial, the angle or pitch of the runway is greatly increased and the car shoots off into space at a much higher rate of speed. Its balance completely upset, the car lands with a tremendous impact that sends it spinning dizzily down the mountain side. Body, chassis, wheels and the entire assembly are subjected to terrific shock and stress.

Mono-Piece body engineers knew that the great strength of all-metal construction would withstand a sensational battering and still afford protection to passengers inside the car. And so, this daring experiment was decided upon to dramatically portray the durability, safety and stamina of this rapidly increasing type of automobile body construction.

HEAT CONTROL FEATURE OF WILLYS SIX

The new Willys Six, announced by the Willys-Overland Co., features a gasoline heat control system operated from the dash which provides minimum gasoline temperatures for fast driving and hard pulls with high temperatures for starting and ordinary driving in winter time.

Engineers point out that while this device is entirely new to the field of low-priced sixes, it is essential in securing the maximum of performance and economy, and is of particular value in a car like the Willys Six, which combines a high speed of 72 miles an hour with rapid acceleration and flashing performance in second gear.

"With this improvement, it is possible to secure the same flexibility and efficiency of motor action throughout all the months of the year," says a report from the engineering department of Willys-Overland.

"No longer is it necessary for the driver to accept poor performance at one temperature in order to secure good performance at another, or waste gasoline in slow driving to have the power necessary for high speeds and hill climbing.

"In the manifolding of the Willys Six, the exhaust is set above the intake and a percentage of the exhaust gas may be deflected around the head of the tube which leads the gas to the intake manifold. This is controlled by a valve, operated by a plunger carried on the instrument board, and provides minimum gas temperatures for maximum work and high temperatures for the warming up period. It is especially desirable in the cold winter months.

"While the advantages of this heat control system in starting is instantly apparent, it is equally as important in ordinary driving. Highest efficiency and greatest economy is secured by opening the heat valve for driving at ordinary speeds.

"Time required for warming up the motor when starting on cold mornings is materially lessened by opening up the heat valve. This also makes excessive use of the choke unnecessary."

What BALANCED ENGINEERING means to
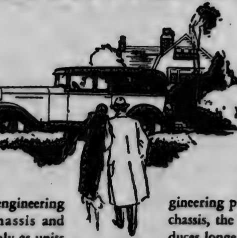
OLDSMOBILE



As exemplified throughout the Oldsmobile, balanced engineering means that engine, chassis and body are created not only as units of individual excellence, but . . even more important than that . . as parts of a perfectly harmonized whole.

A rugged 62 horsepower engine incorporates many major advancements which contribute to Oldsmobile's smooth, powerful, pace-setting performance . . a low, sturdy, clean-cut chassis ensures unusual roadability and staunch, steady service . . and in harmony with these balanced engineering principles of motor and chassis, the body by Fisher, introduces longer, lower lines in a wide range of color combinations.

In addition, Oldsmobile offers many desirable new features which reveal themselves only when you drive this finer six. Visit our showrooms today. Get behind the wheel and let a demonstration reveal Oldsmobile's remarkable flexibility. Ask about the G. M. A. C., General Motors' own plan of convenient payments.

INSTALL NEW SPARK PLUGS, DEALERS URGE

National Change Week Is May the 5th to 11th

Local dealers in automotive equipment are uniting with their colleagues throughout the world in urging car owners to join in observing National Change Week, which has come to be recognized everywhere as the annual period when motorists install new sets of spark plugs in their engines. National Change Week this year is May 5 to 11.

The number of participants in National Change Week has grown steadily ever since its inauguration and now every year millions of car owners are shown by reports as having had their spark plugs replaced.

It is predicted that in 1930 the number of observers of National Change Week will be materially in excess of all previous totals. This forecast is based in part on the general increase of interest manifested each year about the custom. There is also a consensus of opinion among automotive experts that last winter's severely cold weather and the generally rough condition of roads imposed an unusually severe strain on spark plugs, with the result that this spring motorists find new spark plugs needed for easy starting and generally satisfactory engine performance.

Spark plug design and manufacture have improved vastly in recent years. Today, they are actually in advance of other motor car design, especially in their rapid development in relation to high compression automobile power plants. But these high compression engines and modern fuels have imposed even greater strain and stress on spark plugs than ever before. It is, therefore, the conviction of automotive engineers that annual replacement of spark plugs is not only a necessity, but an actual economy for the car owner.

PLYMOUTH IS FULL-SIZE CAR

The Plymouth automobile is designed at the direction of Walter P. Chrysler, who wished to provide those motorists who desire a low-cost, economical car, with the riding comfort usually associated only with automobiles costing considerably more. Cramped riding positions, due to lack of body space, are done away with in the Plymouth.

Every inch of length and height has been utilized in designing and building Plymouth bodies in order to provide the seating space requisite for real comfort. The sedan, for example, has comfortable seating capacity for five adult passengers, with ample leg and head room for each. Hundreds of tests were made by engineers to determine the proper amount of space necessary for each individual, and the results of these tests were used in designing the bodies for all models.

For some years Chrysler Motors engineers had felt that low-priced cars did not offer bodies which were in keeping with their mechanical excellence. In designing the Plymouth they supplied this deficiency by combining riding luxury with the perfected Silver Dome engine. With long, low, roomy bodies, balanced on strong, flexible springs, and with wide, well-padded seats, placed at the proper angle and fitted with saddle-spring cushions, Plymouth is today a car of full size, ful comfort and utility, a distinct achievement in the low-price market.

RAPID PROGRESS IN EPRU HIGHWAYS

Peru, a country virtually without highways until 1921, today has more than 11,000 miles of roads constructed, with a building program calling for 12,500 miles more within a few years.

There was in traffic over these roads at the end of 1928 a total of 7,250 automobiles, 93 per cent of which were of North American manufacture. Official figures for all Peru to July 1, 1929, and for the Lima-Callao district to December 1, show approximately 10,000 automobiles and 6,000 trucks.

How's she hittin'

With the present high speeds and high combustion engines, the use of the better grades of oil is most important. These two developments in motordom make a severe demand on the lubricating medium in the crankcase.

The higher speeds have produced a considerable increase in the consumption of oil, and the worse the oil the more severe the wear and tear on the engine. At the same time, the higher compression engines producing higher horsepower have added to this demand for good oil always kept in good condition.

It does not matter where the oil comes from. So long as it is of good quality, it will do the work required of it. What the motorist should consider in buying oil is the organization which produces it and the service man who sells it. If both are reliable and of established character, then the purchaser may feel secure in using their product. What he should avoid is the nondescript oil sold "cheaper" and by some unknown dealer.

There used to be a feeling that an oil that comes from a certain part of the country is the best oil. This is not true today when every responsible oil producer, no matter what part of the country his product comes from, is trying to give us the best possible grade of oil on the market.

More oil than is actually required in the crankcase should never be supplied. It does more harm than good. It is bound to be pumped up past the pistons into the combustion chambers, fould the spark plugs, deposit carbon over the valves and piston and cause detonation, missing and loss of power. Besides, it's an added expense, if only for the additional oil.

Drivers sometimes add that extra harmful quart of oil when they see the engine using it up rather quickly.

There are two reasons for this. One is the result of fast and long driving which causes an exceptional expenditure of lubricating oil. There is nothing wrong with the motor if this is the only cause, and all that the driver need do is replenish the oil more often than he would in city driving.

The other cause for undue loss of oil is worn piston rings. This may be decided on as the probable cause when the exhaust pipe emits a dense blue smoke. The cure, of course, is new piston rings or, if the motor has been run several thousand miles, it may require reboring and the installation of oversize pistons and rings. Heavy oil may help for a while but not very long.

During cold weather the crankcase may not show any loss of oil at all, but that should not be taken as a sign that everything is right with the lubrication system. It may merely mean that unburned gasoline has seeped into the crankcase and made up for the used oil. It is therefore more important than at any other time to change the oil often in winter. Frequent use of the choke causes the gasoline to get into the crankcase.

The color of the oil is no criterion of its quality. A real good oil may blacken almost immediately after being poured into the crankcase. This may be caused by the tiniest bit of carbon in the crankcase, but this does little or no injury to its lubricating qualities.

This is particularly true if the filter element of the oil filter has been in service for less than 7,500 or 8,000 miles. The filter element may be workable up to 10,000 miles of driving, but after that it should be replaced with a new cartridge. Too much dirt, sludge and other foreign matter may have collected in it by that time to permit efficient filtering.

In draining old oil from the crankcase, there is no need of cleaning with kerosene. Kerosene, if the least bit remains after cleaning, will cut the oil and reduce its lubricating quality. If the motor is warm, the oil will drain out quite thoroughly but every last bit of it should be drained before new oil is put in. It is the last quart or so that is dirtiest.

If the last dregs of the old oil seems quite dirty, the motor might be flushed out with a quart of thin oil, but not with kerosene.

DANISH MOTORISTS INSURED

Automobile and motorcycle drivers in Denmark must pay for the protection of pedestrians. The country is one of the two in the world which have federal laws compelling all drivers to carry liability insurance.

EASING THE BLOW

A new safety guard for street cars and automobiles tried out in London consists of a frame with four cross bars padded with sponge-like material. On hitting a pedestrian or object the device is said to soften the shock.

AUTOS TAKE HUGE TOLL

According to recent estimates more than 180,000 people were killed, and over 6,000,000 injured, in automobile accidents in the United States during the past 10 years.

PLANE FIGURES

There is one licensed airplane in operation in the United States for every 19,800 people in the country, according to the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce.

A new three jet 1¼ inch carburetor on Hudson's new Great Eight insures instant acceleration and provides ample fuel feed at all speeds.

Prompt starting of the Hudson Great Eight motor is aided by an automatic choke which ceases the choking action as soon as the engine is warmed up.

TOURING U.S. DRIVERS MEET VARYING LAWS

WASHINGTON, May 3.—Obeying traffic laws in your own community may be easy, but a motorist desiring to observe faithfully all the traffic regulations he would encounter on a tour of the United States, would have his hands full of trouble.

On such a trip he would encounter both extremes in traffic laws. In Massachusetts, for instance, he would be allowed to go only 20 miles an hour. When he entered New York this limit would be raised to 30; in Pennsylvania 35; Ohio 45; Illinois 45; Utah 30 and in California 40.

In Massachusetts it is not permissible to go more than eight miles an hour in business sections where there is no traffic control. In Mississippi it is permissable to go ten. In residential districts of Massachusetts a driver is allowed 15 miles an hour. In Maryland and Mississippi the restrictions are the same.

Some Set No Limit

Some states believe that there should be no restriction on speed. This is based on the theory that slow traffic is a greater menace to traffic than fast. Notable among these states are Michigan and Kansas. The former makes no restrictions on the open highway, but sets limits of 15 miles an hour in business sections and 20 in residential districts.

Kansas has no state law regarding speed with the exception of one clause in its traffic code that limits to 15 miles an hour vehicles driving across railroad crossings and intersections or turning curves.

Other states which have open speed limits on country highways are Montana, Tennessee, Vermont and Wisconsin.

Some Laws Conflict

Two instances of antiquated traffic laws that have been passed and forgotten are the following:

Missouri law says that speeds in excess of 25 miles an hour are unlawful for passenger cars under any conditions. Yet 40 miles an hour is permissable for busses.

Mississippi provides that anyone driving a car who fails to come to a full stop when passing a church, a school house, an animal or pedestrian is liable to be fined or given a jail sentence or both.

PLAN BETTER ROADS

Japan plans to spend $20,000,000 over a period of 10 years, in constructing and maintaining better roads. There is one automobile to travel Japan's highways now for every 1,525 persons.

NO TOWN FOR CROOKS

Fewer automobiles are stolen and a greater percentage are recovered in Denver, Ohio than in any other city in the United States, according to the Automobile club of Southern California.

BIG ROAD PLAN

Colorado's highway department budget, calling for the expenditure of more than $6,000,000 for construction and maintenance of roads during 1930, has been approved. In addition, $3,500,000 left from last year's budget will be used.

PLAN GAS TAX BOOST

Four states are contemplating an increase in gasoline taxes. Mississippi plans a raise from five to six cents; New York from two to three; Idaho from four to five, and Massachusetts from two to three.

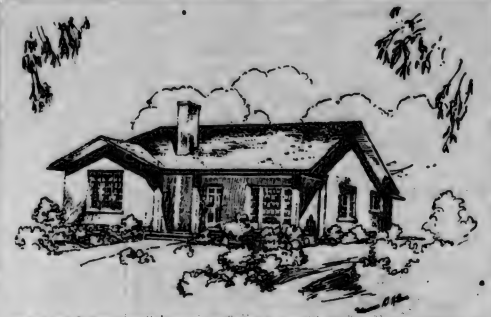
A Southern Type Bungalow of Unusual Interest



The high cost of living, combined with the greatly increased cost of home building in suburban districts has resulted in more and more people being interested in attractive smaller homes, that have all the essential features of the larger modern houses. This Southern type bungalow will be of genuine interest to these people, for it is designed to fill this need and provide at the same time a comfortable home for a small family that, when compared with the ordinary house, will efect an unusual saving in house work, taxes, cost of heating and general up-keep. The whole design is delightfully simple, homey and artistic—as free from useless frills and decorations as a plainly tailored suit—yet like the tailored suit, always in god style and perfect taste.

A large 9 feet 9 inches by 20 feet 6 inches porch is just one of the features of the floor orangement, yet it is important because it creates the first impression of the house—an impresion of unusual spaciousness and utility that is evident in the interior as well. The main entrance opens off the porch to a large reception hall type of vestibule, that provides direct access to the living room and dining-room, and closed off from the sleeping quarters by a doorway leading to a separate hall. The living room is of comfortable size, and on account of its good proportions will appear larger than it really is. It has triple casement windows on two sides, as well as an attractive fireplace, with built-in book cases on one side. The wall arrangement will permit of several diferent floor positions for large furniture, such as a chesterfield and a piano, without any appearance of being crowded. The dining-room is larger than usual and exceedingly attractive with its triple casement windows on one side and a French door flanked by French windows opening on the porch side. The long narow type of kitchen arangement is absolutely ideal, making work in the kitchen a good deal easier and more convenient. Space is provided for every modern kitchen requirement, including an abundance of cupboard space. The dining, or breakfast alcove is a little feature that does not interfere with the kitchen arangement in any way, and one that will prove to be worth many times its slight cost. The service entrance is located conveniently for the kitchen, as well as the basement, containing separate laundry, vegetable-room, furnace room and coal storage.

Another feature of the floor plans is the hall arangement for the sleeping quarters. The long telescopic hall and waste space is avoided, yet the sleeping quarters are assured of absolute privacy by being closed off from the living portion of the house. The two bedrooms are exceptionally roomy with plenty of light, ventilation and closet space, with a modern bathroom, built-in linen cupboards and a spare closet within a step or two of each of them.

During a big football match one of the spectators persisted in making uncomplimentary remarks in a rather loud voice about the referee. At last the referee could stand it no longer, so he went up to the fellow and said:

"My man, I've been watching you carefully for at least twenty minutes——" Interrupting him the spectator retorted: "I'm not surprised. I could see you were not watching the play."

LOOK FOR BIG ACTIVITY IN DULUTH AREA

Machinery Recently Moved To Location and Drilling to Start

Northwest Utilities, which company holds the franchise for supplying natural gas to the city of Edmonton, will drill in the Viking field this summer for the purpose of increasing its gas supply. Indications are also to hand to the effect that Vancouver capitalists, headed by the well-known coast citizen, General Odlum, will also take a strong hand in assisting to develop the field.

Daugherty Petroleums have a derrick erected and camp equipment in place just east of town and it is expected that work will be under way this summer. Mr. John L. Daugherty is the energetic and experienced representative in the field of this company.

Hargal Oils Ltd., whose drilling activities are at present confined to the Turner Valley Field, have large holdings and it is their intention to develop their property further, as soon as conditions in the market will permit. The property is well located and proven up by such producers as Edmonton-Wainwright, B.P. No. 3-B and Sasko-Wainwright.

Lloyd's Petroleums have a derrick and drilling equipment in place about a mile N.W. of Wainwright and it is announced they intend to commence making a hole early in June. Mr. S. J. Keeplyside of Vancouver is in charge of affairs for this concern.

Oil Selections, a Toronto company have a derrick and equipment in place on the Schewchuk farm, which will likely show activity within the next month or two.

Palmer Oils, it is understood, will do development drilling on their location near Chauvin at an early date, and to this end have arrangements under way.

London-Ribstone Petroleums Ltd., with D. O. Credille as driller and field manager, will resume drilling work within a few days from their present depth of approximately 1,800 feet. Much test work has been done by this veteran driller, for this concern, prior to making the present definite set, so that it is expected that good results should be shown shortly.

Senator Oil and Gas Development Co., with Mr. W. W. Booth, late of the California Fields and prior to that a resident of Ottawa, as promotor and manager in charge, are understood to be arranging for an early drilling campaign. Their derrick is now erected on a location about six miles east of here.

Weymarn Petroleums have carried on structural test work north of Wainwright for several months and have found the results highly interesting. It is understood that a location has been chosen for final drilling and activity awaits the releasing of equipment from another location upon which this concern is now working. Mr. A. H. Ansell has been their field manager during their structural test work.

It is understood that Mr. Thos Rawn, who is a large acreage holder in the Wainwright and other fields, and who has been actively interested in the Wainwright Field almost since its inception, has recently received a charter for a concern which will develop on his Wainwright acreage, which is interestingly located for productive results.

Much activity is looked for this summer in the Duluth Syndicate area where this concern put down a well to a depth of 2,020 feet on 2-29-46-10W4, and in which they encountered a volume of gas to the extent of close to 40,000,000 feet. This has been satisfactorily cased and capped. Another site has been chosen on a location reported to be within a mile of the gasser, and where drilling is expected to be undertaken within a short time by machinery recently moved to location. The company, principally financed by Duluth oil men has large acreage in the vicinity, and it is the intention to go after oil in their No 2 well, using gas from their No. 1 for power purposes.

The Baldwin Oil and Refining Company, a Vancouver concern with Gen Victor Odlum as president, owns a large tract of acreage in this vicinity and it is reported that acreage sublet by them will be developed by Home, Commonwealth and A.P. Con in the near future.

The Northwest Utilities Ltd. are to drill three wells in the Viking field this summer to augment their Edmonton City gas supply. Already their well No. 19 is down below 1,400 feet, where ten inch casing is being run, while their well No. 20 is down to nearly 500 feet.

75 PER CENT. SEEDING DONE PROVOST AREA

Acreage Sown Will Be Fully Up To Total Of Other Years

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

PROVOST, May 3.—Seeding operations in this district were delayed by the recent rains, but at a conservative estimate, that operation is easily 75 per cent. completed, and the work has been done under ideal conditions. The acreage sown will be fully up to normal, with possibly an increase in both wheat and coarse grains by the time seeding is finished. A total of 1.36 inches of moisture fell during the past week, and as one prominent farmer of the district states, "As far as moisture is concerned, this district in common with the remainder of Alberta is now sure of an abundant growth of all crops, so we'll have to find something else to worry about."

Quite a number of the farmers are going into registered wheat growing, Marquis predominating. Owing to the fact that a field crops competition is being staged by the Eastern Alberta Agricultural Society for registered grain, more interest than usual is being shown.

As compared to conditions of wheat fields on May 1last year, prospects for a crop this year are 100 per cent. better; in fact, it would be impossible for them to look any brighter.

The three local Lutheran churches of Provost, Our Saviour's, south-east of town, and Eye Hill, are now happily in possession of three noble works of art through the generosity of Paul Paulgaard, a member of Our Saviour's congregation. The gift consists of three magnificent oil paintings, the work of Dr. John Butler, of Vancouver, portraying "The Saviour on the Cross," "The Ascension," and "Christ's Praying in Gethsemane."

The paintings were formally dedicated to the churches at a dinner given by Mr. Paulgaard in the basement of Our Saviour's church Sunday afternoon last, when about 100 guests were present to offer congratulations to the host on his 63rd birthday anniversary. Speeches in Norwegian were given by Sven Olson, T. Nigvaldson and Eric Johnson, and Simon Yonts gave a brief oration in English.

Mr. Paulgaard, who is one of the original settlers of this district, came here in 1909 from Daysland, where he had taken residence on his first arrival from Norway.

A meeting of the Horse Shoe club will be held in the town hall on Tuesday, May 6, at 8 p.m., for the purpose of organizing for the season's activities. All members and others interested are asked to turn out.

Mrs. Royce Gravert and baby arrived from Calgary on Monday.

Dorothy: "I thought that boy who just passed looked well, didn't you?"

Iris: "Yes, dear—and he's still looking!"

THERE ARE TWO WAYS TO OWN A HOME

Better Way Is To Build From Plans Of Your Own Choice

There are two ways about the business of securing a home. Admittedly the easiest way is to buy one that is already built, but you will pay for the convenience. Most real estate owners have either built to sell at a handsome profit or have purchased from previous owners who have also made a profit, and the man who "buys to dwell" faces a big price and a not very promising future for retrieving what he must expend.

Building your own house is usually the cheapest and certainly the most desirable way of securing the ideal home. It is your own from the very foundatons, it will contain every little improvement which you have always wanted, and it will be in the locality which you yourself choose. And locality is an important factor when you consider your family and the possible question of resale.

The building of a house, however, entails a considerable amount of trouble unless it is gone about in the right way. After the land is purchased you must have a house plan to suit your requirements as well as your purse. If it is your desire to make your home as beautiful as possible permanent, comfortable and convenient in all its interior arrangements, you will be wise to obtain an architect's plans and servce.

Hythe Man Suffers Painful Accident

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

HYTHE, May 3.—Stanley Carter had a rather serious accident last week when he had the misfortune to fall against a buzz saw and cut his shoulder and neck. He is recovering at the Grande Prairie hospital.

James A. Leadbetter was awarded the contract for the building of the new United church and is busy at work. The building is to be completed in June.

Easter services were held in the United church on Easter Sunday. The hall was decorated, the pastor gave an appropriate sermon, and there was special music. Seven members were added to the church list by transfer. The church has been holding a teachers' training course during the winter and six certificates were granted to the following: J. A. Fleming, Mr. Phillips and Rev. Mr. Moss, Mrs. Moss, and Mrs. Horte.

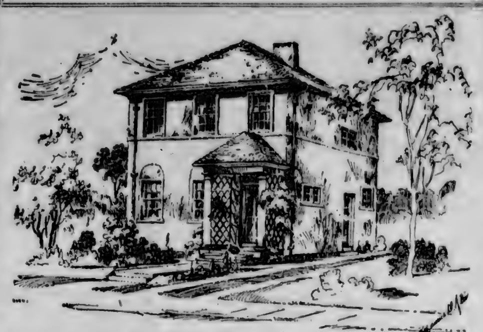
Mrs. Freeman, wife of the local bank manager, has left for Winnipeg, where she will again engage in her old work in the Canadian Chautauqua. She will be gone all summer.

Several railway outfits have arrived in town and the work will no doubt start in real earnest the last of this week. The first 15 miles is supposed to be completed by the middle of August, so that piling for trestle work can be taken out from here. There is considerable bridge work to be done and a rock cut of about three miles in length.

The securing of an electric light franchise for the town of Hythe has been a favorite passtime for the last few days. Mr. Beamish, of Creeland, Sask.; Mr. Nemetz, of the Dominion Electric Power company of Vancouver, and Mr. Nurse of the Canadian Utilities of Grande Prairie, were all here this week, and it was a battle royal. Just who will win is not yet certain, but apparently Mr. Beamish has the edge on the others. At any rate there will be light, and it will be abundant.

Wheat seeding is practically finished and oat seeding well on the way to completion. The soil is in excellent condition, and there is abundance of moisture. It will not need much rainfall to insure a good crop, and if the precipitation is light the sample of grain should be excellent.

Fine Simplicity and Perfect Balance



A large number of people are waiting for the day when they can have an artistic but inexpensive small home about the same size as the modern apartment but with their own separate dooryards ad gardens.

It is with this class in mind that this home has been designed. It is of simple dignified lines derived from Georgian influence and it will meet, we believe, the demand for a type of house that will satisfy the requirements of the small family desiring the ease of simplified housekeeping and also the privacy of the detached house. It is compact, convenient and of unquestioned beauty.

A study of the plan will show that it is an unusually convenient one. The front entrance leads off an attractive porch with well proportioned columns and simple lattice. The hall has a double window at bottom of stairs, and direct access to living-room kitchen and dining alcove as well as basement. A coat-room is provided at the end of the hall within a few steps of front or side door.

The living-room is of ample size with two windows and a cozy fireplace. A door leads from the living-room to the combined kitchen and dining-room, which contains all the requirements of both rooms. Two features in regard to it at once strike us. First, it has a cross draft—listed by every housekeeper as a necessity—and second, it is so placed in relation to the living-room that one chimney carries the flue for the living-room fireplace and the flue for the kitchen range, an important item from the viewpoint of economy.

The dining alcove which takes the place of a dining-room has built-in table and seats, a feature that is being included in many modern houses for small families. If desirable a library table or gateleg table could be used occasionally as a dining-table in the living-room.

In the rear entry is the refrigerator, close by the outside door, and the stairs to the cellar, making the ideal service entrance.

Upstairs we have one large bedroom and one small one, both with good closet space. The bathroom is convenient to both rooms and a built-in linen cupboard is located in the hall.

Altogether this 18-foot 6 inches by 27 foot home has all the features of an apartment with all the advantages of a home.

Fire Burns Barn At Three Hills

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

THREE HILLS, May 3.—On Tuesday evening about 11 o'clock a blaze in E. Huxley's barn brought out the fire brigade in a hurry. It broke out in the hay loft, and caused considerable damage before it was got under control. There had been a couple of hoboes in that vicinity, and it is thought they must have been sleeping in the hay and dropped a match.

The Masons of Trochu challenged the local Masons for a game of softball on Tuesday evening. It looked as though the Trochu boys were going to have a walk away, but when Andy and Charlie got busy at the bat the game began to look more interesting, and ended in favor of Three Hills 10-7. The return game will be played in Trochu the end of the week.

Heavy rains are making the crop outlook brighter every day, and the farmers are smiling at the prospect of a bumper crop. Wheat seeding is just about finished in this district.

Gas Starts Blaze Near Coronation

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

CORONATION, May 3.—The farm house and contents of Mike Filipinko were totally destroyed by fire Wednesday and Mrs. Filipinko was painfully burned about the face and arms and now lies in the Coronation hospital. The farm is situated eight miles west of this town.

The fire started when Mrs. Filipinko was ironing clothes, a can of gasoline standing near the stove exploding. She was trapped in the house when the fire broke out, as in her excitement she could not get the door open. She finally made her escape through a window.

EVERY FAMILY SHOULD OWN A RESIDENCE

Highest Form of Comfort and Home Life Is Direct Result

A home, in permanent form is really one of the greatest objectives in a well-ordered and successful life. Virturally every ambitious person wants to own a home of his own or her own some day, and a willing to make the investment of a life-time to obtain it. Especially is this true in Canada, where people of the most modest means will put their best into the establishment of a "roof-tree and patch of green," and will sacrifice and work and plan to keep and beautify it, valuing it always as the nucleus of family life and the fundamental symbol of property.

To have a home of your own means that you have graduated into the class which "lives" rather than that other which "exists." It may also mean the investment of the better part of your available means as well as financial obligations which will extend over a period of years, but it will mean too, that you have taken the first step towards the establishment of real independence and really profitable living.

Keep Cool this Summer with Canvas that will protect you from the glaring Sunshine.

We suggest that you order your AWNINGS early, from US.

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES ON LOWER TRENDS

Sales Very Heavy as Liquidation Spree Starts

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER
Associated Press Financial Editor

NEW YORK, N.Y., May 3—Stock market took another tumble today, as weakened marginal accounts and pool holdings were dumped overboard, and a large volume of frrightened liquidation from all sources followed. The losses in general approximated those of yesterday. Total sales for the two-hour session exceeded 4,000,000 shares, the most furious pace since last November.

The selling was a continuation of the movement which developed yesterday, and was scarcely attributable to anything in the day's meagre business news.

The market opened with a deluge of selling, representing an overnight accumulation of selling orders. It rallied a little around the middle of the morning, but sold off sharply just before the close, and closing prices were in many cases the lowest of the day. The close was decidedly weak.

Among the wide movers, Vanadium lost 17 points; U.S. Steel sold off about 6 points; Radio tumbled 9 points; Westinghouse lost nearly 14 points; Utilities were acutely weak, Public Service of N.J. losing 6½ and American Telephone 5½; General Electric lost 5¼. Rails appeared to have been fully deflated in the collapse of Friday and maintained a fairly steady tone. Atchison closed up 1¼.

Leading Financial Co'y Establishes Calgary Offices

The establishment of a branch office in Calgary is announced by Wood, Gundy, Limited.

The firm is one of the oldest and best known to investors throughout Canada, and has been associaaed over a period of many years with the financing of the Western Provinces and cities, including the recent issues of the Province of Alberta. During the last few years the Wood, Gundy organization has been instrumental in returning to or retaining in Canada, control of several large, essentially Canadian companies, such as Belgo-Canadian Paper Company, acquired from Belgian interests, and Massey-Harris Company Limited at a time when American interests were negotiating with the company. Their prominence in Canadian finance is well known in New York and London, as well as in Canada, and is known to Western Canadians through the company's association with the financing of Canada Cement Company Limited, Canadian Western Natural Gas, Light, Heat and Power Company Limited, United Grain Growers, Limited, Western Grain Company Limited, British Columbia Power Corporation, and Federal Grain Limited.

The head office of the company is in Toronto, and the chief western branch is in Winnipeg. Other branches are maintained in Montreal, Ottawa, London, Hamilton, Vancouver, Regina, New York, and London, England.

The Calgary office will be located at 407 Toronto General Trusts Building, and will be under the direction of Arthur E. Oliver, formerly of the Winnipeg office.

"LIKE TOLSTOY"

The Bulletin's Daily Short Story From Real Life.

By B. VLADIMIR BERMAN

THE CAST OF CHARACTERS IN "LIKE TOLSTOY"

THE VAG, who has a history.
THE PHILANTROPIST, who has a heart.
THE GIRL.

"Mister, could you let me have a dime for a cup of coffee?" Some nights you walk through the crowded city without hearing a single plea of this sort; other nights there seems to be an avalanche of them

Some nights you're in the mood and hand out nickels, dimes and quarters; then, again, you're hard-boiled and don't shell out a red cent.

That night I had ignored half a dozen "vags" who sidled up to me as I walked down 6th avenue from 42nd street to my flat in the village. And I was about to turn down this fellow, who hailed me at 23rd street, but there was something arresting in his voice. I halted and said, "I won't give you a dime, but I'm on my way for a bite to eat, and you may join me if you want to."

"Thanks a lot, mister," he beamed. "A dime wouldn't go far anyhow. I haven't eaten since yesterday."

"Well, here's the chop house. I'll give you a chance to prove that last assertion."

The man ate voraciously in silence for half an hour, and as I only took a sandwich and coffee, it gave me a chance to study my guest. A strange combination of breeding and grime, I noted. The latter, of course, was not due to any desire to be untidy; lack of funds doubtless was responsible for that, as well as the keen appetite. I waited eagerly for the man to finish, certain he had a story to tell.

Maybe it would only be the usual tale of drink that ruined a career. Or a heart broken by unrequited love. In any event, it would provide a pleasant relief after the dry volumes on European imports I had been perusing at the library in connection with a research job for a Wall Street firm.

GRATITUDE ALL HE CAN OFFER.

"That was some swell feed, mister," he enthused as he accepted a cigarette. "I don't suppose I'll ever be able to repay you, but I'm much obliged."

"That's all right. I was glad of your company."

"Afraid I wasn't much company!"

"True, I expected to hear a story."

"That's the last thing I can offer, I'm afraid. Wish I had some little gift I could give you as a souvenir, but you see, I'm kind of like that man Tolstoy. Never went in for material possessions. And I haven't a thing to offer except gratitude."

"Isn't that enough?"

"I don't know. People want more than that as a rule. Even when the favors are not of your own choosing."

"Personal experience?"

"Yes, in a way."

"Well, here's a story!"

"Maybe.....But it won't be about my fall from some high estate because of drink or a woman. I wouldn't abuse your hospitality with that kind of bunk."

"Shoot—I'm all ears."

"Well, in the first place, I've never had much in a material way. I think if I had a million dollars, I'd get rid of it as quickly as possible. I'd chuck all my material possessions to be free to come and go as I pleased. That's worth more than anything else in the world.

"So, all my life I've been just what you see me now. What most people, I suppose, call a bum. A plain, common bum. Mooching 10 cent pieces for meals and bunks when I can; going hungry and flopping on a park bench when I can't.

"Even when I was a kid, travelling with the circus my dad was in, I bummed pocket money from the rest of the troupe, for the old man had little left after rushing the growler. I can't say I contracted his drink habit, though I take a snifter now and then to warm me up. I can take it or leave it alone.

"What I got from the old man was this wanderlust that may or may not have been my undoing. Depends on how you look at it.

"The old man tried to break me in as a kid acrobat, but I never took to tent work. When I got old enough to put on long pants I skipped off and rode the freights a few years. Sometimes I took a job in some city or farm to tide me over, but more often I mooched my way. Anyhow, I never worked anywhere long enough to become what's known as a respectable citizen.

"I don't talk the way the average bum, as you call him, talks? Well, I've read a lot. I've put in whole days in nearly every library between here and Frisco. As soon as I get a meal and place to sleep in a town, I hit out for the public library. So that's the way I've lived ever since I was 12. Except for a short interval.

"They had a war—you may remember—back in 1917 and '18. I see you've got a service button—you were in it, too. Well, I can't say I distinguished myself. I got hit with shrapnel behind the lines at Chateau Thierry. This sent me to the hospital for five months and took me out of the classification of bums. It made me a war hero. Anyhow everybody around me seemed to insist I was one

"I didn't mind playing the part of hero at that time, so long as it kept me near Ruth. She was a Red Cross nurse in the hospital where I spent my period of convalescence. I didn't tell Ruth I hated the war with all my being because it interrupted my career as a bum. I didn't tell her that I had taken every possible precaution to avoid being drafted, and on that account was rushed into service and sent to the front all the sooner.

HESITATES TO TELL THE TRUTH.

"No, I let Ruth keep on thinking I was one of the heroic crew who rushed to America's defense at the first call to arms. She loved something in me that wasn't quite myself, and as I cared for Ruth more than for any other woman I had ever known, I was disinclined to tell her the truth

"The Armistice was signed, and I was discharged in New York. Ruth was on hand to greet me, along with her parents. The old folks had heard a lot about me from Ruth, and invited me to stay with them until I got settled.

"Ruth's father, Joshua Bentley, wasn't exactly rich, but he was fairly well off. He was a manufacturer of some shaving device and he accepted me for what Ruth had pictured her soldier friend. A cultured young man with nice manners, patriotic, steadfast, and whatnot. Well, this was fun for a change, living in the lap of comparative luxury, and I did my best to act up to the part that had been cut out for me.

"In my neat overseas uniform, sporting a wound stripe and chevrons, I was not an unimpressive figure. Mr Bentley made it plain the second week I was with them he had no objection to receiving me as a suitor for his daughter's hand. He indicated, too, that he would make Ruth the present of a fine home on her wedding day Me he offered to take into his business, so that I could learn the racket from the ground up. Later I was to come into the firm, etc., etc. Meanwhile, I could have the use of one of the family cars.

"This might have tickled some birds but not me. As I told you, I have no use for material possessions. I'm like Tolstoy that way. What did I care for cars and houses and all that rigmarole? But I did love Ruth and wanted to be near her.

IRKED BY ROUTINE'S CONFINEMENT

"The first glamour of being in love hadn't quite worn off. Much against my will, I took the job Bentley offered me. It was a pen-pushing detail in the New York headquarters, and every day I had to turn up in a stiff collar and pressed trousers, a prisoner to the routine the old boy mapped out for me. I made a brave fight, but three months was all I could bear. At the end of that time I went to Ruth and declared my love was undiminished, but I could stand the confinement no longer.

"'I must be on my way,' I told her.

"Ruth burst into tears and went to her father. Old Bentley flew into a rage when he heard that I was quitting him flat and upsetting the plans he had made for his future son-in-law.

"'There's gratitude!' the old fellow bawled at me. I didn't answer, and that made him so furious that he launched into the most abusive tirade I had listened to since the last drunken rampage of my own governor.

"'After all I've done for you—set you up in business—given you an opportunity to work your way into a fine executive position—and eventually become one of the firm! Man alive, don't you appreciate kindness?

"'Mr. Bentley,' I said as gently as I could, 'you mean well, but you're far from kind. Your intentions are all right, but your deeds are not.'

"'You ingrate!' he shok his fist at me. 'If you leave my employ, you shall never see my daughter again.'

TURNS AGAIN TO THE OPEN ROAD

"That last part of it was the only thing that hurt. I hated to leave Ruth, but there was nothing else to do. The call of the road, the responsibility of my pre-war days was too strong.

"I took to the road, became what you'd call a bum again.

"There was a fine exhilaration to the open way when I resumed my travels, but the shadow of Ruth haunted me wherever I went. Several times I wrote to her, and when I worked my way back east after my first trip to the coast, I informed her when I'd be in New York and she agreed to meet me.

"Ruth met me downtown near the Hudson terminal and was plainly shocked at my appearance, which, while no worse than it is ordinarily now, seemed very strange to her. I could see though she still cared for me, and that affected me. For a moment I wavered when she offered to get me some clothes, if only I'd give up the road and settle down.

"'And I'll ask dad—I'm sure if you agree to come back and stay he'll give you a job' But the mention of her father, with his dull, stodgy ways brought back memories that were too unpleasant. I could never bring myself to suffer such an uninteresting mode of existence that old man Bentley and his clan typified.

"'No, Ruth,' I said gently, patting the hand of the only woman I ever cared for, and probably the only woman who ever cared a dot for me. 'I'll never settle down. I love you, but it's no use asking you to join me in my wandering. This sort of life isn't for a woman, and it's the only sort I'll ever lead.'"

A BIG WEIGHT OFF ONE'S MIND

"It's not the sort of life for you either, John. Think of the days to come. And you're not getting younger. Why not give it up before it's too late? I'm sure we could be happy together."

"'No, dear,' I kissed her and passed out of her life. . . .

"Soon afterward Ruth married an ambitious Babbitt in her father's employ. I read a piece about it in a New York paper I picked up in the Denver public library. I don't know whether she could have cared for this person, but no doubt old man Bentley was pleased. And I'm sure he's talking to his son-in-law yet about the ingratitude of the soldier whom he offered to take into his firm, and how he turned out to be nothing but a common bum. . . .

"Well, mister, you've been very kind tonight and I wish I could prove to you I'm not ungrateful. I'd like to leave you something as a souvenir, but as I say, I'm like Tolstoy in a way. Free of all material possessions . . . And I can't even give you a story."

"But you have given me one" I protested.

"I have? And you don't think me ungrateful?"

"Not a bit."

"Well, that's a big weight off my mind." He stood up. "And now I guess I'll be going——"

"Where?"

"The only place worth while. The open road. Free from care and all material things."

He put forth a rough paw and I shook it warmly. At the door he stopped to wave gayly at me. I watched him pass out to resume his journey not without a tinge of envy . . ."

I sat a while thinking about this man "like Tolstoy" until a newsboy came in with the morning papers. I bought one and glanced for my check paid up and went out. The street was deserted, and I reached for my watch that the chamber of commerce gave me back home, to see the time.

IT WAS GONE!

Next afternoon, with Hennessy of the detective bureau, I located the $125 ticker in a 3d avenue pawnshop

Yes, it was true, my dinner guest was "like Tolstoy." He didn't want to be bothered with material possessions. He swapped the watch for a new $10 bill the first thing in the morning!

THE END

Tomorrow: "The Trouble with Grant," by Peter Levins.

"I'm sure if you agree to come back he'll give you a job."

The Oliver 22 Brush Plow

Is built for the toughest kind of work behind the huskiest tractors. The three and five ply heat treated steel beam is 4½ inches deep, the strong, long wearing wheels are waist high; the steel standard to which the big 22-inch base is fastened is 16 inches wide and one inch thick; the frame and beam are rigidly trussed and reinforced; will never twist and allow base to get out of line.

There is great clearance under the beam and between coulter and wheels to prevent clogging. The husky power lift raises and lowers the plow quickly. All depth and levelling adjustments are made easily with two ball bearing screws, easily reached, easily turned.

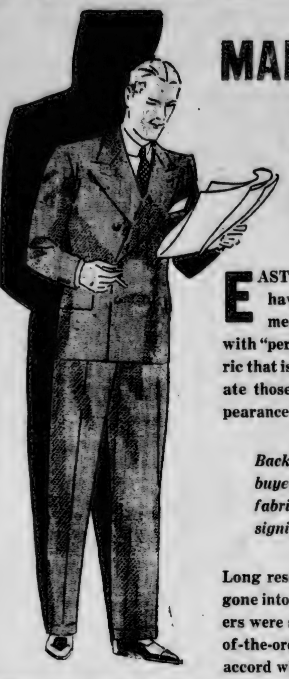
A New Clothing Service at EATON'S



MADE-TO-MEASURE SUITS

At Popular Prices

EAST-TO-WEST the larger EATON stores have instituted a new Service—designed to meet the ever-growing demand for clothes with "personality." Now it is possible to select a fabric that is complimentary to the wearer—to incorporate those details of tailoring that enhance his appearance.

Back of this new service—the knowledge of buyers with years of experience selecting fabrics for men—fine tailoring—expert designing and exceptionally good value.

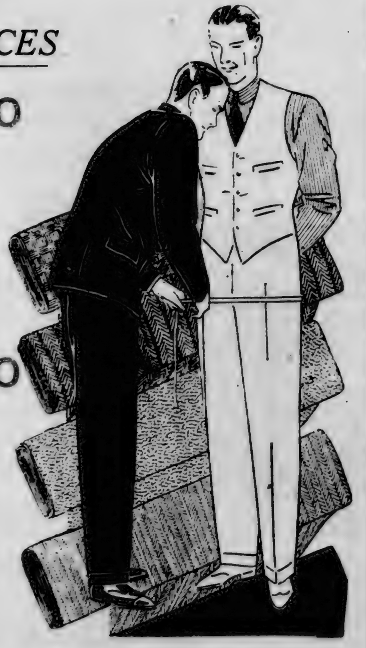
Long research and planning for great events have gone into the preparations for this service. Our buyers were sent to obtain fine materials that were out-of-the-ordinary in patterns and quality—priced in accord with EATON high standards of value.

Choose from fine Old Country tweeds, worsteds and serges—from the weaves of Canadian mills—in patterns as new as Spring 1930. The new greys and favored browns are well represented.

EATON Guarantee

Bear in mind that these suits are sold under the EATON guarantee of "Goods Satisfactory or Money Refunded."

THESE PRICES



Suits at $30

Extra Trousers $8.50

Younger men with definite ideas of cut and styling will welcome the opportunity to have a suit tailored to their own requirements. In these splendid fabrics — all-wool indigo-dyed guaranteed blue serges — imported tweeds and worsteds — new sharkskins, favorites for this season.

Suits at $40

Extra Trousers $10

Famed Old Country mills wove the suitings offered in this group. The selection is very wide, including worsteds, tweeds, whipcords, serges, saxonies and cheviots. The colorings present new and wanted shades — patterns are mostly subdued in effect while plain serges are fast dyed

Come in on Monday and let us measure you for that new suit.

In The Modern Woman's World

GREEN LEAVES

Women's organizations in Edmonton have chosen almost every occasion in the calendar on which to entertain, but apparently one has been overlooked. To date, no notice of a "mothers' day" tea or card party or dance has appeared. Not so everywhere. In Vancouver no less a group than the directors of the Vancouver Women's Building last week issued invitations for the annual commemoration of "Mothers' Day." Hostesses at this affair are members of the women's associations that "mother" public welfare. This year the celebration is to be a guest tea and a number of ingenious decorative effects are being worked out by the various groups.

In this column it was suggested recently that theatrical groups in Edmonton might try something along the line of presenting original plays. A communication has been received from the Dickens Fellowship to remind the writer that the Fellowship does all its own dramatizing, which is no small task, even though the main incidents are there. Besides this, a few orginal sketches have been done. Certainly the Fellowship is doing a fine work along this line, as proven by their efforts of the last few years, particularly the recently produced "Oliver Twist," for which even special music was composed locally.

However, the idea in mind was more along the trend of the newer, modern type of play, such as young playwriters are writing in many Canadian cities, and many theatrical groups, such as in Vancouver, are presenting.

Farm Boys and Girls To Hold Conference

With the announcement of the 12th annual conference of the Farm Young People at the university, June 4 to 10, one is again reminded of the fine work being done by the newer generation of rural Alberta. Speeches given at the yearly contest, and the confidence and ease with which these young people address meetings, the whole-hearted pleasure they take in their sports and social affairs, and the enthusiasm with which they study the various subjects brought before them, gives one some key to the future of the U.F.A. movmeent.

It has often been said that the secret of success in the U.F.A. and U.F.W.A. is co-operation and organization. The parent groups are taking their young people early, and wisely training them in all the necessary branches of leadership for years to follow. Over one hundred and fifty boys and girls attended last year.

Heads Teachers

Miss Kathleen Teskey, M.A., of the Victoria High School staff, Edmonton, was elected president of the Alberta Educational Association for 1931 at the twentieth annual convention in Calgary last week. She follows Miss Edith Patterson of Calgary. Mr. G. S. Lord, Mr. L. B. Yule, Mr. Charles Willis, Mr. Alfred Waite, Mr. G. A. Clayton, Mr. A. J. Skitch, Mrs. Whitehead and Miss Brunnell are Edmonton teachers on the executive committee.

Miss Teskey has been on the Edmonton High School staff for a number of years, and has a broad comprehension of the educational needs of today. She has spent several summers abroad, last year visiting Russia.

Trip-a-Day Tales

A DUTCH WATER VILLAGE

No traveller knows Holland unless he has seen at least one water-village. One of the loveliest is Aalsmeer—famous also for the box-trees grown there. Aalsmeer consists of one long, straight village street—in fact no more than a towing path—with a canal on either side. Small swing bridges connect the houses with the path, and many of them are entirely encircled by water, each one solitary, picturesque, and prosperous. The villagers propel their barges by means of a pole when they take to market cargoes of delicious strawberries and curiously shaped box-trees. They are cut into the shapes of men and animals—looking just as if some enchanter had turned a whole menagerie into box-trees.

LUSSINO, MAGIC ISLAND

All of us have had dreams of living on a tropical isle, dining on fruit and swimming all day long in the blue sea. Who would dream of finding one on the same degree of latitude as Nova Scotia? But that is where you will find Lussino, that magic island in the Adriatic, at the eastermost tip of Italy's domain. The boat from Fiume lands at Lussinpiccolo where are very good hotels and a delightful summer colony. Swimming and lying on the sand is the program for every day; and as for fruit, there are oranges, lemons, limes, guava, not to mention an abundance of less tropical varieties. The panoramas of sea and rock and distant islands are alone worth a trip to Lussino.

VISIT RUMANIA

Everyone knows about Queen Marie and little King Michael of Rumania, but few have visited their land. The best time to go there is between April and June, or between September and November. But at Sinaia and other resorts high in the Carpathians it is possible to escape the midsummer heat, and rates are exceedingly low for such delightful resorts. In autumn, beautiful Constanza by the sea is the best resort. Bucharest, the capital, is a gay city during the season for Rumanians have a genius for enjoying life, and always make sure that their foreign guests have a good time.

GIRALDA

In Seville of Andalusia, Giralda dwells. It is one of the most beautiful Moorish monuments of Spain, a 12th century minaret stretched against the blue sky, and now the shrine of two dozen anointed bells. Giralda is the mother and sweetheart of Seville; without Giralda the city would feel compelled to hide and change its name. The Moors wished to destroy it before surrendering to San Fernando, but he replied that a Moorish head would be cut off for every stone removed. The heads changed their minds. To an American Giralda marks holy ground, for in the cathedral stands the sarcophagus of Christopher Columbus.

SUNDAY IN RUSSIA

Sunday is the day to see Russian peasants, for that is always the big day in every village. The church is usually empty and always in bad repair, but there are mass-meetings, debates, lectures, games, dances, "songfests," drinking bouts, fist fights, in all of which any stranger or chance visitor is welcome to participate. Doors are nowhere and never shut, for nothing is private in a Russian village. On Sunday are exhibits of farm machinery that are being introduced into the remote places of the interior, but while the older people discuss the problems of new Russia, the young men and girls dance togethe noon and all evening.

Girls Prepare To Honor Mothers On Mothers' D

Summer Convention Is Now Big Theme in Club Meetings

(By JENN BLEWETT, Jr.)

The April meeting of the Milk River Girls' Club was opened by singing "Lead, Kindly Light," followed by the reading of the code. The roll call was answered by an Easter verse. The girls are planning to sell one hundred tickets at twenty-five cents each on one of their quilts. Each of the girls is going to arrange the year's program in booklet form, the best of these arrangements to be sent to Mrs J. Macgregor Smith. The afternoon was spent in making crepe paper Easter lilies. Irene Cormier is a new member.

Vulcan Maple Leafs

Six members were present at the meeting of the Vulcan Maple Leaves held at the home of Mary and Doris Brown. The program consisted of community singing in which the girls sang the parts and took turns at the organ. The report of the year 1929 is to be sent to the local W.I. by the secretary. The meeting closed by singing "My Bonnie Lies Over the Ocean."

Sedgewick W.I.T.C.

A record attendance of twenty-six was recorded at the April meeting of the Sedgewick W.I.G.C. held at the home of Mrs. C. E. Blackney. The matter of choosing a convention delegate was tabled until the next meeting. A basketball team has been organized, and the secretary has been instructed to purchase a new basketball. Mr. Dawson, the United Church minister, will coach the girl mothers have been invited to t meeting, at which a Mothe program will be presented.

Lougheed W.I.G.C.

The Lougheed W.I.G.C. will entertain their mothers at the n meeting. The program committee this meeting consists of Bessie Cau well, Mary Chamberlain and M Jones. The girls will sell flowers o Mother's Day. They agreed to help th other clubs in securing Mr. Espedsha for a series of lectures. The program consister of the following numbers: piano solo, Rosetta Scheidecker; book review, Mme. McDonald; vocal solo, Mrs. Proleti vocal trio, accompanied by Bessie Caudwell, Marie Rogers, Luella Harvey and Mme. McDonald. Twenty-three members attended.

A message from Mrs. J. Ma gregor Smith, provincial su visor of Women's Institute G. Clubs:

A RADIO WISH

I'd love to tune into the air,
If I could hear instead
Of jazz-songs just a crick prayer,
Before he goes to bed,
And then I'd tune and tune a tune,
'Till I heard 'way up far,
The lullaby of mother moon
To a baby star.

Two Girl "Hikers" Arrive in Town From Deslisle, Sask.

May Take the Open Road On To British Columbia

Vagabonds who take gaily to the open road are usually of the stronger sex; and who would have guessed that the two slight and light-footed youths who left Deslisle, Saskatchewan on a cool spring evening a few weeks ago were fair of skin, afraid of mice and given to a love of lavender and old laces? Doris Giery and Yvonne Marshal were not at all sure whether they could reach Edmonton or not. The way looked very long ahead and the rate of progress altogether uncertain. Besides, they were lacking in funds. Sick and out of work for several weeks the older girl had felt that if she could get to Edmonton, where she had been in domestic work a few years ago, she might be able to get a job. So together they started.

From Deslisle they walked south 12 or 14 miles to Donovan, and two miles from the town slept in a straw stack all night. In the morning they walked on to a farm house, where the farmer's wife gave them breakfast and a bed in which to sleep until noon, when they had lunch and left for Tessier. From there they had a lift in an old Ford. From then on the journey was a series of lifts, in anything from touring cars to farmer's carts, and kindly hospitality on the part of farmer's wives and friends made along the way.

The other day they arrived in Edmonton, a bit weary, but looking fresh and rather wind-blown, as if they had drifted in with the first spring sunshine. They found the hiking bad in some places, owing to the condition of the roads.

To date they have been unable to find work in Edmonton, and arrived at the Bulletin office on a certain afternoon with a lengthy account of their trip, written in poetry. If they are unable to find work here, they hope to "hike" to British Columbia for the berry-picking season.

Lady Lindsay Hard At Work Fixing Up British Embassy

Many Things From London Arrive For Washington House

WASHINGTON, May 3. — Lady Ronald Lindsay, who will soon be mistress of one of the largest houses in America, plans to spend the hot summer "with her sleeves rolled up." She will be getting settled in the great new British embassy.

With furniture coming over from London, a corps of 16 servants to select and plans for formal entertainments to be made, the wife of Great Britain's new ambassador will have little time for her favorite pastimes, motoring and gardening.

Dressed in brown to match the color of her eyes, the lively and gracious American wife of one of England's best known diplomats sat in the big drawing room of the old embassy and talked of her plans for running the 97-room home of which she is to be mistress.

Sandy, a droll little old man of a grey Scotch terrier, sat at her feet. Plain to be seen Sandy adores his mistress. She has a most direct and likeable personality. She is approachable, friendly and has a sense of humor. "By all means I shall have an American chef," she says. "Will I supervise the marketing and menus? Well," her eyes twinkled, "I don't know, but I like to eat!"

Lady Lindsay says she will bring her own pots and pans, linens, glass and china to the new embassy. Pictures of the royal family are the only articles which will be transferred from the old embassy to the new. Several months ago Lady Lindsay made a trip here incognito to "get the lay of the land."

"I think the kitchen is lovely," she says. "I like having the stove in the centre and the windows 10 feet above the floor. It is a saving in steps and wall space." The big garden interests her most, for she has studied landscape gardening.

EASY PEELING

Hard boiled eggs peel off their shells much more easily if you plunge them into cold water when taking them off the stove.

him over the roof-tops it was even more thrilling.

"After a chase by nine or ten men, the convict was recaptured by a warder who crept along the roof and dropped a rope neatly over his head and arms."

Last June two prisoners, who had escaped and climbed to the roof of Pentonville Prison, remained at liberty for nearly ten hours before they were recaptured.

FUMES SMOTHER BOYS ON FARM

Chimney Chooked With Soot Caused Smoke to Accumulate

Two young farm hands, who slept together in a box bed, were suffocated during the night in their bothy at the farm of Inverbervie, about 17 miles from Aberdeen. The victims were Henry Morrice (15), whose parents reside at Milton, Ardlethen, Ellon, and Arthur Coutts (16½), Mains of Gight, Fyvie.

Smoke from a coal stove is stated to be the cause of the boys' deaths.

The discovery was made by William Clark, the foreman, who went to waken the lads shortly after five o'clock in the morning.

James Robert Barrack, son of the farmer of Inverbervie, said that on the previous night the boys had complained of the bothy being full of smoke. He told them to open the door, and not put on any more fire.

Up till the previous night the pipe had drawn the smoke away all right. On the police breaking away the pipe, it was found to be well filled with soot.

"You have one advantage in being born in the North. You have nice broad vowels, and do not pronounce O's as they do at the B.B.C."—Mr. G. Hudson, adjudicator in school elocution class at Mansfield.

Charming Charity Worker

A delightful hostess and member of Edmonton society, Mrs. Philip Debney spends a great deal of her time working in the cause of charity. This year she has taken over the convenorship of social service for the Diocesan W.A. of the Church of England, a newly created department in the organization. As a member of the W.A. and of St. Monica's Guild she has become thoroughly acquainted with the needs and demands of this work.

Tea Talk

With "delegating" for the numerous summer conventions that will be dotted throughout Canada this year in order, one realizes that spring, as a social season, is practically over, and summer well in sight. Edmonton people who went to the Pacific coast for Easter . . . the H. M. E. Evans', the Chester Roberts', the W. C. McKays, Mrs. R. W. Jones and Mrs. Arthur Archibald . . . are either back or homeward bound. May will be a month of preparation for the longer journeys that feature the midsummer season.

Business Girls Hold Annual Tea

An interesting affair of Sunday is the annual meeting of the Catholic Business Girls, who are following their custom of making the occasion an interesting one socially as well. This year they will hold a tea in the Macdonald hotel, during which the business will be conducted.

May brings convocation, and a number of interesting visitors. Added to the usual excitement of graduation will be the sorority entertaining this year. It is expected that a number of interesting affairs will be arranged by, and for the newly-formed feminine secret groups at Varsity.

Many Affairs Next Week

Tuesday of next week is marked by the annual meeting of the Little Theatre, which will then withdraw from the stage for the season, and of the rose dance of the attractive French club, Les Bonues Amies. The Y.W.C.A. annual supper meeting also takes place on that evening.

On Wednesday, Wesley Ladies' Aid will sponsor a "friendship luncheon" as a token of Goodwill day, and on that day Miss Dodd and the girls of the graduating class are entertaining the staff of the university and their wives, and an afternoon reception, and at a dance. A charity affair of that day will be the supper bridge at weight and took it downstairs to the shop.

NO EXPLANATION GIVEN.

Warne burst into tears as he repudiated the suggestion that he wanted to kill Mrs. Buckton.

Norman Harper (his counsel): Can you explain why you did this terrible thing?

Warne: No, I cannot.

The jury recommended Warne for mercy.

Asked by the judge on what grounds the foreman said it was having regard to all the circumstances of Warne's life during the past year with the dead woman.

Warne took the sentence apparently unmoved.

WIFE BEATS HUSBAND IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

A petition for divorce in which a husband cited his former chauffeur as co-respondent was dismissed in the Divorce Court in London, and the wife was granted the decree of nullity which she sought.

Ernest Edward Evans, a company director, of Milnthorpe Road, Eastbourne, sought the dissolution of his marriage with his wife, Mrs. Violet Annie Maud Evans, of Grove Court, St. John's Wood, on the ground of her alleged misconduct with the co-respondent, Mr. Charles Scott Dixon Geerts, otherwise Scott, a chauffeur.

Both Mrs. Evans and Scott had filed answers denying the charge.

Mr. Evans is 68, Mrs. Evans is 45, while Mr. Scott is 26.

It was stated that both Mr. and Mrs. Evans had been married twice previously.

DANGEROUS WOMAN DRIVER PUNISHED

"I have had my wings grazed so many times that I did not think it necessary to stop," said Mrs. Mabel Lamond, of Grand Parade, Portsmouth, summoned at Chertsey, England, for dangerous driving and refusing to stop after an accident at Windlesham.

It was stated that the police chased her for four miles.

She was ordered to pay $31 37.

Perennial Border Spruces Up

Many of our old garden favorites are now appearing in new guise, and we must study our seed catalogues if we would keep up to the minute, says a recent issue of The American Home. There is a new seedling strain of Astilbe to be had in beautiful creamy pinks and rose color. The new dwarf Anchusa, growing about 2 feet high is vastly more satisfactory than the old sorts. Aquilegia spurs are growing longer, Antirrhinum or Snapdragon appears with new colors and color combinations, while the Hollyhock is announced in a pleasing yellow. The Iris and the Peony are getting better and better, and we simply must throw out some of the old types to make room for the new.

which the Good Shepherd Auxiliary Aid are entertaining in the convent of the Sisters of Our Lady of Charity.

On Thursday Mrs. R. B. Wells will again open her delightful home on Connaught drive for charity purposes, when Robertson W.M.S. will hold a guest tea there.

Speaking of teas the other day, a younger set group were discussing the food as found on most tea tables. "Sandwiches . . and cakes . . and ices," said one of them. "Will there ever be anyone who will serve waffles . . . or hot dogs . . . . or anything different?"

Anything New Under the Candlelight?

It is interesting to note that while the variety of decorative effects and floral innovations originated by many hostesses is amazing, there seems to be little new in the way of foods for the afternoon tea.

The Sunday tea, a favorite with the younger set this season, is usually more elaborate than that of the ordinary afternoon, when men are seldom present. Salads or elaborate ices are then often in view. Simplicity is becoming the ruling note at other affairs, however. Many hostesses have done away with ices this year, and have served sandwiches and cakes and tea only, with a view to dinner hour not so far away. This is undoubtedly a wise habit as the

Despite the heat of the theatre, Barton was wearing a very heavy coat. He appeared very deeply affected through the dug-out scene.

Several women in the gallery fainted when he was taken away.

The manager of the Wood Green Empire told a reporter that the performance was delayed for only a few minutes.

A member of the audience said he believed the revolver used was of the service type.

"The whole atmosphere of the theatre was as tense as it could be," he added.

"A few seconds before the shot, a sergeant-major on the stage shouted, 'Lights out!' and the stage was plunged into darkness.

"The scene was one in a short sketch showing a dug-out in France, and to ex-Service men it brought back terrible memories.

MEMORY TOO MUCH.

"It was all so realistic, and when they started to sing 'There's a Long, Long Trail,' the memory of it must have been too much for this man."

"Mr. Barton was an ex-Service man who had served in South Africa up to about 18 months ago," the landlady of the house where Barton stayed told the reporter. "When he left the Army he was given a post as clerk in the L. C. C., and as is usual in such cases it was for two years only.

"His job did not expire until next October, but I think he was a bit worried about his future. He was a cheerful man until about a week ago. Then he had a bad attack of sleeplessness and he was depressed.

"His wife, who was at the hospital when he died, thinks the tense scene in the dug-out may have acted on his nerves. The revolver he used was, I believe, kept locked up in a drawer at home, but I have never heard that he threatened to use it or that he talked of suicide at all."

Asked if he had brought his wife with him, a defendant at Shoreditch County Court said: "Certainly not. I don't want her to know all my business."

Library Could Be Made Strong Weapon For World Peace

Sir George Perley recently made a most valuable suggestion before the parliamentary committee on international affairs. He expressed the view that a complete library on international affairs should be maintained at Ottawa. Summer schools could be conducted in connection with the library. Students at any university interested in the subject could attend. Doubtless Sir George's suggestion will appeal to the chairman of the parliamentary committee, Cameron R. McIntosh, member for North Battleford, who is taking the work of inquiry seriously.

One possible method of establishing this library would be to enlist the aid of the Public Archives of Canada. Indeed, under D. A. G. Doughty's able direction, the foundation of an international library has already been laid. Since the war, but particularly within the last five years, many valuable documents have been added to the records of the Public Archives. Excellent use is being made of the facilities provided for students, but it should be possible to extend this desired public service to summer schools along the lines suggested by Sir George Perley.

Canada is so placed in the world between Europe and the Far East, in closest relation to Great Britain and the nearest neighbor to the United States, it is in every way desirable that the Canadian public should be better informed on international affairs. Miss Macphail's view, expressed in the House, is that more money relatively should be spent on promoting peace, with less on preparations for war. The munitions of peace must be largely in the form of books, pamphlets and written articles. One source of supply for such munitions may well be maintained in the Public Archives. —Ottawa Citizen.

The Edmonton Women's Peace Group is eager to disseminate information on recent peace moves to the various club women of Edmonton. Each week they will offer some material of interest in "The Modern Woman's World."

By the Way . . .

A smart gown worn by one of the guests at the vice-regal reception at Government house was of black crepe back satin, fashioned on closely molded lines falling to a slight train at the back. The shoulder straps were of brilliants.

Whites 3 eggs, ¼ teaspoon salt, 1 cup sweetened cooked rhubarb. Rub rhubarb through a sieve and add more sugar if necessary. Beat egg whites until stiff and dry. Heat rhubarb and fold in beaten egg whites. Turn into a buttered baking dish and place in a large pan of hot water. Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven. Serve with whipped cream or a custard sauce made with the yolks of the eggs.

average tea guest grows later and later in paying her visit, and four to six thirty or seven is often the duration of the tea which used to be from three until five or four until six.

The appearance of lemon more and more frequently is proof of the growing favor to be found with the Russian custom in Edmonton. In some cases lemon replaces sugar altogether. Ginger, for salads, is growing more popular, one notices, and sandwiches are cut in all sorts of attractive manners. One young girl served pineapple sandwiches at a tea the other day.

"Personally, I'd rather go to Mrs. X's than anywhere I know for tea," remarked one debutante, naming the well-known wife of a university professor, whose home in the campus is marked for its hospitality. "She gives you bread and butter . . . and she makes her own bread."

The Pajama Tea?

Pajama teas are beginning to appear, and one hostess who recently served tea to an intimate group received them in a gay pair of lounging pajamas fashioned after the flowing trousered mode.

SEES CASE RETRIE

Was Proved Innocent Aft Serving Ten Years in Prison

Peter Murphy, of Gateshead, who years ago was sentenced to penal se vitude for life for burglary and a tempted murder, and was 10 yea later proved innocent, witnessed t dramatization of the crime of whi he was accused at Ashingt (Northumberland).

Two men broke into Edlingh Vicarage, near Alnwick, in 1879, a at the vicar and his daughter, a escaped with booty. Murphy and a other man were arrested, sentenc and, later, pardoned.

Actors and actresses made up fro photographs, and the assize cou scene was depicted.

Murphy said to a reporter afte wards: "I try to forget the affair a well as I can, but, of course, I ca hardly succeed."

GOSSIP CAUSES LEVY OF $5 AS DAMAGES

Neighbors' gossip led to the award of $5 damages at Lewes Assizes in England.

The action was one in which Mrs. Elizabeth Emin, of West Terrace, Eastbourne, claimed damages from Mrs. Percy Clapson and her husband, also of West-terrace for slander.

Mrs. Emin's case was that Mrs. Clapson said to a man: "Do you know Mrs. Emin is not married to that old man she is living with," and that a few days later she said to the same man: "I suppose Mrs. Emin won't admit what I told you the other day. If she does not like to believe that, I can tell you worse than that."

Counsel for the Clapsons said it was "a twopence ha'penny story" that no jury ought to be troubled with.

The judge said he had received a message from the jury, asking if they could give a compromise verdict. He told them that they must find for one party or the other.

Half-Breed Woman Applying For Old Age Pension Is Link With Great Past of Canada

Annie Logan's Great-Grandfather United Mighty Trading Co.'s

Past and present clasped hands strangely when Annie Logan, her old and wrinkled hands shaking a little, unrolled a thin yellow manuscript and passed it rather reluctantly across the big desk in Magistrate Emily Murphy's private office in the Edmonton police station.

"Its all right, Annie, I'm not going to take it away from you," she said, in her friendly, reassuring manner. The old half-breed sat erectly in her chair, and the three large safety pins that fastened her ragged sweater across her big frame caught the light and silvered. The reporter, dropping in for a casual word with the magistrate, watched her from a corner of the room. There was something patrician about the nose and the eyes; the firmness of a pioneering people about the thin straight line of the mouth. Well over three score and ten, and in rags, Annie Logan bore unmistakable marks of good blood.

Annie Logan, who recently received the old age pension, is a great granddaughter of the Honorable William McGillivray, Chief Man of the Nor' West Trading Company.

Mrs. Murphy looked up from the manuscript.

"She has brought it to show that her age warrants the old age pension," she explained. "It is the first written Indian lineage in the country, so far as I know."

Annie broke her stolid silence. "Don't want to lose," she said, excitedly, "was made by grandfather, and great grandfather."

Past is Revealed

A call came for the magistrate. Annie and the reporter faced each other across the little room.

"Who was grandfather?" asked the latter, with interest.

"McGillivray. See in paper," she responded, pointing eagerly.

One recalled the Honorable William McGillivray, that great old adventurer of the Nor' West Trading Company, who had been largely responsible for the merging of his organization of daring adventurers with the Hudson's Bay Company, of his son, Simon McGillivray, also one of the most important men in the company early in the nineteenth century.

Concisely enough, the "paper" revealed the story. On a beautiful old ornamented scroll, the first page "Births" recorded these important events in the "Family of Simon McGillivray." The ink that had flown from a gentleman's pen over a hundred years ago was faded almost into illegibility; but the letters were perfectly formed in the fine, flourishing penmanship of a century ago. The great-grandfather of this present descendent does not appear until one turns the page to study the deaths, entered in a neat and painstaking a hand at the beginning.

Baptised by Rev. Geo. McDougall

Under "Deaths" one reads, first, the simple entry, Honorable William McGillivray, on his passage to England, 1824. Buried at Christ church, Piccadilly. For the next link in the family, one turns to the births. The children of Simon McGillivray are listed as follows: Edward, born in 1816 (father of Annie Logan); Cecilia, Mary, Montrose; then Napoleon Bonaparte, born at Rainy Lake; Ann Coolidge, and Susan, born at Great Slave Lake. There follow the children of Edward, among whom is Ann Isabelle, born at Lepier. A further announcement tells one that she was baptised at Slave Lake by the Reverend George McDougall.

Simon McGillivray, one learns, died "one day from Bois de La Revier, June 14, 1840, and was buried at Red River." What might not have happened on that warm summer day, "one day from Bois de La Revier"? One follows, too, the deaths of various members of the family such as Napoleon Bonaparte, who died at Caledonia.

As the lineage comes closer to the present, and the Indian blood is generously mixed in the family, the writing becomes scrawly, uneducated. The final entry in deaths, that of James Norn (a gardener of Annie's mother) who died in 1897 and was buried in Edmonton, is like the uncertain lettering of a young child.

"Marriages," reveal that Edward, Annie's father, married Isabella Fraser, daughter of Colin Fraser. Edmonton old-timers remember the old trader well, as he was a partner of the Hardisty of the Big House at one time. One notices the name Rolland as well — William Colin Rolland, a step brother of Annie's, who, she explains was killed by accident with "paskisekun" (gun) at Slave Lake.

Rowland—another well known name in the annals of western history. One recalls Rowland's Folly, the three story house built by the Hudson's Bay factor of that name in the early days in Edmonton.

Past Lives Again

The reporter came back to earth, and out of a hazy picture of the past, as Mrs. Murphy returned to the room, Historic days and scenes lived again as famous old names which had been household world in the McGillivray family were repeated, and Annie nodded now and then as faint glimmerings of the past returned to her.

Raised in Slave Lake, Annie came to Edmonton as a young girl, and was married in the old fort when she was 19, to a trader by the name of Logan. Once again memories start, and one recalls the well-known old Winnipeg firm of Pritchard, Logan and McDermott, and wondered if one of the founders of this pioneering company of Fort Garry were also linked with the family.

Wedding Was "Great Time"

"Great time," says Annie of the wedding. There was dancing for three days, she remembers, and Mrs. George McDougall gave some of the flour to make the dainties. After her marriage Annie went back to Slave Lake, and then lived at Turnip Lake. She turned Catholic when at Fort Chipewyan the sisters nursed her after she had been badly burned. Today with her daughter Maggie, she lives at St. Albert, poor and alone and forgotten. Of her five boys, all are no help to her.

"Not good," she explains. "Two go to war . . . no good after that." Of the three girls, two died, leaving only Maggie.

Duke of York Boasts Wife Is Real Home Maker

Piccadilly House Is Pleasant Place of Quiet Comfort

By MILTON BRONNER

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

LONDON, May 3.—"I know what real comfort can be given to a home by a wife who is interested in domestic matters."

This pretty compliment was paid to his wife by the Duke of York the other day in a speech he made in opening a domestic science exhibition. And the king's second son was not talking through his hat, because he is the only one of the royal family to have a real "home" in the way Americans understand the word.

His royal parents have residences—Buckingham Palace, Windsor Castle, Sandringham, Balmoral. But they are not homes. They are great gorgeous affairs with armies of servants. The Prince of Wales has his bachelor "digs" in York House, which is a wing of St. James' Palace. His brothers, the Duke of Gloucester and Prince George, live in the residences of their parents.

They Have a Real Home.

But the Duke and Duchess of York have a home just like John Citizen. It is a big four-story stone house at 45 Piccadilly and here they dwell with their little daughter, Princess Elizabeth, most of the year, just like ny well-to-do private family.

Moreover, the Duke had another ason to pay tribute to his wife She a Scotch girl and the Scotch ide themselves on their house- eping and their cooking.

The Duchess of York is no excep . Like her sisters she learned m their mother, Lady Strathmore, art of running a home long be e she ever dreamed of being the e of a son of the King of England d it is this quality, among a lot of ers, which has won her the warm ard of Queen Mary, who believe "homey" things.

hen the young royal pair chose Piccadilly for their residence, the hers at once converted it into a e. The air of it strikes the visitor moment he enters the doorway sees the cosy hall with its fresh ers, its chattering green and red t in a great gilded cage, the pic s on the mantelpiece and the soft aded lights.

d the same tone is maintained very room the visitor sees—warm ing grate fires everywhere and ers and bright chintz on the furniture, cushions to loll back on, plenty of table lamps in convenient places, if one wants to dip into the latest of the better books.

The rooms and nursery for the little daughter of the house were furnished according to the taste of the Duchess. And although the supervision of this department is left to Miss Knight, the faithful "Nana," who has been in the Strathmore family for years, the Duchess knows exactly what is being done about the meals for her child.

So with the general household. Although there is, of course, a complete staff of servants, the mistress of the house is mistress in every sense of the word. No matter how many social engagements she has, she always gives instructions about the general running of the home and discusses the menu with her old Scotch housekeeper and cook.

Looks After Her Husband.

One of her special cares is the comfort of her husband, who is especially interested in modern industry. When he comes home tired from visits to factories and speeches to large assemblies, his wife sees to it that he has exactly the peace and quiet he needs. His meals are arranged to fit in with his various engagements.

It is no infrequent sight after a night engagement or a trip to the theatre or a big ball to see the young couple drive up in their car and let themselves in with a latchkey. There is usually a light meal, which has been left for them by one of the servants in the boudoir of the Duchess. She herself makes coffee in an electric percolator and the food not infrequently includes cakes and scones that the Duchess herself has made in the very modern kitchen she had installed when she took the house.

Edmonton Girl Is Chosen Princess At California Fete

PASADENA, Cal., — In a floral bower, surrounded by a court of princesses, Miss Miriam Louise Cook of Toronto, Canada, was crowned "Miss Canada," queen of 1930, before 10,000 "subjects," at Pasadena, California. The coronation was part of a huge reunion held by thousands of Canadians resident in southern California. Miss Phyllis Burton of Edmonton, Alberta, was "Princess Alberta."

Is Old Sol "MR. PROBS"?

THE next five years may be in many respects unlike the last five years. They may be bad years for the umbrella makers and the rain makers, but good years for sellers of garden hose.

Rainfall may shrink and crops be less abundant. The young spruce tree on your lawn may not in the next quinquennium put on as large rings as it did in the last half decade. The price of grain should go up, but the price of furs should drop, for rabbits should be more plentiful. Whether jack or cotton-tail he is the great food ticket of the wilderness, the raw material of mink, wild black fox and fisher marten pelts.

Further, radio sets should work better and the dizzy blondes should be less dizzy. Both will be less exposed to ultra stimulation by ultra violet rays.

The stock market should not reach the bull heights of 1929. Fewer planes should be struck by lightning and fewer ships go on the rocks through faulty compasses.

It all depends on Old Sol's ability to be Old Probs, that is whether the sunspot cycle theory holds good.

Sunspots, it has been observed, wax and wane in the sun with the regularity of a tide. They are always present, but the sun is not like the leopard. It can change its spots.

The sunspot cycle is about eleven and one-half years in length. For half that time the spots are increasing in number and intensity. For the other half of the cycle there is a reflux in the solar tide. The crest of the sunspot wave was in 1929. We are now beginning a period in which the spots will gradually become less numerous and energetic.

Sunspots are a species of solar erysipelas, a rash and eruption on the face of the sun. They are also gigantic whirlpools often 200,000 miles in width from which like steam from a geyser jet immense clouds of sun vapor sometimes to a distance of 350,000 miles. According to one theory of solar radiation that sunspot effluvium is highly charged with ultra violet rays. The more active and numerous the spots the more plentiful and powerful are the ultra violet rays.

Since we are on the down grade in the sunspot cycle we should have for the next five years fewer violet rays. What does that mean?

It may mean a great number of things. And it is necessary to stress the "may." There may be many a slip between the sun and the earth. This whole forecast hinges on hypothesis.

The guesses, as I found out from a visit to an Ottawa scientist, Dr. Ralph E. Delury, assistant director of the Dominion observatory, are based on some striking parallels between charts of the sunspots and charts of tree growth, bird migration, rabbit mortality and magnetic disturbances. These things may be merely coincidences or they may be cause and effect.

Some scientists are not disposed to admit that the sun's fits of blowing like a whale amount to very much in the large sum total of his effect on the earth. There is a school that believes that his spots and spouts vitally influence vegetable and animal and radio behavior. There is another school that considers his temperamental variations absolutely negligible as a terrestrial factor.

The Sun as a Weather Prophet

IT may be confessed at the outset that meteorologists, the solons and savants of the government weather bureaus, by no means place implicit confidence in the sun as a weather prophet. They are in fact inclined to look upon Old Sol as an old fraud in the role of Old Probs. He may rule the world in a large sense, but at the distance of 93,000,000 miles he is considerably of an absentee ruler and is, to their mind, no master of the little details, such as cloud formations and pressure areas and thermometer fluctuations, that form the basis of weather bulletins. Therefore some weather experts, both in Toronto and in Saskatchewan, have already protested against Dr. Delury's reputed sun worship and meteorological heresy.

But he is no meteorological heretic. He was no Sage of Chatsworth predicting drought in April and snow in August. He did not declare that it is not going to rain any more. He accepted unreservedly that cardinal first principle of meteorological orthodoxy that you cannot with any accuracy predict weather for any substantial period in advance. With true scientific meticulousness he hemmed and hawed and imposed cautious qualifications as a veto against any rash leap into the sun and sanguine and excessive deductions from that sun pulse which is the sunspot.

I was convinced that his meteorological brethren would find difficulty in convicting Dr. Delury of treason to their empiric science. The journalistic brotherhood could with ease denounce him for refusing to be party to a wild and lurid account of an approaching upheaval in nature and reversal of the seasons.

Still Dr. Delury is an astronomer as well as a weather expert. He photographs the sun whenever there is sunshine. He is inclined to believe that its gigantic storms are just as much earth shaking as western cyclones which are infinitesimal in comparison.

"One thing that is generally accepted," said he, "is that the earth's electro-magnetic disturbances and also the northern lights fluctuate with the sunspots. In February of 1892 a most severe magnetic disturbance coincided with the eruption of one of the largest known sunspots that was hundreds of thousands of miles in width and able to hold 70 planets like ours. In September, 1929, the submarine cables suddenly ceased working. The mystery was cleared up when a new sunspot was noted."

These electro magnetic effects gave much probability to the prediction that the static disease of radio would be very mild in the coming five-year period of sunspot minimum. A vigorous discharge of ultra violet rays sent electrons dashing like hail against and through the "Heaviside" layer of the upper atmosphere under the protection of which the radio waves girdled the earth. That electron shower would be less heavy and the heaviside layer would function more smoothly as an earth envelope and radio wave reflector.

"It is more difficult," said he, "to associate sunspot activity with vegetation growth and weather statistics. A great many other factors enter into these matters. Though you have the same sunspots for the whole earth you do not have the same weather or the same vegetation. In Canada last year, for instance, there was excessive rainfall in eastern Quebec, while Ontario and the west were fairly dry. There tends to be more rainfall near the source of evaporation, such as the great water masses of the oceans."

Sunspot radiations could affect rainfall by contributing to the formation of clouds. "The air is more electrified at the time of the maximum spots. Water vapor cannot condense into cloud vapor without a spot of dust or an ion to condense on. An excessive stream of ultra violet rays from the sun should tend to promote cloudiness. Feebler solar radiations should tend to cloudless skies and lighter rainfall."

The next five years should therefore furnish a summer paradise for golfers, picknickers and lawn tennis players. That is if the sunspot cycle runs according to schedule.

AMONG the proofs that it does keep to schedule are the records kept at Montdidier, France, by the Chandon family from 1784 to

With 1923 as a minimum it was reasonable to suppose that a maximum would be reached between 1928 and 1929. It was reached and the sunspots seem to be now on a declining curve and should reach their minimum in 1934 or thereabouts. Of course you might be out a year or so."

This observation of sunspots was nothing new in the world. The Egyptians noted them as early as 2000 B.C. and it might be that it together. The problem has been solved by boiling it first in water and then in paraffin.

He had more modern proof of the relation of tree growth to sunspots. He exhibited a curve of the growth of four spruce trees in the province of Quebec between 1823 and 1927. The rings were wider in maximum and narrower in minimum sunspot years.

"These observations," said he, "are of course of limited range. If you took your tree data from many parts of a wide expanse of country you would strengthen the existing evidence."

Trees naturally were affected by the ultra violet ray content of the solar emanations. That content was twice as great in a maximum as in a minimum sunspot period. The ultra violet rays being shorter waves could not penetrate the earth's atmosphere as easily as the infra red waves. That was the reason why the sun was red at setting and rising. The ultra violet rays did not have the same penetrating power when the sun was at a sharp declination.

"Medical researchers," said Dr. Delury, "have now established the important effect of these rays on growth. It is not surprising that growth should be less rapid at periods of sunspot minimum when those rays may be as much as fifty per cent. less."

Blondes May Be Less Dizzy

THAT was one reason why the blondes for the next five years might be less dizzy. People of fair pigmentation and thin skin were over-stimulated by an excess of ultra violet rays. Brunettes on the contrary may from now on cease to be the life of parties. They would become sluggish with decreased stimulus.

It need not be supposed that we are all going to become as pale as potato sprouts in a cellar. There is such a thing as having too much of a good thing like ultra violet rays. There is a theory that they stimulate bacteria and are the cause of great epidemics. Anyway, the influenza scourge of 1918 was in a maximum sunspot year.

so forth, entering into the question of the great lake levels, but it may be that sunspots have their influence."

It perhaps then is just as well that arrangements are being made to lessen Chicago's larceny of great lake water. In the coming low sunspot years the lakes may need that water.

"What of the Hudson strait?" I asked. "Is there any connection between floes and icebergs and the whirlpools of the sun?"

"It may be," was the reply, "that the more cloudiness there is the less frost there is. It seems undoubted that the straits have been open longer than usual during these last few years which have been years of sunspot maximum. But here as elsewhere there is need for many more observations to exclude other than sunspot factors. Not a great deal is known as to whether polar conditions vary with sunspot conditions."

Weather Bureaus Will Carry On

HE mentioned two phenomena outside the earth which bear witness to the effects of sunspots throughout the solar system and therefore tend to corroborate their terrestrial effect. One was the rate of the melting of the polar caps of Mars. This was higher during sunspot maxima. The other phenomenon was the greater illumination of Encke's comet at the same period. The correspondence of the curve of this comet and that of the sunspot cycle was the most striking of all the parallelisms exhibited to me. Further, Jupiter's cycle of 11.86 years was suspiciously similar to the sunspot cycle of 11.5.

The question, "What are the effects of sunspots?" may seem a hard one, but the seemingly simpler theory, "What is a sunspot?" is even more difficult, although they can be seen with the naked eye.

Dr. Delury defined them as "in the nature of a whorl, something like a funnel or a cone penetrating the sun's surface. The central spot, the umbra, is dark and deeper, therefore a cavity. The edges, the penumbra, are less shaded and there are white ridges in the neighborhood of the spots. They rotate with the sun, which takes about 26 days for its revolution. Occasionally a spot will last several rotations. Sometimes they disappear quickly. They are always in the equatorial belt of the sun, never toward what might be called the poles. It is evident that new spots are continually appearing and old ones vanishing."

There are various speculations as to the cause of the sun pulsation. One theory is that it is due to meteors falling into the sun, but this, presumably an affair of accident, does not seem to account for the regular rhythm of the movement. The sun also takes deeper breaths than these eleven-year cycles. There are other sunspot periods of 60 and 260 years which can explain things the shorter period leaves unexplained.

A greater knowledge of the causes would undoubtedly enable astronomers to predict the effects with more certainty. Still the question at present is what the sunspots are going to do to the earth in the next few years. Will these be short crop and strong sunlight years—years of dust that are inopportune for the revival of the long skirt?

If they put fur on the furbearers will they put hair on bald heads and prove a boon to barbers? What is the relation of the decreasing sunspot rate to the divorce rate? To the automobile accident rate? To the murder rate of Chicago and the number of home-runs in the major leagues or of holes made by golfers in one?

The sun is the great life giver and death dealer. We are creatures of the sun. We live in the light of his countenance and must vary with its vagaries. Sunspots flaring up and dying down, radiating ultra violet waves from their immense solar billows may penetrate every nook and corner of life, may have incalculable influence, magnetic, psychological, economic, vegetational, meteorological, political. Their curves coincide with many other curves. Their secret may be the sphinx's secret. As Dr. Delury says, "The sunspot factor in life deserves thorough study."

There is one sunspot prophecy that can be made with reasonable certainty. That is that the weather bureaus are not going to shut up shop.

I had a chat with the director of the observatory, Dr. R. Meldrom Stewart. He did not have his hat and coat on as if he were leaving for an extended holiday and had nailed to his door a notice, "Not back for five years. It won't rain until I get back."

I saw sunspots photographed. The sun's rays came down the telescope in the observatory cupola and were reflected from a mirror along a hundred foot corridor into the mouth of a thirty foot camera. What seemed like three or four small black flies danced about on the bright yellow discs. Those demure dots were sunspots, the ferocious dragons which some meteorologists think are about to devour them.

No. The sun will stay with his heating and drying and cleaning and will not go into the rain announcing business. Old Sol will not add Mr. Probs to the ranks of the unemployed. The weather experts will still gather their piecemeal data and cautiously and with much misgiving predict to-morrow's winds and rains. Yet it may be that they are merely building their temporary structures on some permanent and internal rhythm of sunspots.

A Good Start

JOSEPH had been sent to bed by his mother for using naughty language. When his father came home she sent him upstairs to punish the boy.

"I'll teach that young fellow to swear," he roared and started up the stairs. He tripped on the top step and even his wife held her ears for a few moments.

"You had better come down now," she called up after the air had cleared somewhat. "He's had enough for his first lesson."

CORONER SUSPECTS MURDER IN KILLING OF WOMAN BY FIRE

Statements Fail to Satisfy Him Regarding Origin of Blaze

MAN SEEN IN SHOP

Mother Aids in Rescuing Children, Collapses and Dies

A suggestion that a fire might have been deliberately started and that, therefore, a woman who lost her life in it might have been murdered, was made by the Leicester city coroner, Edward Fowler, who was holding the resumed inquest (which was again adjourned) on Mrs. Edith Lucy Mills, of Thurmaston, near Leicester, England, who died after a fire on March 20.

He adjourned the inquest on the previous occasion, he said, because statements in his possession did not satisfy him as to how the fire originated, or that everything possible was done to save Mrs. Mills.

CORONER'S GRAVE WORDS.

"You will have to consider the theory of this fire being deliberately started," he went on. "That would be a very serious matter. If a person deliberately sets fire to a house, and one of the occupants dies as a result, the person who started the fire becomes guilty of murder."

The Mills family, continued Mr. Fowler, consisted of John George Mills, the husband, his wife, two young children and a lodger.

The front room had been converted into a hardware shop lit by electric light, without gas or heating apparatus. At 1 o'clock in the morning the husband woke to find the shop on fire and ran to the police station to give the alarm. When he got back his wife assisted him to get the children out, and then collapsed and died from suffocation.

MAN SEEN IN SHOP.

"A cyclist who was going by the shop at 11.10 that night," said the coroner, "smelt smoke and saw a light in the shop and a man bending down.

"There are other suspicious circumstances. Mills was in financial difficulties. His house and stock were insured for $2,000 each."

Chief Inspector Neal, of the Leicester Fire Brigade, said the fire must have been a fierce one, but he could not tell how it originated.

John Shaw, the cyclist, said the man he saw in the shop was Mills. He saw a flame shoot up.

The Coroner: What did you think Mills was doing?—I thought there was a fire in the shop and he was putting it out.

The inquest was adjourned.

GIRL BURNED TO DEATH IN FLAT

Rescuing Firemen Unable to Reach Top Floor Room in Time

A 16-year-old girl named Norah Stevenson was burned to death in a fire in the top floor of a building in Edgware-road, London, shortly before 9 o'clock on a recent night.

She was alone in the flat, where she lived with her mother.

Edgware-road was crowded when a window was flung open, and a girl's shrieks of "Fire! Save me!" startled passers-by.

Dense clouds of black smoke poured out of the window, and the whole floor was seen to be ablaze.

The crowd shouted "Jump," to the frantic girl, while a policeman and two newspaper sellers, John Penn, of Ashmill street, Marylebone, and A. C. Smith, of Lisson road, Paddington, battered down a door and raced upstairs, almost driven back by the choking fumes.

ROARING FURNACE

After smashing through several more doors they reached the roof, where Mr. Cunningham, occupier of an electrician's shop and the two floors immediately above, was using a fire extinguisher with the help of two men.

The back of the top floor was now a roaring furnace, cutting off the girl's chance of reaching the fire escape.

GIRL FAINTED ON TWO FOOT LEDGE

London Policeman's Rescue Called Attention to by Lord Mayor

The Lord Mayor of London directed that the heroism of a city policeman be brought to the notice of the City Commissioner of Police.

He had before him in his private parlor a girl of 17, Norah Nelson, said to have been found wandering, apparently of unsound mind.

It was said that one night the girl climbed out of a third floor window of a building in London street, E. C. on to a stone ledge two feet wide. Constable Joseph Rowe followed her.

The girl fell in a faint on to her back, and Rowe put his foot against her to stop her falling off the ledge into the street.

Then, with the aid of a man who had opened another window, the policeman got the girl into a room.

SCHOOLGIRL WHO RODE ON STEP KILLED

A ride on the step of a motor car was responsible for the death of Miss Freda Mary Sutton, aged 17, daughter of Mr. F. J. Sutton, a bank manager, of Streatham.

Miss Sutton was a pupil at the Roedean Girls' School, Brighton.

A fellow pupil, Miss Barr, told the Brighton coroner that she and Miss Sutton were asked to drive up to the school in the car of Mr. D. R. Barr, a works contractor, of Westminster, who was visiting his sister, also a pupil.

They decided to travel on the step, and as the car was proceeding at a very slow pace the door which Miss Sutton was holding, flew open, and she fell, fracturing her skull.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

JILTED LONDON GIRL WINS SLANDER SUIT

Plaintiff Tells of Broken Romance, Built on False Foundations

QUARREL IS DENIED

Story of 8-Hour Party on Engagement of Pair Told in Court

The story of the breaking of a romance "built on false foundations" was told in a breach of promise case between two of Jewish faith in London.

It was heard by Mr. Justice Finlay, in the King's Bench Division, the girl being Miss Eva Phillips, aged 24, of Watney-street, Commercial-road, E. She claimed from Hyman Rosenweig, a tailor's machiner, of Bedford-street, Stepney:

Damages for breach of promise, certain moneys said to have been advanced to her lover, the return of an engagement pledge valued at $63.75, a gold cigarette case and a camera.

Geoffrey Howard, for Miss Phillips, said that the man, according to the girl's account, "has not only jilted her but has slandered her in the most offensive way a woman can be slandered, namely, by attacking her character."

$250 DIAMOND RING GIVEN

The couple met in 1925 and became engaged in April or May last year. Miss Phillips gave Mr. Rosenweig the gold cigarette case and he gave her a diamond ring worth probably $250. But then she received this letter:—

"Dear Eva,—I have come to the conclusion that the affections we have conceived for each other have been built on false foundations, and it is best we go our respective ways. Hoping you will understand that the future holds no prospects for us, I remain, yours truly, Hyman."

In another letter (said Counsel) he wrote:—

"Dear Sir,—Referring to your letter of the 19th instant, the reason I broke off my engagement with Miss Phillips was on account of having found out certain things concerning her general character, and her disgusting conduct on the last occasion I met her. She knows what I mean."

ENGAGEMENT PARTY HELD

Miss Phillips, giving evidence, explained the engagement party custom, and said that her party — the expenses of which were paid by her mother—lasted from 5 o'clock in the afternoon until 1.30 next morning.

"Before I received the letter breaking off the engagement," said Miss Phillips in evidence, "we never had a quarrel."

Mr. Rosenweig, in the witness-box denied that he had received any of the money mentioned in the claim and that he had made the slanderous statements.

The jury awarded the plaintiff $125 in respect of the breach and $500 for slander. They also directed that the cigarette case should be returned to her, together with $73.25 advanced. Judgment accordingly, with costs.

FOURTEEN SAVED BY BREECHES BUOY

Island Life-Saving Crew Establish Record in Dense Fog

Thrilling rescues by a breeches buoy off Rathlin Island, Co. Antrim, were achieved when the crew, numbering 14, of the Fleetwood trawler Shackleton, were brought ashore after the trawler struck the rocks in dense fog.

Having learned of the trawler's misfortune the island life-saving crew hurried to the scene with the apparatus in a handcart—a journey of five or six miles—in the fog over bad roads and rough country.

They were unable at first to locate the vessel, but after shooting several lines established communication and rescued the entire crew.

A number of trawlers were standing by, but owing to the fog were unable to assist. Portrush lifeboat put out, but fog prevented her from locating the trawler.

The Shackleton is practically a total wreck.

Praise for the islanders' great courage was evoked from the Northern Ireland Inspector of Coastguards on his arrival at Ballycastle. He said he thought that this was the largest number of lives saved by means of the breeches buoy for many years.

The Shackleton, of 288 registered tonnage, was built in 1913 and is owned by the Lancashire Steam Fishing Co., Ltd., Fleetwood.

PHYSICIAN WARNED FOR PHONE REMARK

The doctor who, in reply to a telephone message, said he thought it was "confounded impertinence to ring up a doctor at 8.30 a.m. about a panel call," was warned by the London Insurance Committee in London.

The facts were not in dispute.

The doctor was having his bath when a telephone call was received from the mistress of a maid who was an insured patient. The doctor ascertained that the call was not urgent, and used the remark quoted above.

The Medical Service Sub-Committee expressed the opinion that the complaint had been substantiated, and warned the practitioner that the expression used was open to the interpretation that his attitude of mind towards insured persons was prejudicial to the service, and might, if persisted in, entail serious consequences.

STOCK DEAL PROFIT OF $505,000 IS TOLD AT LONDON HEARING

Efforts to Steal $95,500 by Confidence Trick Charged

THEFT PLOT CLAIMED

American and Another Man Arraigned on Charge of Conspiracy

A story of an alleged "deal on the Rome Stock Exchange," in which a profit of $505,000 was said to have been made, was told at Marlborough street court, in London.

Edward E. Gaynor, an American, was charged with conspiring with Henry Lewis Staines, alias Arkell, to steal by means of a confidence trick, the sum of $75,000 from Frederick Williams and also to steal $20,500 from Mrs. Maud Williams by the same means.

Div.-Det.-Insp. Horwell said that in an office in Regent street he saw Gaynor and Mr. Williams, and heard negotiations between them for the sale of a large quantity of valuable securities belonging to Mr. Williams.

PAIR ARE FOLLOWED.

He followed them to Piccadilly and had them kept under observation. Later he saw Mr. and Mrs. Williams privately and they made long statements regarding Gaynor's association with them in Rome and in London.

He saw Gaynor in the evening and said: "I understand you are an alien I want to speak to you."

"At Vine street police station," continued the detective, "Gaynor produced an American passport, and I wrote a short statement (produced) containing the particulars he gave me, but he refused to sign it.

"I then charged Gaynor, and said it concerned a deal on the Rome Stock Exchange in which a profit of $505,000 was said to be made," added Inspector Horwell. "I asked him to produce a letter he had relating to a bill, and he replied: 'I have no letter.'"

CARD FOUND ON PRISONER.

Gaynor was searched and on him was found a card bearing the printed name of Williams and his address and a piece of paper on which was written "Henry Lewis Arkell."

"I afterwards went to a room at the Piccadilly Hotel and found three mutilated telegrams," said the detective.

In reply to Mr. Myers, for the defence, the detective said there was no suggestion that Gaynor obtained any money. A sum of money was found on him.

An application for this money to be returned to Gaynor was acceded to, but on the case being adjourned, bail was refused.

WARDER LASSOED PRISONER ON ROOF

Thrilling Chase of Escaping Convict at Pentonville Prison

Shouting and gesticulating on the roof of Pentonville Prison, a convict who, it is believed, had escaped from the prison infirmary, thrilled a crowd of several hundred people on a recent evening.

Dressed only in a pair of trousers, and brandishing what appeared to be an iron bar, the man defied the warders for over an hour before he was surrounded, lassoed and led down a ladder to the ground.

A woman who watched the episode said that the convict appeared to be very excited.

"He was dancing and crawling about the prison roof on all-fours," she declared, "and shouting defiance at the warders.

BEHIND THE CHIMNEYS.

"When he saw the warders climbing up to the roof with ladders he dodged behind chimneys, shouting all the time to the huge crowd that watched him.

"At any moment we expected to see him lose his hold and crash to the ground, 30 or 40 feet below.

"When the warders were chasing him over the roof-tops it was even more thrilling.

"After a chase by nine or ten men, the convict was recaptured by a warder who crept along the roof and dropped a rope neatly over his head and arms."

Last June two prisoners, who had escaped and climbed to the roof of Pentonville Prison, remained at liberty for nearly ten hours before they were recaptured.

FUMES SMOTHER BOYS ON FARM

Chimney Chooked With Soot Caused Smoke to Accumulate

Two young farm hands, who slept together in a box bed, were suffocated during the night in their bothy at the farm of Inverbervie, about 17 miles from Aberdeen. The victims were Henry Morrice (15), whose parents reside at Milton, Ardlethen, Ellon, and Arthur Coutts (16½), Mains of Gight, Fyvie.

Smoke from a coal stove is stated to be the cause of the boys' deaths.

The discovery was made by William Clark, the foreman, who went to waken the lads shortly after five o'clock in the morning.

James Robert Barrack, son of the farmer of Inverbervie, said that on the previous night the boys had complained of the bothy being full of smoke. He told them to open the door, and not put on any more fire.

Up till the previous night the pipe had drawn the smoke away all right. On the police breaking away the pipe, it was found to be well filled with soot.

"You have one advantage in being born in the North. You have nice broad vowels, and do not pronounce O's as they do at the B.B.C."—Mr. G. Hudson, adjudicator in school elocution class at Mansfield.

Sir Philip Game has recently been appointed to the Governorship of New South Wales.

FAINTING PRISONER SENTENCED TO HANG

Man Collapses at Leeds While Counsel Addresses Jury

WIDOW SLAIN IN ROW

Jury in Verdict Submits Recommendation for Mercy

A man on trial for murder at Leeds Assizes, in Britain, fell in a fit while his counsel was addressing the jury. The court adjourned for an hour to enable him to recover and he was brought back and sentenced to death.

The man, William Warne, aged 44, a greengrocer, of Baildon Green, Shipley, had been found guilty of the murder of Mrs. Edith Buckton, aged 39, a widow, at her shop in Wakefield-road, Bradford.

Mrs. Buckton was found in an upper room. Her skull was battered in.

TRAGIC STORY TOLD.

Warne gave evidence in low but clear tones. He said he had lived happily with Mrs. Buckton till November, when she turned him out.

On the night of December 30 a quarrel arose. He got up and left the room because of the language Mrs. Buckton was using about his sister.

Mrs. Buckton followed him downstairs to the kitchen and told him to go back to bed. When he declined she threw a 4-pound weight at him and went upstairs.

When he followed she closed the bed-room door. He pushed it open and she fell on the bed and he on his knees.

He hit her with what he thought was his fist, and he did not realise what he had done until he had hit her a second time.

He did not know whether he had hit her with the weight or not, as he still had the sack in his hand. When he realised what had happened he lifted her up and placed her on the bed. He spoke to her, but she made no reply.

She died shortly afterwards and he closed her eyes. He then saw the weight and took it downstairs to the shop.

NO EXPLANATION GIVEN.

Warne burst into tears as he repudiated the suggestion that he wanted to kill Mrs. Buckton.

Norman Harper (his counsel): Can you explain why you did this terrible thing?

Warne: No, I cannot.

The jury recommended Warne for mercy.

Asked by the judge on what grounds the foreman said it was having regard to all the circumstances of Warne's life during the past year with the dead woman.

Warne took the sentence apparently unmoved.

WIFE BEATS HUSBAND IN SUIT FOR DIVORCE

A petition for divorce in which a husband cited his former chauffeur as co-respondent was dismissed in the Divorce Court in London, and the wife was granted the decree of nullity which she sought.

Ernest Edward Evans, a company director, of Milnthorpe Road, Eastbourne, sought the dissolution of his marriage with his wife, Mrs. Violet Annie Maud Evans, of Grove Court, St. John's Wood, on the ground of her alleged misconduct with the co-respondent, Mr. Charles Scott Dixon Geerts, otherwise Scott, a chauffeur.

Both Mrs. Evans and Scott had filed answers denying the charge.

Mr. Evans is 65, Mrs. Evans is 45, while Mr. Scott is 26.

It was stated that both Mr. and Mrs. Evans had been married twice previously.

DANGEROUS WOMAN DRIVER PUNISHED

"I have had my wings grazed so many times that I did not think it necessary to stop," said Mrs. Mabel Lamond, of Grand Parade, Portsmouth, summoned at Chertsey, England, for dangerous driving and refusing to stop after an accident at Winslesham.

It was stated that the police chased her for four miles.

She was ordered to pay $31.87.

CAMBRIDGE GRAD HAD COSTLY GAME

Henry Earle Manisty, aged 22, of Kensington, a B.A. of Cambridge, but not now in residence, was at Cambridge fined $10, bound over for a year, and ordered to pay $50 compensation to a woman.

He pleaded guilty to being drunk and disorderly.

On a Saturday night, it was stated, he was seen staggering along as though under the influence of drink. When he got to some posts near the post office he stopped and said, "Nobody shall come through these posts."

He struck an old man of 60 three violent blows in the face. Then he deliberately knocked a woman's hat off and tore at the front of her blouse and coat so that she became faint.

MAN FATALLY SHOT IN LONDON THEATRE

Tragedy Occurs as Soldiers Sing at Enactment of "Dug-Out" Scene

SOME WOMEN FAINT

Realistic Atmosphere Said To Have Been Too Much For Victim

A revolver shot rang out in the gallery of the Wood Green Empire in London, and with a shriek, a man fell forward from one of the gallery seats with a wound in his temple.

At the moment the shot was fired theatre and stage were in darkness. A scene in a "dug-out" was being enacted and soldiers on the stage were singing "There's a long, long trail a-winding."

The man was Richard Barton, of Harold road, Hornsey. He had been seen to take something from his pocket a few seconds before the shot was fired.

VICTIM DIES AT HOSPITAL.

Attendants at once rushed to the spot, the lights were turned up and Barton was carried out. He was hurried to the North Middlesex Hospital, but died soon after admission.

Despite the heat of the theatre, Barton was wearing a very heavy coat. He appeared very deeply affected through the dug-out scene.

Several women in the gallery fainted when he was taken away.

The manager of the Wood Green Empire told a reporter that the performance was delayed for only a few minutes.

A member of the audience said he believed the revolver used was of the service type.

"The whole atmosphere of the theatre was as tense as it could be," he added.

"A few seconds before the shot, a sergeant-major on the stage shouted, 'Lights out!' and the stage was plunged into darkness.

"The scene was one in a short sketch showing a dug-out in France, and to ex-Service men it brought back terrible memories.

MEMORY TOO MUCH.

"It was all so realistic, and when they started to sing 'There's a Long, Long Trail,' the memory of it must have been too much for this man."

"Mr. Barton was an ex-Service man who had served in South Africa up to about 18 months ago," the landlady of the house where Barton stayed told the reporter. "When he left the Army he was given a post as clerk in the L. C.C., and as is usual in such cases it was for two years only.

"His job did not expire until next October, but I think he was a bit worried about his future. He was a cheerful man until about a week ago. Then he had a bad attack of sleeplessness and he was depressed.

"His wife, who was at the hospital when he died, thinks the tense scene in the dug-out may have acted on his nerves. The revolver he used was, I believe, kept locked up in a drawer at home, but I have never heard that he threatened to use it or that he talked of suicide at all."

Asked if he had brought his wife with him, a defendant at Shoreditch County Court said: "Certainly not. I don't want her to know all my business."

POISON PEN LETTER TRIAL IN VILLAGE ENDS IN COMMITTAL

Woman in Ill-health Declared to Have Admitted Writings

NOW DENIES GUILT

Boy Found Anonymous Note Which Was Burned In School

Mrs. Ada Lydia Hulatt, of Milton Ernest, sitting in an armchair, looking pale and ill, was the only woman in court at Sharnbrook, Bedfordshire, when the hearing of the village "poison pen" case was resumed.

All women and children were ordered out. The discovery by a schoolboy of another anonymous letter since the last hearing was announced.

Mrs. Hulatt, who is aged 44, is accused of sending postal packets containing obscene articles to John King Underwood, a farmer, and George Church, Senior, one of his employes.

She was committed for trial on bail.

ACCUSED'S DENIALS

When the Bench announced this decision, Mrs. Hulatt, without rising from her chair, read the following statement from a sheet of paper:

I did not write the letters. I did not tell Inspector Genn that I wrote them. I cannot give evidence today. It would be against doctor's orders. I reserve my defence.

Mr. F. W. F. Lathom, for the prosecution, said at the last hearing that Mrs. Hulatt had agreed in the presence of three witnesses that she had written the letters.

Mr. R. H. Barrett, for Mrs. Hulatt, stated that she would deny the conversation in which she was said to have admitted writing the letters.

SCHOOLBOY'S FIND

Inspector Genn was now recalled and questioned by Mr. Barrett, who said he had to ask him about something that had arisen since the previous hearing.

Mr. Barrett: Have you heard of an anonymous letter since?—I have. I have had a report from a constable regarding a letter. It was reported to me that it was found by a schoolboy in the school ground, and was later burned by the instruction of his school mistress.

LOOKING AT A BIBLE

Richard Styles, head postmaster at Bedford, describing the interview he and the inspector and another Post Official official had with Mrs. Hulatt, said:

"While the inspector was questioning her, I observed a large Bible on the table. I remarked that I was rather interested in those large editions of the Bible, and asked Mrs. Hulatt if she would mind my looking at it. She consented, and I was looking through the Bible, listening at the same time, and she very shortly admitted that she had written the letters."

Mr. Styles said that he mentioned to Mrs. Hulatt that he also had received postcards and letters of an anonymous and abusive nature, and asked her if she wrote these letters. She admitted that she did.

Mrs. Hulatt suggested that now she had admitted everything all the letters should be burnt, and so end the matter, added Mr. Styles.

Mr. Lathom (prosecuting): When she made that suggestion, was there any suggestion that anyone else had any hand in writing the letters? — None whatever; in fact, she said that she alone was responsible.

Was she in any way bullied or coerced into admission?—No. She was treated with every consideration.

Mr. Barrett (defending): Did she at first strongly deny writing the letters?—At first she denied it, in what I considered a half-hearted manner.

DROPPED ON THE FIRE

Miss Anne Gertrude Hazlett, the schoolmistress at Milton Ernest, said that a boy came into the school with a soiled piece of paper in his hand.

"The children were crowding round looking at it. I said: 'What's that?' One of the children said 'An anonymous letter,' and I told him to drop it into the fire."

VINDICATED MAN SEES CASE RETRIED

Was Proved Innocent After Serving Ten Years in Prison

Peter Murphy, of Gateshead, who 51 years ago was sentenced to penal servitude for life for burglary and attempted murder, and was 10 years later proved innocent, witnessed the dramatization of the crime of which he was accused at Ashington (Northumberland).

Two men broke into Edlingham Vicarage, near Alnwick, in 1879, shot at the vicar and his daughter, and escaped with booty. Murphy and another man were arrested, sentenced and, later, pardoned.

Actors and actresses made up from photographs, and the assize court scene was depicted.

Murphy said to a reporter afterwards: "I try to forget the affair as well as I can, but, of course, I can hardly succeed."

GOSSIP CAUSES LEVY OF $5 AS DAMAGES

Neighbors' gossip led to the award of $5 damages at Lewes Assizes in England.

The action was one in which Mrs. Elizabeth Emin, of West Terrace, Eastbourne, claimed damages from Mrs. Percy Clapson and her husband, also of West-terrace for slander.

Mrs. Emin's case was that Mrs. Clapson said to a man: "Do you know Mrs. Emin is not married to that old man she is living with," and that a few days later she said to the same man: "I suppose Mrs. Emin won't admit what I told you the other day. If she does not like to believe that, I can tell you worse than that."

Counsel for the Clapsons said it was "a twopence ha'penny story" that no jury ought to be troubled with.

The judge said he had received a message from the jury, asking if they could give a compromise verdict. He told them that they must find for one party or the other.

TITTIVATING GIRL BURNED TO DEATH

"This girl was standing in front of a mirror, tittivating herself when her clothing caught fire," said Mr. Ingleby Oddie, the Westminster coroner, at the inquest on Dora Lang Riding, aged 15, of Barrowell Green, Winchmore Hill, who died from toxemia following burns.

She was getting ready to take a parcel out when the accident occurred.

Hearing screams, Mr. Gunner, a publicity agent, rushed in and extinguished the flames, but the girl died in hospital.

A verdict of accidental death was returned.

WOMAN REMANDED IN PRETENCES CASE

Prisoner Accused of Tricking Bank Manager and Barrister

VICTIMS TESTIFY

Claims of Posing as Heiress to Wealthy American, Told in Court

An amazing story of alleged false pretences by which a young woman obtained various sums of money by pretending that she was heiress to a wealthy American, and to have tricked a bank manager and a barrister into believing her was told at Tower Bridge Court in London.

Detective-Sergeant Spash, who arrested Mrs. Joan Crago at Bishop's Stortford, said her husband was a carpenter, and she had represented to him that she was heiress to $100,000.

Mr. Raphael, prosecuting, said the woman went to Mr. Scroggie, manager of Barclays Bank, Waterloo road, and said she was Mrs. Henderson and that she was staying at the York Hotel with her husband on their honeymoon.

CABLE TO MONTREAL

She had found out that her husband had been previously married and that he had now gone off with his wife. She asked if he could tell her of a solicitor she could consult and asked him to cable her father, R. C. Michael, Cedar Avenue, Montreal, Canada, and gave him what she said was her father's private code word — "Knormanac."

The manager was so impressed by her story that he sent off a cable "Daughter stranded. Frank already married. Cable money and instructions. Urgent."

Mr. Scroggie said his wife would be pleased to entertain the woman, said counsel, and told her to go back to the hotel, pack her things, and telephone him when she was ready and he would come and help her to his house.

She then said: "I hope they won't charge me for using the telephone, as I have no money." He gave her $2.50. She went off, supposedly to pack her things and Mr. Scroggie never saw or heard of her till now.

DIFFICULTY ABOUT WILL

On another occasion she went to Campbell Lee, a barrister, of Brick-court, Temple, and said that the American Consul, Mr. Carrol, had recommended her to come to him as she was in difficulties about her father's will.

She said that her father and mother had been killed in a motor accident the previous August. She gave her husband's name as Horace Crago and said that her father had left her $500,000, to say nothing of four houses.

On various occasions Mr. Lee, who believed she was an heiress, helped her. In all he parted with $270.

The prosecution contends, said Mr. Raphael, that these stories are untrue and that the money was obtained by false pretences.

The woman was remanded.

FARMER'S WIFE WAS GOOD SALESWOMAN

Unable to Sell Potatoes Locally Trucked Them to London Streets

If all farmers' wives had the enterprise of Mrs. Watts Clifton, of the Poplar Farm, Long Sutton, Lincs., there would be a change in the agricultural situation.

Mrs. Clifton's husband grows potatoes. He found no sale for them, and they were carted to pigs and cattle.

A friend in London wrote to Mrs. Clifton complaining of the high prices paid in town, and asking her to send some potatoes. This gave the Cliftons an idea. Why not sell their potatoes in London?

Mr. Clifton is an invalid with hip disease, but Mrs. Clifton did not hesitate. A lorry was purchased, and she and her two sons travelled the 100 miles from Long Sutton to London, and soon disposed of their load.

Their enterprise was successful, and now they sell 10 tons a week. In addition, they bring up eggs, poultry and garden stuff, for which they find a ready sale.

Mrs. Clifton was in the streets at Noel Park, Wood Green, serving her customers when seen by a press representative.

"We come up every Monday," she said "and stay until the Saturday. Potatoes are worth nothing at home; last week a friend of ours got $3 for five tons he sent to a London salesman.

BAND LEADER WHO FOUND RICH BRIDE

A romantic meeting in the Highlands between a rich young woman and the conductor of a dance band had its sequel in a wedding at the St. Martin's Register Office, Covent Garden, London.

The bride was Mrs. Florence Barnet-Craigie, of Linton, Aberdeenshire, and Craigie Hall, Jersey, and the bridegroom Mr. Frederick Walter Barnet-Craigie, formerly Mr. F. W. George, of Love Lane, Mitcham.

The bridegroom has recently changed his name by deed poll.

Last summer he was conducting a dance band in an Aberdeen dance hall when he met his bride, the possessor of large estates in the county. They fell in love, and the wedding is the result.

Before going to Scotland he conducted "Fred George's Band," which played at West End hotels.

SWINDLER SUSPECT DENIES ALL CLAIMS OF OBTAINING CASH

Stories of Giving I. O. U For $80,000 and $50,000 Jewelry Told

CHEQUES DRAWN

Accused Posed as Man Hired to Amalgamate Ore Concerns

"He said he was employed by th Standard Oil Company, at a salary of $6,000 a week, to amalgamate i one concern several petrol and oil companies in this country." This remark about Michael Corrigan, together with statements about the alleged giving o an I. O. U. for $80,000 and presents o jewelry worth $50,000 were made a Marlborough-street, London.

Corrigan, an engineer, of Mount Street, who was arrested in Paris, wa again remanded, charged with obtaining by false pretences $24,500 from Derek D. Cannon; a banker's cheque and money totalling $53,500 from Mrs Mary Louise Harrold; and cheque and money totalling $91,900 from Thomas Oswald Noad.

Corrigan denies all the charges.

INTRODUCED BY WIFE

Thomas Noad, now an insuranc clerk, who said he had previously been a partner in a firm of City insurance brokers, said he was introduced to Corrigan at Ciro's Restaurant by his wife. She had met him in 1919 and introduced him as Mr. Cassidy.

"He explained that his name wa not Cassidy, but Corrigan — Genera Corrigan, of the Mexican Army," said Mr. Noad.

"He said that he had used the name of Cassidy in the Secret Service, when he was known as No. 24.

"I met him next in March 1928 a the Savoy Hotel, when he told m he was acting in a confidential capacity for the Standard Oil Company o America.

"One of these companies to be amalgamated was the British Controlle Oil Company, and the R. O. P., o Russion Oil Products, and a third Greole," said Mr. Noad.

Mr. Noad said that Corrigan aske if he would care to take up any shares in the British Controlled Company, and he agreed to invest $3,250, and made out a cheque which was paid through his bank to Corrigan.

"I asked him how I should know that he was a substantial man," adde Mr. Noad, and "he replied that h would make out one of his own cheques to what value I liked. He suggested $15,100, and a post-dated chequ for that sum was drawn on the Equitable Trust Company of New York, Moorgate-street Branch."

Mr. Noad added that on April 20 h made out another cheque for $500 t help Corrigan to send some racehorse to Belgium.

On May 4 I handed back the past-dated cheque for $15,500.

Mr. Clayton, prosecuting: Why? — He told me that his money had not come through and he gave me another cheque dated June 1 for $28,000. This was security against the money he had from me.

After describing further transactions and mentioning that Corrigan asked him to hold the cheque for $28,000 as he had not got his money through from his people, Mr. Noad said,

"Corrigan showed me a card purporting to show he was chairman of the Associated Mellon Group and also plans of oil he had sold to the Standard Oil Company in Mexico.

Mr. Noad detailed other occasions on which he made out cheques, and said that on August 2 Corrigan went to Paris to meet the directors of the Standard Oil Company.

"On September 1 he called at my flat and gave me an I. O. U. for $400,000."

Mr. Clayton: Why? — I asked him why there was so much delay in the formation of this company. He gave me various dates for it, one of which was October 15. For that delay he gave me an I. O. U.

Corrigan told him on December 21 that everything would be completed on February 21.

JEWEL GIFTS SUGGESTED

"As it was near Christmas time he sugested that as he was giving his wife some jewelry I should do the same with mine," Mr. Noad said.

"He mentioned $50,000, pointing out that as we were making such a large amount of money I should be very mean if I did not do so. I bought my wife $48,750 worth the following day.

"At luncheon next day he asked for two pieces of the jewelry so that he could raise some money, as he was going to Paris that evening to meet the directors. I handed two pieces to him."

Mr. Dummett: How much were they worth? — About $7,500.

Mr. Noad said that Corrigan telephoned to him from Paris asking him to pawn the remaining two pieces, because he could not raise any more from his directors.

He did so, and obtained $10,500 of which he gave $10,500 to Corrigan.

Corrigan was again remanded for a week.

PRISONER IS FOILED IN DASH FOR LIBERTY

A determined dash for liberty was made by Robert Watson, a colored man, outside Hendon Police Court in England.

He was being taken to the police van behind when he escaped.

Watson jumped a wall, slipped down a bank and swam across the Welsh Harp lake.

When he emerged, however, police officers were waiting for him and he was recaptured.

The man, who is said to have been living in West Kensington, had just been committed for trial on charges of stealing motor cars at Mill Hill and Hammersmith.

RESERVOIR FISH PUT INTO THAMES

Thames fishermen have learned with glee that some five tons of magnificent stock fish from Bessborough reservoir near Walton-on-Thames, have been placed in the river.

The great reservoir, of 70 acres, which has not been netted for 10 years, has been drained, and skilled men netted the fish for removal into the Thames.

Great quantities of pike, up to 20 pounds, hundreds of stock roach of two pounds, perch up to four pounds, and bream up to six pounds, were netted.

There were innumerable eels and fine dace and chub.

FOR THE YOUNG PEOPLE

FLIP

ALL Winter Betty has been very happy because she had a pet, and a very unusual one, too. Nobody else had one like it. In fact, Flip was famous in the neighborhood and children came from blocks around to see him.

He first made his presence known on a raw, cold day, late in the fall and Betty was home with a cough. She was sitting in her room stringing beads when she heard his tiny voice.

"Creak, creak, creak!"

"What's that?" she asked herself and following the sound went into the hall. "It's a bug of some kind. Sounds like a cricket."

She could not find him that day, but later when Dad, Mother and brother Paul were gathered in the living room one Sunday evening, something hopped down on the hearth. It was Flip.

"Creak, creak!" he remarked, quivering his small wings.

"That's my pet cricket," explained Betty. "Don't let him get into the fire."

They fed him with bread and bits of apple and he sang to them all the evening.

"A cricket on the hearth is good luck, so they say," Hattie the hired girl told them.

"I've heard so," Dad replied.

The only thing that worried Betty was that her pet became more and more used to the family and would walk about on the rugs where he was liable to be stepped on. The family formed the habit of looking furtively down on the floor as they went about, which seemed funny to their friends. But fortunately Flip's favorite perch was on the mantlepiece where he could survey the whole room. He often wandered to other parts of the house and before winter was over he had been all over it, from attic to cellar.

Paul had made great plans for him. In the summer they would get him a wife and raise a large family and perhaps have trained crickets to show their wondering friends. But alas, for the plans of men and mice!

"Ugh, look at that!"

It was a great big spider strolling carelessly over the wall paper, a mean-looking creature with a small body and long legs branching out in every direction.

"I bet he stings," said Jean. "I'm afraid of spiders."

"Well, I'm not," Betty answered, "but I'd just as leave not have him in our bedroom. He's apt to jump on the bed and bite us while we're asleep."

"Don't!" screamed Jean, clapping her hands over her ears. "Please get rid of him or I'll go home. I won't stay with you."

"All right," said Betty, "you just look the other way if you're so timid and I'll tend to him."

She went downstairs and got a broom while Jean stayed and kept her eye on Mr. Spider. When Betty came back armed for the fray, she put her coat over her head and cowered on the bed with her eyes tight shut.

"There! Right over the mirror crawling across the big red rose on the wall paper."

Betty climbed on a chair and took aim. Bing! Her broom came down with enough force to kill a dozen spiders and Betty lost her balance and went bing, too.

"There!" she exclaimed, picking herself up and rubbing her knee. "I bet that settled him."

"Good," said her guest, hopping off the bed. "Hope you're not hurt. It's a wonder you didn't break that mirror."

Betty hobbled to the bureau.

Jean gave a loud scream.

"Look out!" she cried. "He's there! There! Right near your hand!"

Betty hastily drew her hand away just as the spider was about to crawl on it. Her action startled the insect and it gave a sudden leap and landed on Betty's sleeve. It was her turn to scream.

"My, my!" thought the spider. "This is making me nervous." And it leaped off Betty on to Jean, right on the front of her pajamas.

This time Jean only gurgled and tore madly out of the room. At the door she ran into Paul.

"Say!" exclaimed Paul. "What's the matter? Are you being killed or what?"

"Spider!" gasped Jean.

Paul laughed.

"Ho, ho! You girls would yell over a spider!"

Betty was rather ashamed of herself.

"It jumps like anything and I hit it with a broom, so it's thoroughly aroused and probably has its stinger out ready to take revenge," she explained.

"Is it on me? Is it on me?" cried poor Jean. "Where is it? quick! I feel something crawling on my neck."

"It's not on your neck," assured Paul, in a patronizing way. "Get out of here, both of you, and I'll attend to him. You'll scare the whole neighborhood yelling like that."

"No, I want to kill it myself," said Betty, firmly, with flashing eyes, grabbing the broom. "I don't need any boy to kill spiders for me."

"Aw, show him to me and his goose will be cooked," retorted Paul. "You girls give me a pain."

Showing the spider to Paul was no easy task. They hunted all around the room.

"Well, he's escaped into the hall," said Paul. "After all he wasn't doing any harm. Shut your door tight and you'll be safe."

Betty slammed the door and scowled at her friend.

"It's silly to act this way," she muttered.

"I can't help it," said Jean. "I tell you I'm afraid of spiders."

"Oh, Betty, I'm a murderer," he said. "I've committed a crime."

"What?" they both demanded.

"You know," said Paul, "as I went down the stairs I saw that spider. It was on the landing in a corner. I took my foot and squashed him flat. Then I picked him up by one feeler, and— and— Oh, Betty, I hate to tell you this! It's just terrible, Betty. I'll never forgive myself."

"Oh, you superstitious thing!" his sister exclaimed. "You've heard that it was bad luck to kill a spider."

"Flip!" gasped Betty, sitting down on the edge of the bed.

"O—o—o, my cricket!" cried Betty, beginning to cry. "My darling Flip!"

So ended the short and happy life of Betty's pet. In case this story is too sad, remember summer is coming and Betty will soon have another Flip just like the one she lost.

The Spider Leaped Off Betty And Landed On Jean

The Beaver As A Land Builder

IF we could see ahead, we would do a good many things we didn't do; and we would leave some undone, that we were careful to do. For instance, if we had appreciated the value of the beaver as a maker of fertile meadows, long ago this little civil engineer would have been protected by law. He would have been allowed to wear his own skin in peace instead of being hunted and trapped to the point of extinction in order to furnish neckpieces and muffs and fur collars for overcoats.

We all know that a rushing, turbulent stream that goes tumbling over its rocky bed, foaming and hissing, in its everlasting hurry to get somewhere, does very little in the way of irrigation, or watering the country through which it flows. It does not stay in one place long enough to let the banks absorb the water, and more than this, when heavy rains wash the rich soil from the hill sides, it is snatched up and carried away by the current, either to the ocean or some big river or lake. The longer that this is allowed to go on, the poorer and poorer becomes the land along its course. In time, the top soil is all gone and nothing remains but gully-washed hill sides, practically of no value to the farmer.

Now, if something could be done to check the speed of the stream and induce it to proceed in a more leisurely manner, so as to give its waters a chance to filter in the adjacent soil, the stream would lose much of its carrying power and its load of rich silt would be deposited along its own banks, instead of being picked up bodily and carried away.

Well, right here is where the beaver comes in and by its labors corrects existing conditions. You know the beaver is probably the champion builder of dams, and as fast flowing waters do not appeal to him, he spends his life trying to dam them up and thus making them slow up and rest awhile. His nature calls for still waters, first, last and all the time. So he goes to work cutting down trees, throwing them across the stream, leaning lopped-off branches against the tree, stopping the crevices with mud, grass and sticks, until a water-tight dam is formed.

The rushing, rollicking stream finds its way blocked, and there is nothing for it to do but stop and form a lake or pond, with the oval tops of beaver shacks showing here and there above the surface. Now, the quiet waters drop whatever they hold in the way of filtered soil, and in time the lake or pond is filled up with the richest kind of alluvial deposit, with only a shallow stream to drain it. Of course, when the pond fills up it is no longer fit for a beaver settlement, so the colony has to move down below where the dam is and build another and form another pond. As the years come and go this second pond fills up necessitating another move of the beaver population. This is repeated time and again until what was once a swift stream flowing over a rocky bed is now a very deliberate, placid one, moving slowly over miles of rich, level meadow—all the work of centuries of successive beaver colonies.

Particularly in the Eastern States one finds much broad meadow lands along the rivers and streams, monuments to the industry of dead and gone generations of beavers. In some instances, remains of these ancient dams are found buried deep in the soil, silent reminders of our debt we owe the beaver. The busy little builders are gone, their old dams have disappeared, but they have left the country richer than they found it and bequeathed to the farmer level areas that once was hilly and rough. Of course, it took many, many years, centuries probably, to accomplish all this, but few worthwhile things are done in a hurry.

In some of the wilder parts of the United States the descendants of these old beaver colonies are still working, changing ravines into level areas and turning swift, narrow streams into gently flowing ones. It is said that every stream in the Rocky Mountains begins its course by passing slowly through one "beaver meadow" after another, some of them of very large extent. A colony of protected beavers at the head waters of every stream would serve to check the flow, lessen the tearing away and carrying off the soil, and in many ways add to the value of the land. But we easy-going Americans did not realize all this until the beavers had been killed or driven away.

But we are gradually waking up to the fact that we killed the goose of golden-egg fame when we allowed the beaver to be practically exterminated over a greater part of their old range.

But efforts are now being made to re-establish, particularly in the vast Adirondack region, by bringing them from other sections and turning them loose there. The game laws of some States prohibit the trapping of beavers and as they multiply rapidly, when not molested, it is not too much to hope the time will come when every mountain stream will have its colony of workers and when the trade in beaver skins will be a thing of the past. When this country was first settled beavers were common along the streams from one ocean to the other, but now they are scarce everywhere, due partly to the clearing away of the forests along the rivers, but mostly to man's greed for gold.

Here's Hoping

HERE'S hoping everything goes right
And daddy gets his raise,
For if he does we all expect
Some very happy days.

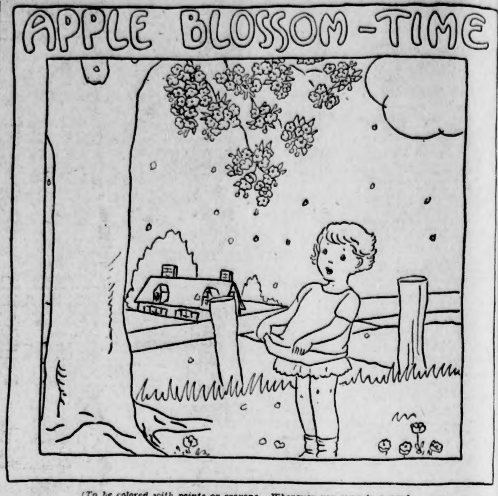
We couldn't go away last year,
Although 'twas mighty hot,
'Cause all the money daddy made
Went in the dinner-pot.

As mother said, we just sat 'round
And stewed with all our might;
The heat was bad enough by day,
But great deal worse at night.

I couldn't buy a bathing suit
And never got a swim,
Exceptin' in that two by four
Old puddle in the gym.

I never once got sunburned like
I did down on the shore—
I feel as if I'd hardly know
Salt water any more.

Here's hoping mighty strong I'll say
That daddy gets his raise
And in the country we can spend
Those good old summer days.



(To be colored with paints or crayons. Whenever you come to a word spelled in CAPITAL letters use that color.)

PAINT the border of this picture a pale GREEN (use it very lightly) and the lettering PINK (use RED lightly).

The little girl has BROWN hair and she is trying to catch the PINK petals that are falling down from the cluster of PINK apple blossoms. There are tiny light GREEN leaves among the blossoms and the twigs are BROWN. The trunk of the tree is BROWN also.

Paint the little girl's frock ORANGE color (use RED and YELLOW mixed) and her socks BLUE.

The grass is GREEN with YELLOW buttercups growing in it and there is a fence. The fence posts are BROWN and the rails are YELLOW so are the tops of the posts.

There is a YELLOW house with a BROWN roof and RED chimneys. The shutters of the house are GREEN. The trees behind are dark GREEN.

The sky is light BLUE and the little girl has PINK cheeks and RED lips.

The HANDY BOY AT HOME
BY CHARLES A. KING.
STATE NORMAL SCHOOL, PLYMOUTH, N.H.

THIS kite should appeal to those who enjoy the lazy responsibility of watching a kite in the air, and who are constitutionally unable to resist the beckonings of a sunny hillside or upland meadow upon a balmy day in May.

In making this kite the longer sticks, 1, 2, 3, 4, should be a strong 3/16" thick and 5/16" wide; these are shown by double-dotted lines. Stick 1 should be 36" long, 2 and 3, 29" long, and 4, 18" long. Number 5 should be 3/16" x ¼" x 6" and 6, the same size but 4½" long. Place these sticks in the positions and angles indicated and fasten them with strong string and with glue or shellac. The same kind of string should be stretched as shown by single lines A to hold sticks in place and to furnish the edge over which the paper covering is to be folded and pasted. Small notches should be made with a knife or a three-cornered file where these strings are wound around the sticks and tied, and the whole joint given a coat of glue or shellac.

Lay thin tough paper, preferably white, face down upon the floor and place the kite frame upon it. About 1½" outside of the string outline of the frame draw a line parallel with the frame and cut the paper. Fold the paper over as shown by the dotted line B and paste it down. Leave the paper rather loose in doing this, the kite will fly better. Cut other pieces, called tacks, about 1½" x 3" and paste them over strings and sticks at C to hold the paper against the frame. The strings D should be left bare, they will not be seen when the kite is in the air. Pieces of stout paper H, 3" wide, fastened to the stick 1 will give an illusion of moving hands.

The face and the black stripes and bars may be painted with water colors. The bridle E to which the string F is to be tied should be so placed that the point to which the string is tied is in the exact center of the middle of the kite and about 12" from its surface. This point should be enough above the center of gravity so that the head of the kite may be lifted about a foot from the floor by the bridle center before the feet leave the floor. This may need to be changed for no infallible rule for bridling a kite can be given.

Perhaps the kite will fly and keep right side up without a tail, but if it does not, which is probable, a tail may be fastened to each foot at G and the kite balanced by the fix and try method. Sometimes a light weight, iron washers, etc., may be fastened to the feet and keep the kite in position.

Habit And The Tariff

BETWEEN "habit" and the tariff there is even closer relationship than that arising from the common habit of paying import duties on all sorts and varieties of goods brought into this country from foreign lands. The kinship comes about through the origin of the words used in referring to the two subjects. The word "custom" comes from an old French word "custume," meaning "habit." This French word was derived from the Latin "consuare," the English equivalent of which is "to be accustomed." In English usage "custom" has come to signify several things, all of them more or less related. One of these is "habitual practice," "frequent repetition of the same act," or "making a custom of anything." From this it came to be used as to the habitual buying of goods from a merchant or manufacturer, or lending support to a business enterprise.

A "customer," therefore, is one who buys goods. In one of the early uses of the word it was applied to taxes, referring, in this sense to "the customary" toll or tax that was collected by a government. In this sense it is found in the Bible in the verse: "Render, therefore, to all, their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due; custom to whom custom." From this early usage its meaning was expanded to make it mean, in its plural form of "customs," all forms of duties or tolls imposed on goods imported or exported. "Costume" is also a close relative of these words, and originally meant "a customary dress," from which it came to mean dress in general.

DANDELION GREENS

The most fun about dandelion greens is the getting of them. With a jolly crowd it is very good fun.

Cut the greens from 1 inch below the ground so some of the white will come up.

Plants that have not gone to seed are the best for eating.

Wash the greens carefully and cut off any leaves that seem old.

This is a very tasty spring dish.
